Mr. E. E. Wendt to Sir Charles B. Adderley, M.P.

15, Fenchurch-buildings, London, E.C.,
18 November 1876.

Sir,

I TAKE the liberty to transmit to you, as the head of the department to which the protection of commercial and maritime interests is confided, the enclosed memorandum in respect of a grievance which the Legislature, at the end of last Session, unexpectedly, and without any previous notice to those most concerned in the matter, created by forcing on the suitors in Admiralty causes a second appeal.

There is no doubt that if means could be found to restore the status quo ante, a very great boon would be conferred upon everybody interested in or connected with Admiralty suits.

I have, &c.

The Right Honourable
Sir Charles B. Adderley, K.C.M.G., M.P.

Enclosure in No. 1.

APPELLATE JURISDICTION IN MARITIME CAUSES.

TOWARDS the close of the last Session of Parliament the Legislature passed, in the 39 & 40 Vict. c. 59, an Act which, by effecting a radical change in the hearing of appeals in Admiralty causes, affects the general maritime interests of this and many other countries most injuriously.

The change complained of is this: Hitherto in causes brought before the Admiralty tribunal in England, one appeal only has been thought necessary, and one appeal only has there been, but now by this Act it is enacted, for what reasons it is hard to say, that henceforward there shall be, in addition to the existing appeal, a second one, viz., to the House of Lords, quite unnecessary for the performance of justice in those causes, and unasked for by all those most interested in having justice performed therein.

Representing in this country the principal foreign underwriting bodies in the world, and perceiving at once how their interest would be prejudiced by this unfortunate innovation, I addressed a letter, on the 29th of August last, to the Lord Chancellor, calling the attention of his Lordship to the following facts and reasons, to which it is now my wish to draw more general attention, namely :—

That at no time, either when the appeals in maritime causes went in accordance with the Act 25 Hen. 8, c. 19, to the High Court of Delegates, or in accordance with the Act 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 92, to his Majesty in Council, or in accordance with the Act 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 41, to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, at no time when the final appeal lay to any one of these varied tribunals had it been considered or even suggested that a second appeal was necessary or even might be beneficial ;

That the fact that this was the case until the passing of 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, was a strong proof of the adequacy and efficiency of the single appeal in such causes, and the absence of any wish on the part of the suitors to have any second appeal ;

That, as a matter of fact, the suitors in Admiralty causes did not want any alteration in the procedure so far as concerns appeals therefrom, and were, on the contrary, much opposed to any second appeal;

That the very Act—the one already referred to—which first clearly throws this burden on the suitors in Admiralty causes, excepts, in its 12th section, all causes in the courts of Ireland and Scotland from liability to review by the House of Lords which had been not liable to it before ;

That it is, therefore, an act of great hardship on the part of the British Legislature to the suitors in Admiralty causes in England to place them not only in a worse position than they have been for centuries past; but also in a worse position than that so reserved to suitors in the courts of Ireland and Scotland ;

That the foreign underwriters, whose representative I am, were all most anxious, and that I was confident the maritime constituencies of this country were so also, to be freed from this most expensive, unnecessary, and cumbersome innovation ;

And I, finally, prayed his Lordship to consider the necessity of obtaining the passing of an Amendment Act to reinstate the procedure of Admiralty causes on appeal into the same position as before the passing of the 38 & 39 Vict. c. 77.

The answer I received to my communication was as follows :—

" 5, Cromwell Houses, S.W.,

" Sir, " 7th September 1876.

" I AM directed by the Lord Chancellor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 29th ult. upon the subject of ' Appellate Jurisdiction in Maritime Causes.'

" I am, in reply, to inform you that the jurisdiction in Admiralty having, by the Judicature Act of 1873, been made a part of the general jurisdiction of the High Court of Justice, the procedure of appeal is now the same in Admiralty as in other causes.

" I am, &c.

(signed) " Henry J. L. Graham,

" Principal Secretary."

Now, it may be asserted that the right of appeal to the House of Lords is not a burden but a privilege. It may be so in some cases and to some extent ; but it is a burden none the less still more frequently and to a much greater extent. The greatest privilege suitors can have is for their cases to be settled as justly as possible, but, above all things, with the least possible loss of time and money. Every extra and unnecessary appeal causes direct loss both of time and of money to the suitors, and is therefore a burden to them ; and in this case, where the appeal under discussion is to the House of Lords, and therefore both costly and tedious, the burden is very heavy indeed.

It must be remembered that the tendency of recent legislation has been to limit the liability of shipowners ; and the accretion of costs will not in any way increase the extent of the remedy to be obtained by litigation.

It is evident, therefore, that those who are obliged to become suitors in the Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice of England have two serious grounds of complaint :

Firstly. That they have become burdened with the great expenses and delays of an unnecessary second appeal to the House of Lords, although during the centuries in which they have had the one single appeal they have never desired, and they do not now desire, any second appeal.

Secondly. That they have been so burdened while such suitors as in the courts of Ireland and Scotland enjoyed the privilege of being exempt from the appeal to the House of Lords have continued to retain their privilege.

It is not maintained that any advantage accrues to anyone by the creation of this grievance; but the only reason which is and can be assigned for it is the asserted desirability of a uniformity of practice between the Admiralty Division and the other Divisions of the High Court of Justice.

It is for this utterly inadequate reason, then, that while every enlightened Government is doing its best to lessen the burdens which are the inseparable, or rather the natural consequences of commerce and trade, a burden so heavy is laid on two of the principal handmaids of commerce and trade, the shipping and the underwriting interests.

The Lord Chancellor to Sir Charles Adderley, M.P.

THE Lord Chancellor presents his compliments to Sir Charles Adderley, and begs to thank him for his letter calling attention to Mr. Wendt's communication, which is herewith returned.

The Lord Chancellor has given his consideration to the subject of Mr. Wendt's complaint, but he does not desire to add anything to the answer already given to Mr. Wendt by his secretary on the 7th of September.

The Lord Chancellor begs further to inform Sir Charles Adderley that he has received no other complaint upon this subject from any other quarter.

The London Mutual Marine Insurance Association, Limited.
For Sailing Ships only.

The Britannia Steamship Insurance Association, Limited.
For Steam Ships only.

17, Gracechurch-street, E.C., London,
Sir, 21 December 1876.

WE are directed by the committee of the above Associations, wherein about 900 steam and sailing ships are mutually insured for upwards of 2,300,000 l., to submit respectfully to you the following considerations relative to the right of appeal in maritime cases coming before the Admiralty Court.

Before the passing of the recent Appellate Jurisdiction Act, one appeal only existed in these cases, and this single appeal, the committee venture from long and extensive experience to think, has been found practically sufficient to answer the ends of substantial justice; but by the Act above named, a second appeal has been created, namely, to the House of Lords. The tendency of this is obviously to increase greatly the delay and costliness of Admiralty suits, and thereby to press heavily upon the shipping and underwriting interests.

As so large a number of vessels are insured in the said Associations, the committee are frequently brought into connection with this department of legal procedure, in collision cases, and they desire to express the hope that means may be devised for obtaining such an alteration of the law, by an Amendment Act or otherwise, as shall restrict the right of appeal to a single tribunal, in the same way as before the passing of the Act above referred to.

Board of Trade to Mr. Graham.

Board of Trade, Whitehall Gardens,
11 January 1877.

Sir,

I AM directed by the Board of Trade to transmit herewith, for the consideration of the Lord Chancellor, a copy of a letter received from the committees of two large insurance companies, again urging objections to the second appeal in Admiralty causes under the Judicature Act, 1873. In forwarding this letter, the Board of Trade, whilst quite aware of the importance of maintaining uniformity in the system of appeals, think it right to point out the reasons which make a second appeal in Admiralty causes specially undesirable.

or Enclosure, see o. 3.

These are as follows:—

(1.) The subject-matter of these cases is one of a peculiarly technical nature, and therefore likely to be more satisfactorily dealt with by a court accustomed to deal with such matters than by the highest court, which must necessarily only have limited and occasional acquaintance with it.

(2.) The decision in these cases depends not so much on matters of general rule or legal principle as on the sifting of technical evidence which is always technical, and frequently conflicting.

(3.) The judgments in these cases must depend in a great measure on the opinion of the nautical assessors; and there is no likelihood that the assessors, if any, appointed to assist the House of Lords, will be in any degree superior to those in the Court below.

Mr. Graham to Board of Trade.

Sir,

House of Lords, 17 January 1877.

I BEG to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th instant, in which, by the direction of the Board of Trade, you transmit, for the consideration of the Lord Chancellor, a copy of a letter from the committees of two insurance associations upon the subject of the double appeal in Admiralty cases given by the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, and point out the reasons which, in the opinion of the Board of Trade, render such double appeal undesirable.

The Lord Chancellor desires me, in reply, to point out that no instance has yet occurred in which recourse has been had to the second appeal in Admiralty cases; and it does not appear probable to the Lord Chancellor that any appeal on questions of fact or of conflicting evidence would be entertained by the House of Lords.

Memorial of the Shipping Committee of the Hull Incorporated Chamber of Commerce and Shipping.

Chamber of Commerce and Shipping,
Hull, 26 January 1877.

To the Right Honourable the President of the Board of Trade.

The Memorial of the Shipping Committee of the Hull Incorporated Chamber of Commerce and Shipping.

Humbly sheweth,

That hitherto the procedure at the Admiralty Court has been that decisions have only been subject to one appeal, but by an Act passed last Session an additional or second appeal has been created.

That, in the opinion of your Memorialists, this second appeal is altogether unnecessary, and would add to the great delay and expense already existing in the settlement of such disputes.

Your Memorialists, therefore, pray that an amendment may be made in the provisions of the Act by which the procedure in the Admiralty Court in England may continue to be uniform with that in the Courts of Ireland and Scotland.

And your Memorialists will ever pray.

Signed by order, and on behalf of, the Shipping Committee of the Hull Incorporated Chamber of Commerce and Shipping.

Ebor* (L.S.). Which said Letters Patent the beforementioned Lord Archbishop delivered as his act and deed to the Right Worshipful the said Granville Venables Vernon then and there personally present in the presence of the witnesses above named. Which said Right Worshipful Granville Venables Vernon accepted the said Letters Patent with due reverence and in honour to the party constituting him, took upon himself the burthen of the execution thereof, and before the Lord Archbishop aforesaid, and in the presence of me, the Notary Public hereafter described, before he entered upon the execution of the said office, took the several oaths following to wit:

Oath of Allegiance.

I, Granville Venables Vernon, do sincerely promise and swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to His Majesty King George the Third.

So help me God.

Oath of Supremacy.

I, Granville Venables Vernon, do swear that I do from my heart abhor, detest, and abjure, as impious and heretical, that damnable doctrine and position that princes excommunicated or deprived by the Pope, or any authority of the See of Rome, may be disposed or murthered by their subjects, or any other whatsoever. And I do declare that no foreign prince, person, prelate, state, or potentate hath, or ought to have any jurisdiction, power, superiority, pre-eminence, or authority, ecclesiastical or spiritual, within this realm.

So help me God.

The Oath required by the Canon.

I, Granville Venables Vernon, Master of Arts, do before I enter into or execute the Office of Vicar General in Spiritualties, Auditor of the Causes and Businesses, and Official Principal of the Most Reverend Father in God Edward, by Divine Providence, Lord Archbishop of York, Primate of England and Metropolitan, and of his successors, Archbishops of York, swear that I will to the uttermost of my understanding deal uprightly and justly in the execution of the said offices without respect, or favour, or reward.

So help me God.

The Oath required by the Statutes of the Court.

I, Granville Venables Vernon, Master of Arts, Vicar General in Spiritualties, Auditor of the Causes and Businesses, and Official Principal of the Most Reverend Father in God Edward by Divine Providence Lord Archbishop of York, Primate of England and Metropolitan, and of his successors, Archbishops of York, do swear that without any respect of persons, laying aside all hatred, partiality, and affection, all thoughts of lucre, I will in all and every article relating to my office taking God for my Witness behave myself diligently and faithfully to the best of my power. And that I will observe and keep the laws, statutes, and laudable customs of the Court, whereof I am constituted Judge, so far as they concern me. And that I will cause them to be diligently and faithfully observed, and kept by all other officers of the same Court.

So help me God, and these Holy Gospels.

And he, the said Granville Venables Vernon, did also, in the presence of the said Lord Archbishop, with his own hand subscribe to the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion concluded and agreed upon in the Convocation held at London in the year of our Lord One thousand five hundred and sixty-two; and to all things therein contained. All and singular which matters and things I have thus faithfully enacted amongst the other Acts of the Consistory Court of York, being thereunto specially commanded and directed by the Most Reverend Father in God the Lord Archbishop aforesaid.

This I attest.

GENERAL REPORT

BY THE

COMPTROLLER IN BANKRUPTCY,

For the Year ending 31st December 1876.

34, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London,
26 June 1877.

My Lord,

I HAVE the honour to submit my Seventh Annual Report in pursuance of Section 115 of The Bankruptcy Act, 1869.

The number of cases administered under the several provisions of the Act during the year 1876 was 1,360 (or about 17 per cent.) greater than during the preceding year, the increase being accounted for as follows:—

Adjudications of bankruptcy - - - - -	11
Liquidations by arrangement (Section 125) - -	753
Compositions with creditors (Section 126) - -	596
Total Increase - - -	1,360

The number of resolutions for liquidation by arrangement or composition with creditors has increased year by year since the commencement of the Act till it has considerably more than doubled; the numbers being 3,651 in the year 1870, and 8,273 in the year 1876. On the other hand the number of adjudications of bankruptcy has decreased from 1,351 to 976, as shown in the following Table:—

Mode of Administration.	1870.	1876.	Difference.	Per Cent.
Bankruptcy - - - - -	1,351	976	Decrease - 375	27
Liquidation by arrangement - -	2,035	4,986	Increase - 2,951	145
Composition with creditors - -	1,616	3,287	Increase - 1,671	103
TOTAL - - -	5,002	9,249	Increase - 4,247	85

Although so many more cases were administered during the year 1876 than during the previous year, a less amount of liabilities and assets was declared, thus:—

YEAR.	Liabilities.	Assets.
1875 - - - - -	25,533,644	7,332,779
1876 - - - - -	20,873,349	6,165,458
Decrease in 1876 - £.	4,660,295	1,167,321

This decrease is, however, chiefly attributable to the fact that during the year 1875 there were some exceptionally heavy failures, there being in that year an increase of 5,396,974*l.* liabilities, and 1,900,931*l.* assets respectively on the amounts declared in the year 1874.

One hundred and five discharges were granted to bankrupts in the year 1876, as compared with 67 in the year 1875, of these 105 only nine were granted on the ground that the bankrupts had paid 10*s.* in the £.

In the great majority of cases in which a dividend of 10*s.* in the £. is paid, a discharge is not applied for, in some because the bankrupt has not surrendered, in others probably because of the protection afforded to the after acquired property of undischarged bankrupts under Section 54 of the Act.

Dividends of 10*s.* in the £., and upwards have been paid in 146 out of 2,875 bankruptcies closed since the commencement of the Act, and therefore, probably, in more than 300 out of 6,334 bankruptcies closed and pending, but only 39 discharges have been applied for in respect of these.

The number of bankruptcies pending on the 31st December 1876 was 3,459, as against 3,191 on the 31st December 1875, showing an increase of 268, being the excess of the adjudications in the year 1876 over the number of estates closed or annulled during the year.

During the year 1876 the trustees of 444 cases were reported to the court chiefly for neglecting, after repeated applications, to render accounts, or to give any satisfactory reason for not rendering them.

In	236	of these cases	the trustees complied before the hearing of the summons.
In	167	cases	orders were made against the trustees, of which 163 have been complied with, leaving four not complied with;
„	38	„	the trustees could not be served;
„	1	„	no order was made;
and	2	„	are pending.

Of the trustees reported 282 were professional trustees, mostly described as accountants, the remaining 162 being for the most part creditors in the matters in which they were acting.

In two of the cases in which the orders of the Court have not been complied with, the trustees have been committed to prison.

Of the 38 cases in which the trustees could not be served, in 7 the trustees are reported as dead, in 5 as absconded, in 23 as not to be found, and in 3 cases the trustees were imprisoned for other matters.

The large number of trustees who, after months of delays and excuses, have found means to audit their accounts as soon as compelled by summons, only proves the general frivolity of the excuses.

The average cost of administration in bankruptcies closed during the year 1876, is shown by Table 8 in the Appendix to have been about 28 per cent. of assets, or slightly less than in the year 1875, indicating merely that a few more of the larger class of bankruptcies happen to have closed during the year.

In 278 estates closed after payment of dividend, the average cost was nearly 23½ per cent., and the assets of 192 small estates were entirely absorbed by expenses, of which the law charges amounted to about 60 per cent.

I have endeavoured by an analysis appended to the same Table, and in former Reports, to prevent the average rate shown in the Table being supposed to represent what has been termed "the average cost of administration under the Act," showing that, but for exceptional cases, the rate of expense would vary according to the size of estates from perhaps 2 or 3 per cent. of assets in the largest bankruptcies to 100 per cent. in the smallest, and that therefore the average rate of expense in cases wound up during any period of time, chiefly represents what class of estates happens to have preponderated in the number wound up during that period.

It is impossible to state the average expenses of a bankruptcy system, the rate varying continually from a variety of circumstances; a system can only be judged to be costly or economical by very careful comparison with some other system adopted as a standard.

For

For several years after a period of panic, marked by an unusual number of large failures, the rate of bankruptcy expenses would be very low, and vice versâ.

Large bankruptcies necessarily require much longer time to wind up than small cases in which a trifling amount of property is at once realised and distributed, chiefly in costs, hence the average rate of expenses during the first years after the commencement of a new bankruptcy system is generally much higher because referring chiefly to small cases, than at a later period when the larger estates are wound up.

If one very large bankruptcy now winding up had closed during the year 1876, the average rate of expenses in all the estates closed after dividend during that year, would have been about 6 or 7 per cent., and in all estates so closed during the past seven years, about 13 or 14 per cent., instead of from 23 to 25 per cent. of assets; so that a bankruptcy system judged by results obtained during any given period of time, might be condemned as a costly failure or approved as economical, according to whether the statistics relied upon were taken just before or just after the closing of even one particular bankruptcy.

I mention these points believing that any disappointment which may now be felt at the results obtained under the present Act arises mainly from their having been overlooked in comparisons drawn several years ago, when the expenses of administration under the Act of 1861 were estimated by those of a few cases wound up in a district court during the first or the second year after the commencement of the Act, and, therefore, so small that the average amount of dividend paid in them was only 92 l. per estate, while in the early part of the third year of that Act, a dividend amounting to 46,360 l., or five hundred times as great, appears to have been paid in one bankruptcy then passing through the same court.

At the same time the expenses of administration, under the Scotch Bankruptcy Act, were stated from results obtained in the year 1863, the seventh of that Act, and in which the average rate of expense happened to be less than in any year up to that date, or in any year but one up to the present date; and by an unfortunate mistake, the expenses of that exceptional year were stated at very little more than one-half their correct per-centage of assets.

Another most important point appears to have been generally overlooked in that and other statistical comparisons, viz., that what are called bankruptcies under one system are not necessarily the same matters as are so called under other systems; for example, cases that would have been insolvencies prior to the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, became bankruptcies under that Act, while many cases that would have been bankruptcies became assignments.

The abolition of imprisonment for debt by the Debtors Act, 1869, also made a great difference in this respect. It is probable that from that and other causes the number of debtors who do not pay their debts has greatly increased, yet before that date there were about 9,000 bankruptcies annually, while there have been only 1,000 since.

About 1,000 have gone to increase the number of out-of-court arrangements, but 7,000, or more than three-fourths of the bankruptcies of the Act of 1861, were of a peculiar class in which dividends were rarely paid, which no longer appears in the "Gazette," and which in Scotland is separated from bankruptcy proper, the law of bankruptcy referring to the distribution of valuable property among creditors, and the law of cessio-bonorum to the relief of the smaller class of debtors.

By Scotch Bankruptcy Law the creditors under a sequestration may (so to speak) degrade it to a cessio if the estate is not likely to produce more than 100 l. free funds for division among the ordinary creditors after payment of expenses, &c.

As before mentioned the cases which were taken to represent a former English bankruptcy system in a comparison with large Scotch sequestrations produced on an average only 92 l. free funds for division among the ordinary creditors, suggesting that most of them were of this peculiar non-dividend paying class.

By that comparison English expenses were made to appear four times too great, while by another comparison which has very recently obtained a wide circulation, the per centage of bankruptcies which paid dividends under the Act of 1861, has been made to appear four times too small.

Statistics taken from Official Reports of the present and former systems have been cited to show that, while dividends are paid in 64 per cent. of bankruptcies under the present Act, they were only paid in 22 per cent. of bankruptcies under the former Act.

But as three-fourths of bankruptcies under the Act of 1861 were of the peculiar and now dormant class before referred to as not calculated to pay dividends, the proportion would be 88 per cent., paying dividends under the Act of 1861, and only 64 per cent. under the present Act; which, however, proves nothing against the present Act, unless it be shown that the proportion of assets given up, to liabilities incurred by the debtors was equal.

Another recent comparison influentially circulated among the commercial classes, but omitting as in the former case to observe any of the points to which I have referred, proves from Scotch and English Official Returns that the expenses of bankruptcy under the present Act of 1869, are very much greater than of Scotch sequestrations, as they certainly ought to be.

The Scotch Bankruptcy law allows large majorities of creditors to assent to deeds of arrangement, or to accept compositions offered by debtors, only after proceedings in bankruptcy, while by both English systems they are permitted without bankruptcy as well as after bankruptcy, with the result that the great majority, and as a rule the best or most amicable of English cases have been dealt with out of court with unknown results.

Scotch deeds of arrangement are necessarily very rare; out of 4,000 sequestrations awarded, only 70 were wound up under deeds during the first eight years of the Scotch Bankruptcy Act, and it is stated that 19 out of 20 of these were merely compositions in another form.

In Scotland, to procure out of court admistration of property as it is understood in England, would require a deed providing that the trustee should continue to wind up the estate as if it had continued in bankruptcy, but should not be required by official supervision to render accounts or tax his costs, and that the results of his administration should be unknown.

As it is unlikely that the signatures of a majority in number, representing four-fifths in value of Scotch creditors, would be often obtained in assent to such a proposal, administration of property is practically limited to open court, and by a prescribed method. Hence, Scotch statistics include the results of all their best amicable cases, while, with a few exceptions under the present Act, English statistics give only the results of a small number of the worst or hostile cases.

During the year 1876 the number of cases in liquidations by arrangement alone was more than five times as great as in bankruptcy, and the amount of assets nearly eight times as large. Hence, by assets, bankruptcies under the present Act represent, or ought to represent, the by far most costly eighth portion of the English system. I have, however, reason to believe that they have been wound up thus far at considerably less, instead of, as asserted, very much greater expense than Scotch sequestrations of equal size.

Again, comparisons of figures, however carefully drawn, cannot show whether expenses arise from the system itself, or from remediable abuses of the system, except when considered with the provisions which necessarily affect expenses.

The Bankruptcy Act, 1861, gave the creditors more absolutely unlimited power to dispose of the property of their debtors as they thought best than perhaps any other known system.

Beside the power to accept compositions or arrangements of any kind after bankruptcy, or without bankruptcy, it suggested for selection by the creditors various methods of administration, carefully adapted to the very varied requirements of different classes of bankruptcies, from the smallest to the largest, and if none of these exactly suited the views of the creditors they could resolve (under Section 110) to suspend proceedings in bankruptcy, and that the estate and effects of the bankrupt be wound up in any manner they directed, leaving questions affecting the conduct and discharge of the bankrupt before the court.

The Scotch system practically limits the administration of property to a paid officer selected by the creditors to collect and wind-up the estate under the inspection of a committee, and this system greatly improved was given in the latter latter portion of Section 122 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and was employed by English creditors under that Act for the important or complicated commercial cases for which it appears adapted.

In the majority of cases they preferred to elect one of their number as unpaid assignee, who could from time to time obtain such professional assistance as the circumstances of the case needed; they did not desire to elect an accountant to charge (as in Scotland) a heavy commission on the very large amounts of assets which in many cases are necessarily realised by a solicitor or an auctioneer.

The improvements under the Act of 1861 consisted in the prevention of canvassing for the post of paid manager by the appointment of unpaid assignees, leaving the appointment of a paid manager an open question for consideration by the creditors, instead of making it the rule in all cases; and in details referring to the constitution of the committees (which by the Scotch system may be of proxy holders, and have, I believe, sometimes included the trustees' or solicitors' clerks or partners), the mode of remunerating the trustee, the custody of the funds, and other matters which leave the Scotch system singularly open to exorbitant charges and other abuses.

The Bankruptcy Act, 1869, provides the Scotch method, amended in some details, and in addition affords by its liquidations (which can be carried by proxies at meetings, instead of by the signatures of creditors to deeds) even greater facilities than the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, for out of court arrangements initiated by debtors.

The fact that a few cases wound up soon after the commencement of the Act of 1861 included none but small cases has been submitted as evidence of the repugnance of creditors to that system, leading them to make every effort (evidently from the first commencement of the Act) to keep every estate that was worth anything from administration in open court, while the fact that in Scotland administration in open court was the rule, with scarcely a known exception, has been asserted to prove the superiority of the Scotch system of administration by a paid accountant trustee.

A repugnance which allowed the Act of 1861 no trial, would seem to indicate a prejudice; no such prejudice was entertained against the popularly recommended Scotch system, yet from the first day of its introduction under the Act of 1869 every effort has been made to keep all estates away from it, with the result before mentioned, viz., that at least 1,000 more estates are annually administered out of court since its introduction than under the Act of 1861, and the aversion of the creditors to the present or Scotch system is now asserted on the grounds formerly adopted to prove their repugnance to the Act of 1861, and their desire for the Scotch system.

It appears primâ facie remarkable that the creditors should prefer the method of administration which is so much preferred by debtors and professional agents, for whatever is gain to the two latter classes is loss to the creditors; but as probably not more than one creditor in one thousand is sufficiently conversant with the merits of a new system of bankruptcy to judge for himself, it is reasonable to suppose that the vast majority are guided by the opinions of those who commonly advise them or represent them by proxies.

If results satisfactory to the numerous creditors interested had been obtained from the many millions of assets which have been administered out of court during the last 15 years, it is difficult to believe that anything approaching to a general feeling of dissatisfaction would have arisen from the results of the few, and as a rule, insignificant cases that have been wound up in open court; but if a general feeling arise that the creditors do not receive a fair share of the property of their debtors, there is no evidence of what has become of the many millions, and attention is carefully directed to the results of a few hopeless insolvencies wound up in open court; their expenses, which (except fees or duties regulated by rules) are those of the professional agents selected by the creditors, are represented as "costs of the court"; and greater facilities for out-of-court administration are suggested as the remedy.

The only reason for liquidation being preferred that, so far as I am aware, has ever been suggested, is, "the expense of the audit by the Comptroller." By Part 7 of Section 125 of the Act, administration in liquidation is precisely the same as in bankruptcy; except that (by Part 9) the provisions of the Act with respect to the close of the bankruptcy, discharge of a bankrupt, to the release of the trustee, and to the audit of accounts by the Comptroller, shall not apply to liquidation but the creditors may by resolution fix the close of the bankruptcy, and grant the discharge of the debtor, and the release of the trustee; and the accounts may be audited in pursuance of such resolution at such time and in such manner and upon such terms and conditions as the creditors think fit. Where, as is commonly the case, the trustee, or some one in his interest, represents the creditors by proxies, he may resolve when and how his own accounts shall be audited, when he shall close the liquidation, and finally he may release himself from all liability in respect of any act done, or default made by him in the administration of the affairs of the debtor, or otherwise in relation to his conduct as trustee of such debtor.

In bankruptcy the accounts of the trustees are audited by the committee of inspection, and the expense of what is termed the audit by the Comptroller, is represented by the mere cost of sending him a copy of the account certified by the committee to show that it has been audited, with allocaturs proving that the charges of solicitors and other agents have been duly taxed, &c.; while the stamp duty on these copy accounts being charged on the amount actually realised, is less than the corresponding duty on liquidations which is charged on the gross value of the estate as estimated by the debtor.

From the difficulty experienced in persuading trustees in bankruptcy to submit their accounts to their committees, and from the imperfect manner in which those accounts are frequently audited by the committees, it may be assumed that in many liquidations the accounts are never audited, and that in many more the audit is of no value.

The returns made by the taxing officers afford clear evidence on the important question of taxation of costs in liquidation by arrangement, and from that evidence may be again inferred how far audit of accounts, disposal of funds, and other matters of equal importance are attended to, unless it can be believed that matters, of which there is direct evidence, are more neglected than any others.

It appears that in the year 1876, scarcely more than one solicitor's bill was submitted for taxation in each liquidation, the one bill being the comparatively small bill of the solicitor acting for the debtor up to the registration of the resolution, and, therefore, that as a rule the trustees do not require the very much larger bills of their own solicitors to be taxed.

As nearly 40,000 l. was taxed off these smaller bills, it is probable that 80,000 l. would have been taxed off the larger bills if they had been submitted for taxation.

In bankruptcy, it is the Comptroller's duty to see that the charges of trustees for remuneration are as voted by the creditors; in liquidation, trustees are required by general rules to submit their charges to the taxing officers.

Only eight bills (or instalments of bills), were submitted to the London Masters in the year 1876, by the trustees of about 500 liquidations, and 582 to the County Court Registrars, representing probably less than a fifteenth part of the amount charged by trustees.

With the bills of receivers, auctioneers, and other agents, about 100,000 l. would probably have been saved for the creditors by direct taxation only, and common sense, supported by cases which have accidently been brought to light, suggests that bills not intended for taxation would generally be very much larger on that account.

Beside the advantages which may be derived from the negligence or want of knowledge of the creditors in these, and many other important matters, trustees in liquidations by arrangement have among them the custody, and, practically, the use of about four millions per annum, and the benefit of unclaimed dividends and undivided surpluses.

Debtors desiring to carry a small composition, are apt to enter as creditors a number of persons who are not really creditors; if a professional agent who is not in the interest of the debtor, carry the resolution at the meeting of creditors, he will refuse composition and insist upon liquidation by arrangement, in order to secure the appointment of a trustee, and as trustees in liquidation are required by rules to reserve dividends for all persons whose names appear as creditors creditors in the debtor's statement, the number of unclaimed dividends in liquidations is probably large.

Under a former system it has been stated that creditors preferred assignments because they got larger dividends; I am not aware that the same has ever been asserted of liquidations by arrangement under the present system, but even if it were so, the reason is evident.

In the year 1876 the gross assets given up in bankruptcies could only have paid 2 s. 8 d. in the £. of liabilities if they had been realised and distributed free of charges, while the assets in liquidations were able to afford nearly 6 s. in the £., so that if the expenses in bankruptcies amounted to 1 s. in the £., there would be only 1 s. 8 d. left for the creditors, while if they were twice as extravagant in liquidations there would still be 4 s. in the £. for the creditors.

The theory of liquidation by arrangement appears consistent with an opinion that has been widely entertained and powerfully recommended, viz., that the creditors should be made to feel that they ought to look after their own interests, but the failure of all systems of unaided supervision by creditors has arisen from their looking too closely after their own interests, and commonly finding that it is their interest to sign a proxy and bestow no further time, trouble or expense on the matter.

Except in the few very large cases, the interests of creditors are too divided and their separate interests too small, and any struggle between them and their debtors or professional agents is almost hopelessly unequal.

It is needless to observe that abuses will occur in any system, but are very likely to occur in a system under which (in liquidations alone) about four millions per annum is received by a number of persons, mostly professional trustees, a small minority of whom are respectable and personally responsible accountants, while the great majority are mere adventurers, whose chief recommendation is remarkable skill and boldness in canvassing for proxies.

The misfortune of the present system is that abuses may occur to any extent without fear of immediate or ultimate detection.

There can be no general examination of the books of a trustee; he is responsible only to the creditors of each estate for his dealings with that estate, so that if he intend to be dishonest, there is nothing to prevent him except the chance that if he make mistakes in a large number of estates, he may be called upon to rectify them in two or three.

It is precisely the same with the disposal of funds; so long as a trustee has enough in the bank to represent the funds of the estate in question, that is sufficient, and so long as he receives on account of new estates or other business enough to meet unavoidable payments in older estates he cannot be a defaulter.

From the number that occurs in bankruptcy there must be in liquidations a large number of trustees who are actual defaulters in small amounts, amounting in the aggregate to a considerable sum, but these matters are not even noticed, and if, as has occurred three or four times within the last few months, very gross cases of defalcation or forgery are reported in the newspapers, they are at most glanced over and forgotten with other police news.

As in each former Report, I have again to call attention to the great increase in number and decrease in value of compositions paid to creditors under Section 126 of the Act.

The numbers increasing steadily year by year have grown from 1,616 in the year 1870 to 3,287 in the year 1876, and the increase has been entirely in the lower rates; the number of compositions over 10 s. in the £. having decreased from 176, or 11 per cent., to 159, or 4¾ per cent., while the number at the lowest rate of all, viz., not exceeding 1 s. and averaging a few pence in the £. has increased by annual increments from 76 to 739.

I append Tables showing the business done during the year ending 31st December 1876.

I have, &c.
(signed) Mansfield Parkyns,
The Comptroller in Bankruptcy.

To the Right Hon.
The Lord High Chancellor.

BANKRUPTCY ACT AMENDMENT.

RETURN to an Address of the Honourable The House of Commons, dated 20 March 1877;—for,

"COPY of a REPORT to the LORD CHANCELLOR of a COMMITTEE appointed to consider the WORKING of the BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1869."

BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1869.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 28 July 1875.

IN compliance with your Lordship's desire, we have considered whether, having regard to the experience now obtained of the working of the Bankruptcy Act, any and what changes, either through the medium of legislation or orders, may advantageously be made in the details of the present system, and beg leave to report as follows.

Knowing the great diversity of opinion which exists upon the Law of Bankruptcy, we thought it right to invite, through the public press, communications from those whose experience enabled them to assist us, by calling our attention to any defects which may have been found in practice, either in the law, or in the mode of its administration.

Our inquiries have been received with favour, and answered with care and candour, and in some instances very elaborate statements have been forwarded to us; and we have thus had brought before us the various opinions of public bodies (including the Council of the Associated Chambers of Commerce), and also of legal practitioners and others, upon the working of the present law.

We find a general concurrence of opinion that the Act of 1869 has not, in its working, satisfied the expectations of the public, inasmuch as it affords great facilities for a debtor to relieve himself of his liabilities, while there is great extravagance in administering and long delay in winding up estates.

We have grouped under separate heads the most prominent of the existing defects, and beg leave to offer certain suggestions which we think will, to some extent, remove them.

Proxies.

The special policy of the Act of 1869 was to give creditors the right to administer its provisions with the least possible official assistance.

In the few cases where this almost exclusive authority has been prudently and diligently exercised, the working of the Act of 1869 has not been unsatisfactory.

The power of the creditors is necessarily to a great extent exercised by proxy, and we find their carelessness in delegating authority has led to great abuses.

A proxy generally authorises the holder to vote upon questions of conduct as well as of administration, at any meeting throughout the bankruptcy or liquidation. As a proxy may be given to any person whomsoever, and in whatever interest acting, it is too frequently obtained by a person acting in his own interest or in that of the debtor.

We are informed that, in a certain class of cases, it is the common practice for proxies to be held by persons who, at the meeting, apparently represent the views of independent creditors, but who are in reality paid or retained by the debtor or the candidate for the trusteeship; and that wherever there are assets out of which heavy costs may be paid, there is much canvassing, and what has been commonly called "touting," for proxies. Proxies are, it is also said, often bought and sold, where required to turn the scale in favour of some resolution.

It happens, not occasionally, but so frequently as almost to form the rule, that a stranger, so far as appears upon the face of the proceedings, is enabled, by the proxies he has obtained, to vote himself trustee, to fix his own remuneration, to nominate the committee of inspection, to order the payment of his costs, and finally to vote, in liquidation cases, the debtor's discharge.

We report, both upon our own experience and upon the information we have collected, that nearly all the evils which have led to so much dissatisfaction with the working of the Act of 1869 can be traced to the direct or indirect effect of the proxy system, and that in our opinion no effectual check can be given to these evils so long as remunerative employment is the prize for which proxies can be used.

With the view of modifying these evils we recommend :—

That instead of the trustee being appointed by the creditors, he should be appointed by the committee of inspection, and hold his office at their pleasure.

That restrictions should be placed upon the grant of proxies by creditors resident within a reasonable distance of the place of meeting.

That for the purpose of voting at any first meeting of creditors no proxy shall (in the case of any creditor resident in England) be appointed prior to the date of the preliminary meeting of creditors, where such preliminary meeting is held as hereinafter recommended ; and for the purpose of enforcing this, the appointment of proxy should be made in the creditor's affidavit of debt. Any such affidavit (the jurat whereto bears date prior to the date of the preliminary meeting) should be received as an affidavit of debt only, and any appointment of proxy contained therein should be absolutely void.

Initiation of Proceedings.

Proceedings in bankruptcy are now commenced by the action of an individual creditor, who, in most cases, knows nothing of his fellow-creditors, nor does he act for or in concert with them.

By the proceeding of such single creditor a dilatory and an expensive contest is sometimes carried on as to whether or not adjudication of bankruptcy shall be made, and the adjudication is often set aside by the action of the body of creditors, as soon as they can exercise the provisions of Section 28 of the statute.

It is reversing the proper order of events to provide that an adjudication should be made in the first instance, and the conduct of the debtor be inquired into afterwards. The result of the inquiry may be, and often is, to find the debtor to be undeserving the stigma of bankruptcy which has been already cast upon him.

Whilst preventing the hasty judgment, upon uncertain information, by which it sometimes happens a debtor seeking liquidation is forced into bankruptcy, or, as more frequently happens, a fraudulent debtor is discharged by vote at the first meeting, we think it would be proper to preserve to the creditors the right to consider, after full and accurate information has been laid before them, the conduct of the debtor and his right to his discharge.

We therefore think it desirable that the present mode of instituting proceedings, whether in bankruptcy or liquidation, should be altered, so that the first order of the court, whether upon the petition of a creditor or a debtor, should be limited in its operation to the possession and administration of property, and should not, in the first instance, affect the personal status of the debtor, and that it should be left to a subsequent stage of the proceedings for the creditors, at a meeting to be held for that purpose, to determine whether or not the debtor should be publicly adjudicated bankrupt.

We beg leave to state that, by limiting the order of the court in the first instance to the administration of the debtor's property, the system, if thought desirable, could be applied to the estates of deceased persons whose assets are insufficient to pay their debts in full. We think the estates of deceased insolvents should be so administered, particularly as by Section 25 of the Judicature Act the rules in Bankruptcy and not in Chancery are to prevail in the administration of such estates. We further think that the creditor of a deceased debtor should have power to interpose in the realisation and management of the estate.

It is also found in practice that in large mercantile cases, where some only of the partners are residents in England, much delay and inconvenience are occasioned sioned because, although the firm has notoriously suspended payment, no administration of its joint estate can be ordered. Inasmuch as the system we recommend does not primarily interfere with the status of the debtor, we think the court in London should in such cases have power to order administration when it has been proved to its satisfaction that the firm is unable to pay its debts.

If our recommendations are followed, Sections 125, 126, and 127 of the Act should be repealed.

For the purpose of carrying into effect the above recommendation, we beg leave to submit that the following procedure should be substituted for that which prevails in bankruptcy, liquidation, or composition :—

On a Creditor's Petition.

No proceedings should be taken on a creditor's petition until ex parte proof be given of the sufficiency of the creditor's debt, of the act of bankruptcy, and (where necessary) of the trading.

Upon such proof the court should, where the trading has been proved, make an order nisi for the administration of the estate, for staying all proceedings against the debtor, and for appointing its prescribed officer, the receiver, who should only take possession of the debtor's property where the court so orders.

The order nisi should be served on the debtor, and should give him seven days to show why the order of administration should not be revoked.

Where trading has not been alleged or proved, no order nisi should be made, but the petition should be served and dealt with, as hitherto, under the Act of 1869.

Where a debtor shows to the court that the grounds stated in the petition are not sufficient to support the order of administration, the petition should be dismissed, and in the case of a trader, the order nisi should be revoked.

Where the trader-debtor fails to show cause against the order nisi, or the non-trader against the petition, an absolute order for administration should be made forthwith, and in the case of a non-trader, the prescribed officer should be appointed receiver (as in the case of an order nisi), and all proceedings should be stayed.

Upon an absolute order of administration being made, the debtor should within seven days of its date, or within such time as the court should allow, file a list of his creditors, duly verified upon oath to the best of his belief, showing which of the creditors are unsecured and which secured, and the supposed values of their securities, and the amount proveable after deducting such value.

In the event of the debtor not filing the before-mentioned list within the time allowed for the purpose, he should be adjudicated bankrupt, and the adjudication be gazetted.

It is believed that none but wilfully absent or contumacious debtors would fail to file such list of creditors.

On a Debtor's Petition.

A debtor should be at liberty to petition for administration, and thereupon the court should make an absolute order for administration of his estate, for staying all proceedings against him, and for appointing the prescribed officer the receiver.

After an absolute order of administration is made, the proceedings should be the same on a debtor's as on a creditor's petition.

Proceedings between Order of Administration and First Meeting.

Complaint has often been made by creditors of the want of authority to manage the affairs of their debtor in the interim between the institution of the proceedings and the appointment of a trustee, and also of their want of means of communicating with each other and of promptly consulting together on their common interests. With the view of enabling the creditors to discuss their debtor's affairs, and to acquire information as to the estate, we propose that where the debtor has filed a list of his creditors a non-official meeting, preliminary to the first meeting in court, should be called by the same notice as that by which the first meeting is summoned; and that the five creditors resident in England by whom the largest amounts appear to be proveable (excluding creditors whose securities appear to amount to 50 per cent. of their debts) should be entitled to act as a provisional committee up to the time of the first meeting.

If, upon due cause shown, the court should be satisfied that it would be injurious to the interests of the creditors to delay the de-vesting of the debtor's property until the first meeting of creditors, the court should have power by special order to appoint a trustee to hold office (to be the prescribed officer except the court otherwise order) until the appointment of a trustee by the committee of inspection, and the property of the debtor should immediately vest in such trustee.

First Meeting.

Where the debtor has not been adjudicated bankrupt, the first meeting of creditors should be held at a private sitting of the court.

Where there has been an adjudication the meeting should be public.

Where a list has been filed, it should be called by notice sent to each creditor, as well as by advertisement.

At the first meeting of creditors in court, creditors should prove their debts, and the committee of inspection should be appointed by the votes of the creditors proving at such meeting, or by those of agents having power to prove debts.

The committee of inspection should have power to continue the receivership by the prescribed officer, pending the consideration of any offer of composition which might be forthcoming, or they should appoint a trustee in whom the property should vest as at present.

In default of such appointment in manner prescribed, or if the committee of inspection shall so desire, the prescribed officer of the court shall be appointed such trustee.

The court should have power to reject any person whom it shall deem unfit to exercise the office of committeeman or trustee.

The debts to be proved at the first meeting in court should be those for which the bankrupt is primarily liable, and such other liquidated demands as should have become due at the date of the order of adjudication. Other maturing claims (such as upon current bills of exchange upon which the bankrupt is drawer or endorser) should be allowed to be entered as claims at the first meeting, and subsequently to be proved as of that date, so as to entitle the holders to all rights of ranking for dividend which they now possess.

Second Meeting.

At a period of not less than one nor more than two months from the first meeting, or if a scheme of composition or arrangement be pending, at such time as the court should order, a second meeting should be held, at which the trustee should report upon the debtor's affairs; and where bankruptcy has not been already adjudicated, as in case of contumacy or absconding, the creditors should at that meeting have power, either—

1st. By special resolution to vote the debtor his discharge, either absolutely or subject to conditions;

2nd. By special resolution to vote that he be declared publicly bankrupt.

Discharge of Debtor by Creditors.

If at the second meeting the creditors resolve to grant the debtor his discharge, the resolution should, before the same becomes binding, be signed by such further creditors as with those voting at the meeting shall form a majority representing three-fourths in number and value of all the debtor's creditors. Where, by reason of residence abroad or otherwise, the views of such creditors cannot be obtained within a reasonable time, the court should order such creditors to be excluded from the list for the purpose of the calculation of the majority.

Subject to the approval of the court, full power should be given to creditors, either either at their second or any other meeting, specially convened for that purpose, to resolve by special resolution to wind up the debtor's estate by deed of arrangement or composition.

Provided that a majority in number representing three-fourths in value of the creditors, whether present at a meeting or not, should concur in the deed (in manner to be prescribed) before it is submitted to the court for approval; and to prevent holders of current bills, discounted, from outvoting the direct creditors of the debtor, such majority of the gross creditors should include a majority representing three-fourths in value of those creditors only who would be entitled to vote at the first meeting in court. The provisions we hereafter recommend for the official audit and ultimate receivership of unclaimed dividends and undivided estate should be equally applicable to deeds as to all other administrations.

Discharge of Debtor by Court.

Where the debtor's discharge is not voted at the second meeting, or is voted upon conditions which have not been complied with, the court should have power to grant the same at certain times, provided the following majorities of the creditors signify their consent to the discharge:

At the end of six months from the first meeting, if a majority in numbers and three-fourths in value of the creditors assent thereto:

At the end of 12 months, if a majority in number and value assent thereto:

At the end of two years, if one-third in number and value assent thereto:

And at the end of three years, if the court shall think fit to grant the same.

Bankruptcy.

Where at the second meeting the creditors resolve on bankruptcy, their resolution should be reported to the court, and an adjudication should be thereupon made and advertised.

Immediately after the second meeting, whether the debtor has been adjudicated a bankrupt previously to such meeting, or upon resolution passed at such meeting, the court should appoint a day for him to pass his public examination, and such appointment should be advertised in manner prescribed.

Such examination should be a full and searching inquiry into all matters of property and conduct, irrespective of the investigation by the trustee; and the court should only allow the examination to be passed when a full disclosure had been made by the bankrupt, of which the court should give a certificate in the prescribed form.

The bankrupt should not be entitled to obtain his order of discharge unless and until he had passed his public examination.

Having explained the procedure which we think may be beneficially substituted for the present petition by a creditor for adjudication of his debtor a bankrupt, and for the present proceedings for liquidation by arrangement or composition, we make the following recommendations as to other matters:—

Expenses of Administration.

The complaints of the expense of the present system of administering estates by trustees appointed by the creditors, we find to be, with some few exceptions, well-founded. The opportunity of incurring large expenses has led to the reprehensible means, we have before referred to, of obtaining proxies, enabling their holders to control the appointment of trustee and the management of the estate. We recommend that the remuneration as well as the appointment of the trustee, and the appointment of the solicitor, should rest with the committee of inspection, subject to the order of the court. That in cases where the assets are less than 3,000 l., the remuneration should not exceed the scale in the schedule, except by order of the court upon special report of the committee, setting forth the exceptional services rendered. In cases where the assets exceed 3,000 l., the remuneration should be left generally to the committee, subject to the approval of the court, as in many of such cases the scale would give too great a remuneration.

We further recommend that in all cases the trustees' accounts should be officially audited, but we think the three-monthly rendering of accounts to the comptroller might after the first audit be extended to six months. Whatever outstanding estate may remain at the end of two years, we think should be brought under the direct control of the court by the appointment of a prescribed officer as receiver, and the court should have power, on sufficient reason shown, to make such appointment before the expiration of two years, or to postpone the appointment.

The appointment of such an officer will create many advantages; it will hasten the collection of outstanding assets, it will secure all unclaimed dividends and all undivided balances and remnants of estates coming into the hands of an official directly responsible to the Treasury.

It is found in practice that the requirements of a meeting of the committee of inspection once every three months, to determine as to dividend, defeats its own object, as there are few, if even there are any, estates where dividends can be declared with such rapidity. The result is that the committee neglect to attend such meetings. The proviso for their auditing the accounts is comparatively unnecessary, as such audit is also made by the comptroller. We therefore recommend the omission of the latter part of the first paragraph of Section 20, as also the concluding paragraph of Section 41, which is found to be virtually a dead letter.

The provision of Section 30 requires modification, by providing that if payment is not made into the Bank of England the trustees should pay all moneys into such bank as the committee should determine, or into court, in manner described. Where the estimated assets shall exceed 200 l., the trustee shall be required to keep a separate banking account for each estate. At present, where one person is trustee to several estates, it is the practice for him to keep one banking account; and it is impossible for the comptroller, in auditing an estate, to detect whether the banking balance, which is more than enough to represent the moneys of that particular estate, does not fall far short of the aggregate moneys of all estates which the trustee should have at the bank.

We are also of opinion that the scales of costs should be revised and simplified; and that rules for the guidance of the taxing-masters should be made, to secure, amongst other matters, that no charges shall be allowed to solicitors out of the estate, for work which should be performed by the trustee, where he receives remuneration.

Further, having regard to the desirability of ensuring (as far as possible) uniformity in practice in the numerous courts now exercising jurisdiction in bankruptcy, with regard to the allowance of the costs of solicitors and other payments out of the estates of debtors, we think it essential that some provision should be made for all such allowances being supervised by some central authority. We therefore propose that all bills of costs or claims for remuneration or expenses, or otherwise, in respect of which the allocatur of the taxing officer of any local court is required, should after taxation by him, and together with his allocatur, be remitted to such person or persons as the Lord Chancellor should from time to time appoint; and that no allocatur of any such taxing officer should be of any validity unless the same be countersigned by such person or one of such persons.

Petitioning Creditor's Debt.

By the 6th Section of the Act the debt of a creditor is required to be "due" before he can petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against his debtor. By previous statutes a creditor could petition whether his debt had arrived at maturity or not. In the case of a petition for adjudication of a trader-debtor this provision should be re-enacted.

Dismissal of Debtor's Summons.

The following words in the second part of the Section 7, "on the ground "that he is not indebted to the creditor serving such summons, or that he is "not indebted to such amount as will justify such creditor in presenting a "bankruptcy petition against him," have been found to create confusion in practice, and to restrict the court in the exercise of its discretion. The practice can be fully prescribed by rules and orders. The proviso to the section has also been found unnecessary.

Acts of Bankruptcy.

The limitation in Sub-section 5 of Section 6, to a sum exceeding 50 l. as the amount for which the seizure and sale of a trader's goods is an act of bankruptcy, should be abolished. The smaller the sum for which a trader allows an execution to be levied the stronger the evidence of insolvency. It also often happens that the debtor's estate is exhausted by a series of executions for sums below 50 l.

Failure to pay or compound for the sum claimed by a debtor's summons is by Section 6, Sub-section 6, an act of bankruptcy upon which only the creditor to whom the sum is due can petition for adjudication. This is the first instance of an act of bankruptcy having been made available to any particular creditor to the exclusion of all others, and we think the law should be altered so as to allow any creditor to found a petition for an order of administration upon the act of bankruptcy committed by a debtor in failing to pay or compound for the sum claimed by a debtor's summons. Limited acts of bankruptcy lead to great inconvenience, particularly when questions of title turn upon the time when the bankruptcy is held to commence, as the question of the title of trustees, by way of relation back to the commencement of the bankruptcy, is thereby rendered difficult of determination.

The provision of the Act of 1849 (Section 71), whereby, after filing the petition, payment or security made or given to the petitioning creditor is made an act of bankruptcy, should be re-enacted.

Proveable Debts.

Section 31 provides that no person having notice of an act of bankruptcy available for adjudication against the bankrupt shall prove for any debt or liability contracted by the bankrupt subsequently to the date of his so having notice. It seems only just that the court should have power to let such a creditor in, where it is of opinion that the estate has been benefited or increased by the payment of the money or execution of the contract upon which such debt or liability has arisen.

Death of Debtor.

The death of the debtor after an order for administration of the estate has been made should not in any way interfere with the continuance of the proceedings.

Relation back.

The period to which the commencement of the bankruptcy should date back in Section 11 should be the same as that mentioned in Section 6. Under the former statutes, acts of bankruptcy were in general available for adjudication for 12 months. By Section 6 this period was reduced to six months, but the period of 12 months was retained in Section 11. Whether the word "prior" in lines 9 and 10 of this section is meant to relate to an act of bankruptcy committed during the 12 months preceding the adjudication or prior thereto is not clear. If to the latter period, the "relation back" would appear to be without limit so long as debts remained due sufficient in amount to support the adjudication.

Disclaimer as to onerous Property.

Section 23 requires amendment so as to prevent a disclaimer by the trustee from operating, on the one hand, as a release of the persons who, in default of the bankrupt, are liable to the performance of the covenants or other obligations affecting the property, and, on the other hand, from unduly prejudicing interests and rights derived from the bankrupt, either by way of mortgage, sub-lease, or otherwise.

Close of Bankruptcy.

By Sub-section 3 of Section 15 all property that may be acquired by or devolve on a bankrupt during the continuance of the bankruptcy (i.e., until it is closed as provided by Section 47) shall be divisible among his creditors.

It is manifest that a bankruptcy can only be closed by exhaustion.

Since 1869 not 20 per cent. of the bankruptcies have been closed, and a still smaller proportion of liquidations have been closed.

In framing the rules of 1st January 1871, attention was called to a difficulty which would arise by the omission of the words "or until he shall have obtained his discharge" from the concluding words of the sub-section. A reference to Sections 48 and 49 will show that the debtor can obtain his discharge prior to the close of the bankruptcy, and that such discharge does, virtually, release him from all his debts. The effect of the omission of the words we have referred to from Section 15 was, until the recent decision of the Lords Justices in Ebbs v. Boulnois, considered to be, that, notwithstanding the debtor might be so discharged from his indebtedness, all property which he might acquire prior to the close of the bankruptcy would vest in the trustee for the benefit of his creditors.

Our recommendation of the appointment of an official receiver after the expiration of two years will prevent the necessity of any provision as to closing the bankruptcy, and we therefore propose the repeal of Section 47, and such other portions of the Act as relate or refer to the close of a bankruptcy.

Appeals and Delegation to London Registrars.

Appeals from local courts of bankruptcy lie to the Chief Judge in Bankruptcy and from him to the Lords Justices, so that there is a second appeal from the judge of a county court acting in bankruptcy, while from the Registrar of the London Court of Bankruptcy, acting by delegation as Chief Judge, there is but the appeal to the Lords Justices. We think that this double appeal from the local courts is unnecessary, and leads frequently to very heavy costs. With the exception of hearing these appeals, and of applications for commitments for contempt, the whole of the duties of the Chief Judge in Bankruptcy have been exercised under delegation by the Registrars of the London Bankruptcy Court. We recommend, therefore, that all appeals from these courts should lie direct to the Court of Appeal to be constituted under the Supreme Court of Judicature Bill now passing through Parliament; and that power should be conferred by statute upon the registrars of the London Court of Bankruptcy to exercise not only the duties hitherto discharged by them by delegation from him, but also to hear applications to commit for contempt.

Should our recommendation be adopted that the appeals from the local courts should lie to the Court of Appeal, the following statistics show that the work which would be cast upon the Court of Appeal would not be heavy:—

The number of appeals to the Chief Judge in 1874 were - -		107
Of these, there were withdrawn by consent, arranged, &c. -		22
Leaving to be heard by the Chief Judge - - - -		85
If from this number be deducted the number of cases in which the decision of the Chief Judge was appealed from	23
Of which there were withdrawn - - - - -	2

Districts.

It should be provided, in order to prevent a debtor resorting to a court distant from his creditors, that he should be restricted to filing his petition to a district within which he resided or carried on business for the greatest period during the six months preceding the filing of the petition.

A similar provision was inserted in the Act of 1861 to stop the abuses which arose under the Insolvency Act, from debtors being able to file their petitions in any court they might choose to go to, however inconvenient to their creditors.

Sales under Executions.

Execution upon legal process for 50 l. and upwards, levied by seizure and sale of a trader's effects, is made an act of bankruptcy, capable for six months of supporting an adjudication on the petition of any creditor; and therefore, primâ facie, the execution-creditor, having notice of such act of bankruptcy, would be deprived deprived of the proceeds of his execution if bankruptcy occurred within 12 months (see Sections 11 and 95). By Section 87, however, the sheriff is only to retain the proceeds of sale for 14 days, and if no petition has been presented, is then to pay over the same to the execution-creditor. It was doubted whether the intention of Section 87 (which to some extent was a re-enactment of the section of the Act of 1861) was not solely for the protection of the sheriff, leaving the execution-creditor in the same position as he would have been in had not the Act contained the 87th section. The Court of Appeal has, however, held that this section protects both the sheriff and the execution-creditor, and that the latter is entitled to the proceeds of sale if the bankruptcy petition be not filed within the 14 days. The Act, however, contains no provision similar to Section 74 of the Act of 1861, requiring sales under executions to be by public auction; and as the sheriff may, and does sometimes, realise by private bill of sale, which need not be registered for 21 days (or at all, if the effects be removed from the apparent possession of the debtor), the result is that the execution-creditor receives the proceeds of his execution before any of the debtor's other creditors acquire knowledge of the execution having been levied. We think provisions should be made requiring all sales under executions to be made publicly, and that the statute should expressly declare at what period the sheriff should pay over the proceeds, and, if a distinction is to be drawn between this and any other act of bankruptcy, at what further period the execution-creditor should be entitled to retain the same as against the trustee under a subsequent bankruptcy of the debtor.

When the committee of inspection shall order the trustee to sell debtor's stock by tender, they may further allow him as follows:—

Not above 400*l.*	4*l.* per cent.

Expenses to be allowed, such as advertisements and printing, not exceeding 2*l.*, or at discretion of the committee.

I sign the report fully agreeing with its recommendations, and believing that it suggests as much amendment in "Expenses of Administration" as could be anticipated from any changes "in the details of the present system;" but, as I hold a strong opinion that the chief part of the expense complained of is demonstrably consequent on certain practical defects in the system itself, I think it my duty to submit to your Lordship, in a Supplemental Report which I am preparing, the reasons on which my opinion is founded.

SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT ON THE EXPENSES OF BANKRUPTCY ADMINISTRATION.

34, Lincoln's Inn Fields, W.C.,
20 December 1875.

My Lord,

As stated in a note at the end of the Report of the Committee appointed by your Lordship to consider the question of Bankruptcy Amendment, I cordially agree with the suggestions contained in that Report as to what changes may be advantageously made in the details of the present system; but I have thought it desirable to add, in the form of a Supplemental Report, some observations and evidence, chiefly of a statistical character, which I was unable to prepare by the time the Report was submitted, and which are intended to show that "no effectual check can be given to the evils which have led to so much dissatisfaction "with the working of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869," by amendment of its details, because the evils complained of are necessary results of the system itself.

The financial portion of Bankruptcy Law has not been subjected to the same progressive amendment as the more strictly judicial portion, but rather to radical changes of system successively recommended and condemned by commercial men; the present system, which was most strongly recommended as certain to produce economy, being now more generally complained of for its expense and insecurity than any system since the year 1832.

Consistently with the views of the Chambers of Commerce, the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, commenced the destruction of an organised system (introduced in the year 1832 to remedy the then manifest evils of disorganisation), by taking the realisation of the property of debtors from official assignees, and giving it to the creditors themselves through a creditor assignee of their own selection; and only two years after the Act came into operation it was condemned by the Chambers of Commerce in a memorial addressed to the Lord Chancellor, in which they complained in particular that expenses had greatly increased; that the creditors' assignee was the mere nominee of some bankruptcy solicitor, and left his duties to be performed at enormous cost by his professional patron; and recommended that the true remedy was "to be found in reverting to what ought to be the fundamental principle of Bankruptcy Legislation," namely, that the duty of realising and distributing the property of debtors "should be discharged "by the creditors themselves through a competent paid officer of their own "selection, whose charges are a matter of bargain with the creditors before-hand."*

The Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and general rules fully and admirably provide everything needed to carry out this fundamental principle, giving the creditors the fullest powers, with clear instructions how best to exercise them, and whatever assistance they may desire without interference; and the Chambers of Commerce now deem it essential that some better provision be made for regulating and controlling charges which were to be a matter of bargain with the creditors.

It

* Unless the creditors were more able or willing to act, this recommendation could produce no other result than the great increase of expense that it has produced; if, as before, creditors rarely did more than give their powers or proxies to the first professional agent who applied for them, the paid trustee would necessarily become "the mere nominee of some bankruptcy solicitor," who might appoint his own clerk or accountant, resolve him such remuneratiou as he pleased to share with him on "agency terms," and with his active co-operation run up an even larger bill of law costs.

I believe that accountants, quite as frequently as solicitors, canvass on their own account, and that from the increased number of the lowest class of "touts" there is an infinitely greater amount of "touting" than under any former system; but I have no doubt that many accountant trustees are merely agents to solicitors who hold the proxies of the creditors.

The results of about 600 bankruptcies under each system show that the solicitor's charges under the Act of 1861 averaged 74 l., against 80 l. under the Act of 1869, and that the actual cost of messengers and official assignees under the Act of 1861 averaged about 15 l., against 64 l., receivers' and trustees' charges, under the Act of 1869, both in cases averaging between 500 l. and 600 l. net assets realised.

[The total charges of messengers and official assignees averaged 32 l., but the greater part of these were "court fees" or taxes, which, under the present system, are not included in the trustees' charges.]

It may be taken, in round numbers, that the amount of the paid trustees' charges are a clear addition to the expenses of the former Act.

It has not been suggested that the Act is faulty or wanting in any details, but in the fundamental principle of leaving the creditors to regulate expenses; and this opinion must, I submit, be taken to condemn the whole present system of administration by paid officers selected by the creditors, because otherwise it would amount to a recommendation that the creditors should be allowed to make administration as costly and insecure as possible by throwing the property of debtors into the hands of some 20,000 irresponsible agents, and that the Legislature should undertake to make it inexpensive by regulating and controlling their charges.*

The appointment of a separate trustee to each estate implies, of necessity, a separate arrangement as to his remuneration,† and separate supervision by creditors, who must be not only willing to sacrifice time and trouble for the benefit of the other creditors, but also sufficiently acquainted with bankruptcy rules and practice to be able to prevent the trustee incurring expenses directly, or by unnecessary employment of solicitors, which is by far the most important cause of the expense at present complained of.‡

The suggested regulation and control as necessarily imply rules, and official control, without which (as clearly proved under liquidations by arrangement) rules are absolutely useless; and it would be impossible to recommend, as a measure of economy, the appointment, on the one hand, of several thousand trustees to make expenses, and, on the other hand, of a very large and costly official staff to control them.

Assuming even that all trustees were as able and trustworthy as a few unquestionably are, the distribution of work, chiefly of a mechanical character, among so many professional men is of itself inconsistent with the first principles of economy; 400 or 500 trustees or receivers (each of whom necessarily requires a handsome profit) being employed to do what would be much better done by one fit and proper person with the aid of a few well-practised clerks.

I submit for your Lordship's consideration—

First, the complete misapprehension of facts and figures which led to the recommendation of the present system of administration;

Second, the theoretical and practical fallacies of the fundamental principles recommended;

Third, such steps to economy as seem to be suggested by consideration of the causes of expense.

The opinion that the present (or Scotch) paid trustee system would prove economical may be traced, through the evidence before a Select Committee of the House of Commons in the year 1864, to a statement in the memorial of the Chambers of Commerce (before referred to) and a comparison annexed, by which it appeared that the expenses of administration under the then Bankruptcy Act, 1861, averaged 55 per cent. on the net assets, while (as alleged to be shown in a return by the Accountant in Bankruptcy in Scotland) the expenses of 133 Scotch sequestrations, "awarded" in the year 1862, amounted to 13½ per cent. "on the net assets;" that this was the "entire cost of administration;" that nearly 80 per cent. of assets was "available for dividends," and that the "time occupied in winding up was much less than in England," &c.§

Referring

* There are at present 3,000 open bankruptcies, and probably 16,000 or 17,000 open liquidations by arrangement, and the number of new cases continues to increase annually.

† The best and, in fact, the only suggestion that could be offered for regulating the remuneration of trustees is a scale of charges as recommended in the Report of the Committee: if strictly carried out, it would prevent the exorbitant charges of some trustees; but, like every other suggestion that could be offered with a view to the reduction of expense under the present system, it is open to the objection that it is a detail of an organised or official system, under which one person undertakes a number of cases, good and bad together, at an average rate of charge. There is the widest possible difference in value of realisation between different estates—from an estate in which the assets consist of several hundreds, or even of thousands, of small debts due by a very poor class of persons, which it would not pay to realise at 15 or 20 per cent., to an estate in which the chief duties of the trustee consist in instructing an auctioneer and receiving his cheque for the proceeds of the sale. The result of an average scale applied to the present system must necessarily be that the trustees of some estates would be extravagantly remunerated, while the trustees of other estates would not be fairly remunerated, and that in either case the trustees would be tempted to realise the remunerative portion of the assets, and to leave the unremunerative portion to the registrars.

‡ The Act and Rules are more frequently employed to deceive creditors, who are generally unacquainted with them, than by creditors to control the charges of trustees or their employment of solicitors.

§ The memorial of the Chambers of Commerce is given in the Report from the Select Committee (ordered to be printed 22nd July 1864), Appendix 1, page 275; the accounts showing the comparison in page 282; and the report of the Accountant in Bankruptcy (Scotland) in Appendix No. 13, page 312.

Referring to the return by the Accountant in Bankruptcy, I find that it distinctly states that the "13½ per cent." was "of gross receipts," and not "on net assets;" that the only costs it included were the law charges, and the trustees' commission and miscellaneous expenses (postage, &c.); that therefore the charges of other agents employed were deducted from receipts, or treated as "extraordinary outlay," and that therefore the expenses shown were not the "entire cost of administration;" that the 79 per cent. of assets included property belonging to mortgagees or other "secured" creditors, and was therefore not "available for dividends;" that the 133 sequestrations were not "awarded" in 1862 (which would have shown that they were very rapidly wound up), but were "wound up" in 1862, the average time occupied in winding them up being, "in round numbers, 2½ years," that is, longer than the maximum time which could have been occupied in winding up any one estate under the Act of 1861 at the date of the memorial (23rd February 1864): and the Scotch official return carefully points out that the 2½ years referred only to the average time occupied in winding up "these" 133 sequestrations, having before plainly shown that the general average of Scotch sequestrations was several years longer.*

The Scotch return was the usual official report, in which expenses were very clearly and correctly shown, according to Scotch practice, and for the purposes of Scotch accounts, but at less than half of what they would have been shown if the accounts had been prepared for the purpose of a comparison with English expenses.

On the other hand, it would be apparent to anyone at all accustomed to bankruptcy expenses that the rate of costs in the 65 very small English bankruptcies selected by the Chambers of Commerce would necessarily be nearly four times as great as in bankruptcies of the same class as the 133 large Scotch sequestrations, and therefore that the English system of administration was primâ facie about one-half as costly as the Scotch system, instead of being (as represented in the memorial of the Chambers of Commerce more than four times as costly.

The memorial clearly shows that these 65 small English bankruptcies were wound up under exceptionally unfavourable conditions; attributing, with minute details, a great part of the expenses complained of to an almost incredible amount of individual misconduct and of general demoralisation in the court in which they were wound up, and in the low class of solicitors described as practising in it--proving that they were altogether exceptional cases, and yet adopting them as average examples condemning a whole system.†

Again, I need hardly remind your Lordship that there was no analogy of character between bankruptcy under the Act of 1861 and Scotch sequestration; bankruptcies with assets being a selection representing perhaps one-tenth in number, and the very worst of the cases administered under the Act. It is notorious that, as a rule, no cases with respectable assets went into bankruptcy unless they were of a fraudulent, hostile, or complicated character necessarily involving heavy expenses; many of the very small cases adopted by the Chambers of Commerce would probably have been dealt with, in Scotland, under "cessio bonorum," and not at all in sequestration; while nearly all the sequestrations compared with them would, in England, have been wound up under "assignments," and not in bankruptcy.

Considering that the 65 bankruptcies taken were of the smallest and therefore most costly class, and that they were wound up under such costly conditions, it is probable that they were the 65 worst and most costly examples of administration under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, that could have been found (wound up together) in all England and Wales.

The memorial of the Chambers of Commerce shows that the great bulk of the expenses of bankruptcies was in an amount of law costs not at all necessitated by the system, but attributable to absconding or fraudulent debtors and hostile creditors; they were probably "manufactured" to a great extent, but, notwithstanding standing all these sufficient reasons for their being greater, I am able to state that the charges of the "bankruptcy solicitor" were less than those of the Scotch law agent in sequestrations chiefly awarded on the petition of debtors with the concurrence of creditors.

* During the first two years of the Scotch Bankruptcy Act only 25 sequestrations were wound up by the trustees in all Scotland; the memorial of the Chambers of Commerce, showing 65 bankruptcies wound up during the first two years of the Act of 1861 in Birmingham alone, itself proves the superiority of the English system in this point.

† I believe the district courts were, as a rule, admirably conducted: of one I can say, from my own knowledge, that under the conduct of a most able and zealous commissioner it deservedly enjoyed the confidence and respect of the commercial classes of the district, and that solicitors of the highest character and position practised in it.

Compared on equal terms of assets and costs,* the average expenses of bankruptcy under the Act of 1861 were less than half the average expenses in Scotch sequestrations, and I may submit to your Lordship that they would have been very much less if bankruptcies had been of the same character as sequestrations.

I find that in cases averaging (large and small together) 1,000 l. net assets, the Scotch law charges, after the choice of the trustee, averaged about 93 l., while those of the solicitor to the creditors' assignee averaged only about 65 l., notwithstanding the greatly more litigious character of bankruptcy; and although these charges included the greater part of the cost of realisation, which would be completed (so far as it can be compared with Scotch expenses) by an addition of about 19 l., making together 84 l., or 9 l. less than the Scotch law costs after the choice of trustee, and leaving more than 120 l. Scotch trustees' commission and incidental expenses wholly unrepresented.†

A similar result, namely, that the paid trustee is merely an addition to the expenses of the former system, may be shown from the expenses of the present Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and I feel sure that it is the result which your Lordship has anticipated.

The Chambers of Commerce complained that, under the Act of 1861, the creditors' assignee was "the mere nominee of some bankruptcy solicitor," and solicitors of the highest eminence and experience in bankruptcy agreeing with them thus far, recommended most strongly that the false step which had been taken should be retraced, while the Chambers of Commerce recommended that the true remedy was to be found in substituting a paid accountant for the unpaid creditor; in throwing the property of debtors into the hands of thousands of irresponsible agents; in practically "reverting" to the proverbial "state of things which existed before the Act of 1832."

The

* I have carefully compared the results of several hundreds of English bankruptcies and of Scotch sequestrations, taken consecutively as they were wound up, and reduced to equal terms of assets by distributing the estates of both into several classes according to the amount of their assets, and multiplying the average costs and assets of each class of the one by the number of cases in the corresponding class of the other. Judicial statistics of Scotland for the year 1874, which I have just received, give the results of sequestrations wound up during seven years, and entirely confirm the Scotch expenses I have stated; while such scraps of information respecting the Act of 1861 as I have been able to find show that the London expenses I have given are higher than those of the district courts, and therefore higher than the English average.

† The Scotch expenses, as found, averaged 24·25 per cent., the English 15·85 per cent.., both of net assets, the auctioneer's charges being in both deducted from proceeds of sale.

The Scotch law charges, "after the choice of trustee," are arrived at by deducting from the total law charges "from 25 l. to 30 l.," as estimated by the Accountant in Bankruptcy in Scotland for the preliminary legal "expenses of the sequestration proper," which refer to the status of the debtor and not to the administration of his property; and the costs of the creditors' assignee's solicitor by deducting a like sum, and 7 l. or 8 l. for stamp duty, from the English law costs.

Expenses of administration under the Act of 1861 were so mixed up with "court fees" (or taxes) charged for the maintenance of the general establishment that they can only be estimated.

The "about 19 l." further expenses of administration is obtained by deducting the following items from English expenses, as ascertained:—

About 20 l., or 2 per cent. of net assets for "court fees" involved in the messengers' and official assignees' charges, which (as suggested by the Accountant in Bankruptcy in Scotland) must be eliminated from English expenses for comparison with Scotch expenses, because in Scotland they are borne by the Consolidated Fund and not charged against assets.

About 10 l., or 1 per cent., for the interim protection and administration of the estate by the official assignee and messenger, including inventories, valuations, &c.—duties performed in Scotland by the judicial factor and other agents, and not shown as "expenses."

About 10 l., or 1 per cent., for the remuneration of persons employed in managing the bankrupt's business after the bankruptcy, preparing for sale, &c., which in Scotch accounts would be carried to "extraordinary outlay," or otherwise not shown as "expenses."

These items, with the "19 l., other expenses," and 99 l. total law costs, make up the 158 l. total average expenses on estates averaging 1,000 l. net assets.

The 19 l. is chiefly a reserve for the charges of some agents (employed in the very few large bankruptcies), which possibly might not be fairly deducted from receipts, or considered as "extraordinary outlay;" it includes also a few pounds for the actual cost to the "bankruptcy fund" of collecting the small debts and paying the dividend, and a trifling amount of petty expenses of creditors' assignees, sometimes additional to the solicitor's bill.

It was commonly supposed that the charges of the official assignees referred to their share of the realisation and distribution of the property of bankrupts. More than half of the time of London official assignees and their clerks was occupied in cases without assets, creditors' assignees were appointed in almost all cases with considerable assets, and in such cases the debtor's property being vested solely in the creditors' assignee, the official assignee became official auditor, assistant to the court in financial matters, and tax-collector; his duties were not at all those of the Scotch trustee, but a portion of those of the judicial factor, of the Accountant in Bankruptcy (Scotland), and of some other officers whose expenses are not shown in Scotch accounts.

The clearest view of the expenses of the Scotch paid trustee may be taken by comparing them with those of the official assignee under the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849, whose charges were regulated by Rule 130.

From the enormous amount of the Scotch law charges, it can hardly be doubted that they contain (as in England under the present system) a large amount for work which ought to have been done by the trustees for their remuneration, and, judging by the present "receiver," the judicial factor is well paid for any assets realised by him, or work done by him towards recovery of assets before the choice of the trustee.

From experience under the present Act, these two items (which would have been included in the official assignee's charges) would amount to 4 per cent. of net assets, or more than the whole charges of the official assignee could have been in bankruptcies of similar assets to the Scotch sequestrations, again leaving the Scotch trustee's heavy commission and incidental expenses wholly unrepresented.

I have endeavoured to show that administration under the Scotch system is much more costly than it was in bankruptcy, under either the Act of 1849 or the Act of 1861; but it is clear that it must possess some great superiority which has produced a general impression in its favour, and which has enabled it to pass so many years without being much complained of, while system after system has been tried and condemned in England.

Though, as I have before said, English systems of administration have been subjected to radical changes, those changes have referred not so much to principles as to the particular agents who should be employed. The Act of 1832 took the property of debtors out of the hands of professional agents, and there has been a continued struggle ever since to get it back again. The chief question appears to have been, whether given duties should be performed by 20 or 30 persons called "official assignees," or by many thousands of persons called "bankruptcy trustees."

In their broad features recent bankruptcy systems are alike, a small portion of the assets given up by debtors being administered in "bankruptcy" under rules and with results which could be ascertained, and a very large portion under variously-named outside arrangements practically uncontrolled by rules and with altogether unknown results.

The commercial classes have, throughout, entertained a general feeling that creditors received a very much too small share of the property of debtors, and their feeling, after passing through many hands and being subjected to many influences, has always been expressed by an attack upon "officialism," which had no possible connection with the great majority of matters complained of, and the complaints have, therefore, not only continued but increased.

The Scotch system is the same as the present English system, except that it has no liquidations by arrangement or composition into which creditors may be led, or compelled, before they have reasonable opportunity of judging for themselves. In Scotland, compositions can only be accepted by a large majority of creditors binding the minority after sequestration, and after proper means have been taken to secure that the debtor has made a full disclosure of his property.

The result is, that while in England nine-tenths of cases are administered under arrangements and compositions, and the bankruptcy system is generally condemned, not one-third are so wound up in Scotland, and there appears to be no general complaint of the system, though its defects are recognised.

Referring to the second point, namely, to the fallacy of the theory of leaving everything in the hands of the creditors, I need hardly observe that men of the highest order of ability are often led into misapprehension when dealing with technical matters and technical accounts with which they are not practically conversant; or that an average trader-creditor going altogether unprepared, whether to meet the debtor supported by his solicitor and accountant, or to control bankruptcy lawyers and accountants in most technical questions of bankruptcy law and accounts, is certain to be misled if they have the least desire to mislead him.

The extent to which creditors are at the mercy of debtors and agents may, I think, be inferred from the statistics of bankruptcies and liquidations by arrangement or composition under the present Act of 1869.

Administration in bankruptcy being, as I have observed, practically the same as in Scotch sequestration, and the creditors having similar powers to wind up by by composition or arrangement after bankruptcy as after sequestration, it would seem that Sections 125 and 126 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, were added to meet the requirements of special cases, and as an inducement to honest but unfortunate debtors to come forward at an early stage of insolvency and offer fair terms to their creditors.

The loudest and most general complaints against the present system are against these arrangements and compositions, and yet, practically, everything is drawn into them. Out of 5,432,000 l., assets declared by debtors in the year 1874, 4,946,000 l. (or more than 90 per cent.) were under these two sections.

In the same year, out of 2,549 compounding debtors (under Section 126) only 162 were able to pay their creditors more than half they owed them, while 1,803 were unable to pay more than one-fourth, and 1,059 of these not more than one-eighth, including 501 debtors whose compositions averaged a few pence in the pound.

The intention of the Legislature seems even more clear in liquidations by arrangement under Section 125, which, offering no apparent advantage to creditors, even intended chiefly to place "liquidating debtors" in a better position than "bankrupts." By Part 7 of that section the procedure after the choice of trustees is the same as in bankruptcy, except that by Part 9 the protection which (in case of need) the Court might have afforded to creditors is taken from them.

The trustee (who is not unfrequently the debtor's agent) can generally, by proxies held by himself or his solicitor, resolve his own release, and make his own terms with the debtor for a discharge from his debts; and as the trustee's accounts are, for some reason, specially exempted from official supervision, nothing is officially known of the results of administration, except that general rules requiring the taxation of charges and other important matters are disregarded, and that the trustees appropriate the undivided balances and unclaimed dividends, which may be very largely manufactured in liquidations by arrangement, and that they can employ the funds in hand to their own advantage.

The same agents practising in both, it cannot be doubted that they who profit too much in bankruptcy profit much more in liquidations, or that, unless there is some hidden advantage to creditors sufficient to more than balance the many and manifest disadvantages, the surprising preponderance of liquidations by arrangement may be more reasonably attributed to the influence of agents than to discriminating preference on the part of creditors.*

Again, the theory that creditors desire to take any active part either in managing the debtor's affairs, or in choosing a fit and proper person to manage them, is distinctly contradicted by their own evidence, almost daily recorded during the last fourteen years in the minutes of proceedings at meetings, which show that, generally speaking, they will do no more than prove their debts, and give their proxies to persons whom it is impossible they could have spontaneously chosen. As a rule, to which there are comparatively few exceptions, every creditor considers his own pecuniary interest, and finds it better to write off the amount of his debt to loss; to hand his proof and proxy to a solicitor, or accountant [who sends him forms and instructions, and whom he commonly supposes to be connected with the court or "acting in the matter"], and to consider any dividends he may receive as profit.

The pecuniary question for a creditor is whether the amount he would gain by such reduction of expenses as he could hope to bring about by close supervision of proceedings during their three or four years' average continuance would remunerate him for his trouble and loss of time?

If, by the action of creditors, present expenses could be reduced one-sixth of their amount, the average advantage to each creditor would be about 1 l.—more to a few, and less to the large majority in number; and, as a rule, the larger creditors creditors would be the less willing to sacrifice their time,* which is a sufficient reason for creditors' assignees under the Act of 1861, and committees of inspection under the present Act, being so rarely efficient.

* In the year 1874 there were 4,400 liquidations by arrangement, with assets amounting to 3,462,000 l., against a total of 930 bankruptcies, with assets amounting to only 485,000 l., and the assets in the liquidations were of the class that would bear a very much larger amount to be abstracted from them by expenses or otherwise, and yet pay very much larger dividends to the creditors; there being, on an average, 31 l. assets in liquidations, and only 13 l. in bankruptcies, to every 100 l. liabilities.

Another theory of the present system is the exclusive right of creditors to dispose of the debtor's property as they please—that it is their own, and that if they suffer from negligence or mismanagement they are the sufferers; but unless the creditors, in the collective sense of persons who give credit as a matter of business, consistently trade at a loss, it would seem that the aggregate amount of bad debts is, in the long run, recouped by increase of prices. If so, this theory is manifestly untenable, and a further reason is afforded for the indifference of the majority of creditors. If some creditors suffer positive loss, from making more than an average amount of bad debts, a much larger number must neither lose nor gain, while some who make less than an average amount must positively gain by the existence of bad debts maintaining credit prices. It is not likely that the two latter classes of creditors would sacrifice much time or trouble in order to increase their dividends by a trifling amount; but, even if this view were altogether incorrect, a laxity of administration which tends to the rapid increase of speculative trading, bad debts, and commercial immorality cannot fail to be most detrimental to public interests.†

Having so far stated what I believe to be the causes of expense, I can only, in the third place, suggest such simple amendments as seem suggested by those causes.

The creditors being generally unable to afford time for close supervision, and insufficiently acquainted with bankruptcy rules and practice to control expenses, or to move in any matter, however simple, without costly professional aid, it would seem desirable (while reserving to them the fullest powers of direction and supervision) that they should be directly assisted by an officer of the court in matters in which they clearly need assistance.

I venture to assume that the present distribution of administration among thousands of paid trustees is beyond possibility of doubt the chief cause of the great increase of expense under the present system; that it must be so in theory, and that it is proved to be so in practice.

As I have before shown, the Associated Chambers of Commerce, in their memorial to which I have already referred, complained in particular that under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, the expense of administration was much greater than under the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849, and (as shown in their memorial) the increased expense (as a question of system) arose solely from the change by which the realisation of the debtor's property was taken from official assignees and given to creditors' assignees, or practically to solicitors.

Solicitors of the highest eminence and experience in bankruptcy most distinctly condemned this change in their evidence before the Select Committee of 1864, and recommended the restoration of the official assignees (under proper control) to the duties they performed under the Act of 1849.

Experience, therefore, as well as theory, seems to point clearly to the soundness of the general principles of administration under the Act of 1849 and former Acts—namely, that the receipt and payment of moneys should be by an official staff, which (under proper organisation and control) could perform such duties with perfect security, and at infinitely less cost than individual cases could be undertaken by professional men.

I think that, as a question of detail, the official assignee organisation was faulty, because no officer of the court should be in a position in which his interests might be, or might be represented to be, in any way opposed to those of the creditors, and because it involved, in a less degree, what I believe to be a radical defect in both later systems. It seems apparent that the duty of the officer (whether

* The amount declared by debtors in bankruptcy in liquidation would probably realise about 20*l.* on an average for each creditor, subject to about 30 per cent. average expenses.

In the largest cases the expenses would perhaps average 6 per cent. of assets, and the gain to each creditor in such estates would therefore be about 1 per cent. of his share of the assets.

† It appears commonly assumed that the fact of a man being a "creditor" implies that he is so strictly honourable that he will not do the best he can for himself, but will consider the interests of the other creditors as much as his own; and that the larger the amount of his debt, the more important it must be to the creditor. In the smaller trade cases the largest debt is often but a trifle relatively to the transactions of the largest creditor, and to the amount of bad debts he expects to make; and the "lenient view of the case" which his agent is so often disposed to take, though frequently a genuine disposition to be generous, and to use his powerful influence to persuade the smaller creditors to be the same, is often no doubt a selfishly speculative view to future transactions or arrangements with the debtor.

(whether official assignee, creditors' assignee, or trustee), who, from examination of the debtor's affairs, knows better than anyone else what assets ought to be realised, should be rather to check the collection of moneys by other persons than to collect and account for them to persons who know little or nothing about the debtor's property.

No one officer could undertake the management and examination of more than a limited number of cases. The mechanical receipt and payment of moneys in these would involve too little labour to be conducted either securely or economically: a maximum of security and economy can only be attained in an office sufficiently large to admit of such simple organisation as would render fraud impossible (without a practically impossible amount of collusion), and of the employment of a large proportion of inferior clerks or writers on work which is chiefly of a mechanical character.

To carry out these views, as far as possible, with the existing staff of officers, I should suggest that the registrar (or other officer) of the court should be the ex-officio trustee, to act provisionally till the choice of unpaid creditors' trustees, and afterwards jointly with them, assisting them, but not interfering unless it be necessary in the interests of the creditors generally.*

The trustees should direct the disposal of the debtor's property or the carrying on of his business, and generally should have such powers of direction and investigation as hitherto exercised by creditors' assignees, committees of inspection, or trustees; and they should select solicitors, auctioneers, accountants, or other agents whose services were needed in matters arising out of the bankruptcy.

It should be the especial duty of the ex-officio trustee to at once pay all moneys arising from sale of property or otherwise (except as needed for carrying on trade, &c.) to a general collecting office, which should be altogether independent of the court and of the trustees.

The collecting office should collect the debts† due to the estate, keep proper books of account, and from time to time transmit to the ex-officio trustee accounts in duplicate showing all amounts received or paid on account of the estate; and the trustees, having certified the account, should send one copy to the Comptroller, with their remarks upon it.

The Comptroller, having audited the account, should cause a clear abstract to be sent to every creditor, and should inquire into any matter objected to by creditors, and as to property which appeared in the debtor's statement and had not been realised, and into any other matter connected with the realisation, suggested by creditors, or appearing to need investigation; the accounts of the several estates so audited to form the basis of a general audit of the books of the collecting office.

As by Sections 9, 10, 11 of the Courts of Justice Salaries and Funds Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 91), the public would be responsible for all moneys collected, it would seem desirable that the construction and government of the office should be as directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

A number of experienced officers and clerks would probably be available for the collecting office from the reduction of existing offices, and from persons at present in receipt of pensions; and its staff would be almost completed by a not greater number of inferior clerks or writers than would be required of superior clerks if it were question of regulating and controlling the expenses of the existing trustees.

At the present time, and in future, there must be a constant and constantly increasing

* Creditors' assignees under the Act of 1861, and trustees and committees of inspection under the present Act, have frequently considered their own interests, or the interests of debtors, rather than those of the creditors generally; the recurrence of such abuses would be greatly prevented if the recommendations of the committee as to "proxies" were, as I have no doubt they might be, so carried out as to prevent trustees being chosen in the interests of the debtor, or in order to secure the employment of some particular solicitor or other agent.

† I attach great importance to this collection of debts. It appears from official returns under the Act of 1861 that book-debts amount to one-half of the assets given up by bankrupts; their collection is one of the chief causes of expense under the present system, and under all systems is more open to fraud than any other portion of the realisation.

In most cases the greater part of the good book-debts could be collected by a single official application. A boy, who could copy the figures and addresses of 20 circulars in an hour, would earn 1 l. 10 s. per week, working six hours a day, at one halfpenny per application.

increasing balance in hand from undivided funds and unclaimed dividends, the interest of which, now lost to the creditors, would assist in covering any additional expenses I have suggested; and at very small charge to the creditors, half-a-million a year, now paid to trustees, besides the large sum which cannot fail to be lost or misappropriated in the hands of so many irresponsible agents, would be saved.*

There would still remain three-quarters of a million, at present annually paid to solicitors, auctioneers, accountants, and other agents, which might be very greatly reduced by strictly limiting the employment of professional men to matters needing professional experience.

I believe that about one-third of the present solicitors' charges are for work which ought to be done by the trustees, and which would be readily performed by ex-officio trustees, and I think that considerable further saving might easily be effected.

A debtor petitioning for liquidation should not be allowed to employ a solicitor and an accountant to assist him against his creditors at their expense, but should (in manner to be prescribed) surrender to the ex-officio trustee, who should at once communicate with the creditors, and place the matter in their hands.

A heavy bill of law costs should not be a necessary appendage to every petition by a creditor: it has been proved under the present Act, that an ordinary trade creditor may petition and obtain adjudication in person, and there can be no reason why a creditor should not attend at the office of the registrar as easily as at the office of any other solicitor, or, in the matter of a "debtor's summons," as easily as in the matter of a county-court summons.†

Where adjudication is disputed the services of a solicitor would be needed, but the amount of the stamp-duty on the petition should cover all formal or ordinary expenses, including advertisements, &c. At present the stamp-duty and the often purely formal expenses of the petition absorb the greater part of the assets of a large number of small estates, the creditors of which are generally, perhaps, more anxious for a dividend than the creditors of larger cases.

It has also been proved under the present Act (and I can state from my own knowledge), that the employment of a solicitor by an experienced trustee is unnecessary in a great number of cases, and that the now almost invariable appointment of "a solicitor to the trustee," whether he is wanted or no, is in the majority of cases absolutely useless, except for the purpose of making costs.‡

In very large matters, with an unusual number of transactions of a complicated character, the regular appointment of a solicitor to the estate might be needed; but there are very few large cases, and in many of them there are no unusual complications. It is perfectly true that legal difficulties arise in small cases as well as in larger cases, but it is altogether unreasonable that the greater part

* The assets declared in bankruptcy and liquidation by arrangement (beside composition) during the years 1873 and 1874 averaged considerably more than four millions, and the number of cases administered continues to increase rapidly.

As I have shown, the remuneration and expenses of trustees in Scotland average (under supervision) about 12 per cent. of assets realised. As more than nine-tenths of English assets are under no supervision, it cannot be doubted that half-a-million a year is a moderate estimate.

† "I will take the first stage of a bankruptcy, which is comprised in what takes place up to the choice of "assignees, and which, in three or four hours' work, now comes, with the stamps, to 21*l.* or 22*l.*

"It is within the knowledge of anyone acquainted with Chancery practice that the charges for the first "step in the administration of an estate in Chancery sometimes do not exceed 5*l.* I am speaking of the "solicitor's expenses only. I have known it to amount (in bankruptcy) to 40*l.*, even under the reduced "stamp."—(Evidence before Select Committee, 1864.)

‡ I have before me an analysis of 20 estates wound up successfully by a firm of accountants, in two of which creditors (one a grocer, and the other an accountant) petitioned and obtained adjudication in person, with no expense but the stamps.

In 13 cases the total law charges incurred by the trustees amounted to 5*l.* 11*s.* 4*d.* (the solicitor's charges amounting to 1*l.* 19*s.* 10*d.* in one case, and to 3*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.* in another, no solicitor being employed in 11 cases); in the other seven cases solicitors were employed on special matters arising out of the bankruptcy, namely, five in disputed bills of sale or fraudulent preferences (involving in one case appeals from the county court to the Chief Judge and Lords Justices), one in examination and application to prosecute, and one in arresting and imprisoning a bankrupt who had absconded. I mention these particulars not only to show what can be done, but also to show the class of business to which, in my opinion, the employment of solicitors should be restricted. I am persuaded that if solicitors were allowed to charge a great deal more for legal work really and necessarily done, and nothing for formal preliminaries, it would be of the greatest advantage to the creditors.

part of the assets of all small estates should be swallowed up by law charges.* and still more unreasonable that the fact of a small trader's little stock and furniture realising a few pounds more or less should necessitate a few pounds more or less of law, not in individual cases, but, as a rule, obtained from the average of all cases.†

It is, perhaps, needless to observe that the greater or less the expenses of administration, and the length of time occupied in winding-up under bankruptcy or liquidation, the less or greater will be the amount of composition.

If the interests of creditors and debtors were equally represented, the amount of composition would probably, on an average, equal the amount that the creditors would have ultimately obtained if the matter had been wound up in bankruptcy; the creditors gaining by immediate payment under the composition, and the debtor by the estimated amount of bankruptcy expenses.

I cannot doubt that if the Scotch system in regard to compositions were adopted, a much larger amount of property would be disclosed by compounding debtors, or that, if the expenses and delays of bankruptcy administration were greatly reduced, the creditors would require and obtain much larger compositions; or, in other words, that the large gain to creditors which I have suggested from reduction of expenses would not be limited to the four millions of assets annually administered in bankruptcy or liquidation, but would extend in increased compositions to a further amount of greatly more than two millions a year of property belonging to compounding debtors.‡

By the changes I have suggested, the office of the Comptroller in Bankruptcy would be enabled to perform duties six times as valuable as at present, with no important increase of staff: namely, there would be complete and satisfactory audit of six times as many cases as at present are subjected to an audit which cannot be either complete or satisfactory, and reliable statistics would be obtained of all matters brought under the Act, instead of, as at present, so small and exceptional a portion that I have been compelled in the foregoing to employ Scotch statistics to show what English results probably are.

The office would be relieved from the unsatisfactory and therefore (relatively to their value) costly portion of its duties, which consist in correspondence and proceedings to compel 3,000 irresponsible and continually changing trustees to perform the duties required of them by statute and rules; and at the same time the courts would be relieved from their share of those proceedings.§

During the year 1874 summonses were applied for against one-fifth of the whole number of trustees acting in bankruptcies, and one trustee out of every eleven of those reported could not be found.

About 130 responsible officers and a permanent office would account for matters at present in the hands of some 20,000 scattered trustees.

* Out of 552 bankruptcies wound up in the year 1874, the assets of 223 (averaging 77 l. per estate) were thus distributed per cent.:—

Law costs	63·85
Receivers, managers, and trustees	19·21
Auctioneers and accountants	9·28
Incidental	8·64
Bankrupt	1·40
Dividend	0·00
	102·38
Due to trustees	2·38
	100·00 per cent of assets.

In 294 estates, with assets under	50 l., the law costs averaged	17	1	3
„ 294 „	„ from 50 l. to 100 l., „ „	40	16	10

‡ The amount of compositions, that is, the share of the property of debtors paid to creditors in the year 1874, was 1,485,000 l.; in bankruptcy this would represent about 70 per cent. of the "net assets" actually realised; in composition it would probably represent a much less proportion of the debtor's property if the whole of it were disclosed.

§ The greater portion of 10,000 written letters, and several times as many circulars or copies of correspondence, with a large amount of bookkeeping, may be taken to represent the preliminary duties annually required in the Comptroller's office—that is, the amount of work required to produce the accounts on which the essential duties of the office arise.

As 3,000 trustees are already under supervision, the number might undoubtedly be extended to any amount without difficulty, and without a proportionate increase of expense: that is, the additional staff which would be needed being chiefly of the junior classes of clerks, five or six times as much work would be done quite as well at probably not more than three or four times the present expense; but, as a question of economy, it would clearly be better to be entirely freed from the enormous expenses of the trustees than to create an additional expense in order to, at best, partially control them. As I have before suggested, I think that the additional expense which would be required for control would complete the staff of the collecting office.

It was anticipated that under the Act of 1861 the assets of bankruptcies would be subjected to no official charges, except stamp duties (on petitions, &c.), the whole expenses of the judicial and official staff being covered by these, and by the interest of the bankruptcy fund; and the fact that it was not so (the official assignees continuing to charge a portion of the fees they had charged under the Act of 1849) caused great disappointment and misapprehension.

It undoubtedly would have been so if bankruptcy had continued what it had been: it was rendered impossible, first, by the creditors being induced to keep all cases with assets out of the court, except a few whose very small assets added but little to the fund, while their hostile character caused large demands on its interest; second, by the abolition of insolvency adding to every one of those small bankruptcies six or seven absolutely insolvent cases, which contributed nothing whatever to the fund.

A judicial establishment was required for the administration annually of from 9,000 to 10,000 new cases of such classes in such proportions, and its expenses were chiefly defrayed by the interest of moneys belonging to the few small bankruptcies, and by further charges on their assets.

It was complained that after the creditors' assignee had done the work, the official assignee charged a percentage on the dividend, "as though no creditors' assignee existed;" but the charge was only a tax levied for the support of the general establishment, and did not at all refer to any particular work done. I am not aware that it was ever complained that the expense of annually "white-washing" (as it has been termed) several thousands of insolvents for the benefit of the public was chiefly borne by the already suffering individual creditors of a few small bankruptcies.

As these insolvent cases have disappeared with imprisonment for debt, there is nothing which could now prevent the creditors having the advantages that have been aimed at by former legislation.

I cannot help believing that by the plan I have so roughly sketched the assets of small estates would be properly realised, and the creditors would receive a fair share of them, instead of so large a portion being wasted in costly preliminaries, that frequently not enough is left either to recover further assets that might be recovered, or to afford any dividend.

I attach great importance to this, believing that the evils from which individual creditors and the public alike suffer, whether directly from increased amount of bad debts, or indirectly from the growth of immorality, arise from the aggregate of the many thousands of smaller cases (whose interests appear to have been hitherto somewhat neglected) rather than from the very small number of important cases which are nearly always respectably, though not always economically, administered.

Considering the public as unquestionably the principal and most deeply-interested creditor, and its interest being that the other creditors should receive as large a share as possible of the property of debtors, I cannot think that want of knowledge, indifference, or self-interest on the part of individual creditors, or ingenious suggestions of imaginary cases which might possibly arise, should be allowed to interfere with that general interest.

I cannot doubt that expenses judiciously incurred in furthering that interest would in the long run be more than repaid, or that, as individual creditors cannot be expected either to look beyond the present question of what will pay them best, or "to throw good money after bad" for the general interest, it would be very desirable that they should be relieved, so far as they practically could be, both from the laborious portions of the duties, and from the expenses of bankruptcy administration.

This could only be accomplished by the public having the safe custody and use use of funds which are at present as insecurely placed as they are useless to the creditors or the public.

I submit the foregoing observations for your Lordship's consideration with the more confidence, because they contain nothing that is of a novel or speculative character, being only the results of some years' further experience and careful study of bankruptcy economy, confirming opinions long since expressed, and endeavouring to select from tried systems their best features, while avoiding those which appear to have been the causes of failure.

Their real aim and purpose is to support a principle which was generally accepted, till the supposed economy of the Scotch system seemed to contradict it: namely, that reserving to the creditors or their nominees the fullest power to direct and superintend the realisation of the property of debtors, it is essential that the receipt and payment of moneys should be by an official staff—that is, by persons holding a recognised and responsible position, under proper organisation and control, with a view not only to direct economy and security, but also to the profitable employment of the very large funds awaiting distribution.

I am solely responsible for any statistics I have given, or any minor inferences I may have drawn from them; but I am authorised by Messrs. Brougham, Hackwood, and Nicol, with whom I served on your Lordship's Committee, to express their concurrence with the fundamental principle I have just stated.

I have, &c.

OF

ANNUAL REPORT,

For 1876,

OF THE

ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER OF POLICE OF THE METROPOLIS,

ON THE OPERATION OF THE CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACTS.

(Sir Henry Selwin-Ibbetson.)

Ordered, by The House of Commons, to be Printed, 11 June 1877.

REPORT.

Metropolitan Police Office, 4, Whitehall-place,
Sir, 9 April 1877.

1. In submitting, for the information of Mr. Secretary Cross, my Report for 1876 on the operation of the Contagious Diseases Acts, I have to state that the common women in the several places subject to the Acts have attended medical examination with great regularity; the average number of examinations made being 23·25, whereas in 1875 it was only 23·16.

If no cause had existed to prevent their examination, they would not have been present upon more than 26 occasions during the year.

2. The Police specially employed under the Acts have discharged their duties to my entire satisfaction; no complaint, with the exception of the charge against Inspector Anniss, in the Plymouth District, has been brought to my notice.

The charge against this inspector was that of an assault on a young girl at Mutley, near Plymouth, and the prosecution was instituted by the Society for the Repeal of the Contagious Diseases Acts. The charge was proved to be wholly groundless. It appeared, from incontestable evidence, that the inspector was not, at the time of the alleged assault, within a mile and a half of the place specified, nor at the place at all at any time during that day.

The Bench, consisting of the mayor and six other magistrates, came to an unanimous decision to dismiss the case (which had extended over two days), and told Inspector Anniss that he "left the court without a stain upon his character."

3. One thousand three hundred women have been registered for the first time during the year, many coming from the unprotected districts; yet, notwithstanding this influx, and the increase of population, the number of women remaining on the register at the end of the year was 125 less than in the preceding year; this forms a total decrease of 3,070 since the Acts came into operation.

In 4,595 cases women signed the Voluntary Submission Form; in 19 cases applications for summonses were made for non-submission, but in only 11 cases was it necessary to obtain a magistrate's order to bring these women within the provisions of the Acts. In 86 cases proceedings were taken for neglecting to attend medical examination, after signing the Voluntary Submission Form, or receiving a magistrate's order to attend.

4. Whenever a chance exists of reclaiming a woman, every effort is made before she is brought under the operation of the Acts; and after she has signed the Voluntary Submission Form, the opportunity is still given her of returning to her friends.

Seventy-four young girls (see Return No. 5) between the ages of 12 and 18, and the like number of women between the ages of 18 and 30, and five above that age, who had been found in bad company and improper places, have been rescued.

5. In addition to the above, 37 young persons (see Return No. 6), between the ages of 12 and 18, and 99 women between the ages of 18 and 30, and 10 above that age who had commenced an immoral life, abandoned it on being cautioned by the Police; their names were, therefore, not placed upon the register.

6. The number of brothels (see Return No. 3) has been reduced this year by 62, showing a total decrease of 745 brothels within the protected districts since since the Acts came into operation. Of these, 128 were public-houses, and 254 beerhouses. I regret, however, to say that there are 24 public-houses and nine beerhouses still used as brothels.

During the year 1876, 591 prostitutes are known to have come into the several districts from unprotected places; 320 (or 54·15 per cent.) of these were found to be diseased, on their first medical examination. These women, a large proportion of whom were seriously affected with venereal disease, went into brothels, where they commenced a life of prostitution, and continued to do so until discovered by the police and brought up for examination.

Strict observation has been kept upon these houses, which no doubt has deterred many women of doubtful character from resorting thereto, for fear of being brought under the provisions of the Acts.

Two keepers of brothels at Portsmouth, Amelia . . . . . and John . . . . , were summoned by police for permitting diseased prostitutes to be in their houses for the purpose of prostitution. Both were convicted: the woman was fined 5 l, or six weeks' imprisonment; the man two months' imprisonment with hard labour, without the option of a fine.

Proceedings have also been taken by the police employed under the Acts against five brothel-keepers at Plymouth.

7. One thousand six hundred and eighty common women have been registered during the year, including those re-registered (see Return No. 4), many from the unprotected districts. Of this number, 564 or 34·39 per cent., of those examined (1,640), were found to be diseased on their first examination, whilst 104 only, or 5·80 per cent., of those examined (1,792), out of 1,907 women remaining on the register on the 31st December 1875, were found to be diseased.

During the year 906 have left the districts, under the protection of the Acts; 81 have married, 231 have entered homes, 567 have been restored to friends, and 20 have died, making a total of 1,805 who have been removed from the register.

8. With regard to the general effect of the Acts, I have only to state that the continual efforts of the Police employed in carrying them out are directed to the reclamation of young girls who have begun an immoral life, and the prevention of others from adopting it. If these results are attained, besides the great result of diminishing disease, then it seems evident that the working of the Acts is beneficial.

William C. Harris,
Assistant Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.

Sir Henry Selwin Ibbetson, Bart., M.P.,
Home Office.

(a) Twenty women of the Chatham District, who were admitted into hospital before the arrangements were made for the enforcement of the Acts, are not included in this number, but are nevertheless included in the number shown as discharged from hospital, and marked (b).

(c) Five women of the Woolwich District, who were admitted into hospital before the arrangements were made for the enforcement of the Acts, are not included in this number, but are nevertheless included in the number shown as discharged from hospital, and marked (d).

(Note 1.)—All common women who were found diseased (see Column 21) were admitted into the Lock Hospitals on the certificates of the visiting surgeons, but only a portion of the known common women in the various districts where the Acts were in operation were in the first instance brought up for medical examination, the insufficiency of the hospital accommodation rendering it inexpedient to at once bring up the whole of those whom there was good cause to believe had contracted venereal disease. The Act of 1866, providing for the regular or periodical examination of common women in the different districts, came into operation on the 1st of October of that year; but, owing to the small number of beds available at the time at the different Lock Hospitals, and the large number of known common women who had not been brought under the operation of the Acts (compare the numbers in Columns 15 and 16), the women were exempted from a periodical medical examination, and the system of bringing up for examination only such known common women as there was good cause to believe to be affected with venereal disease continued to remain in force until the year 1868, at which time, the hospital accommodation being greatly increased, the whole of the known common women in the several districts were ordered to be placed on the register. The registration was however gradual, and the periodical medical examinations, which had been instituted in such districts where it was considered practicable, were necessarily irregular, in consequence of the large number of women found to be diseased (see figures in Column 21, for the years 1868 and 1869). It was therefore not until the commencement of the year 1870 that a complete registration was made, since which time the women have, in nearly all cases, undergone a fortnightly periodical medical examination. The number of beds available for occupation in the several hospitals on the 31st of December of each year was as follows :—

register at the end of the preceding year, and who consequently were brought forward on the register on the 1st day of the succeeding year; 9 is the total of Columns 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 8, and shows the number of registrations made during the year.

(Note 4.)—Removals from the Register.—Columns 10, 11, 12, 13, and 14 show the number of cases in which women were removed from the register, and the cause of such removals; in these totals are included those figures shown in Column 24.

(Note 5.)—Women remaining on the Register.—The numbers in Column 15 are arrived at by deducting the total of those shown in 10, 11, 12, 13, and 14 from the numbers shown in Column 9.

(Note 6.)—Known Common Women.—The first number (3,418) shown in Column 16 is the number of common women known to have been in the Portsmouth, Devonport, Sheerness, and Chatham Districts when the Acts were first put in operation; the succeeding numbers show the number of known common women in the various districts on the 31st December of each year. (For further information, see note to Return 2.)

(Note 7.)—Medical Examinations.—Column 17 is merely the number of individual women which attended medical examination; 18 shows the number of cases in which women voluntarily signed the Submission Form during the year on discharge from hospital, leaving Homes, &c., and practising prostitution, as also newcomers; 19 is the number of cases in which women who were leading the life of prostitutes refused to sign the Submission Form, and received magistrates' orders to attend for medical examination; 20 is the number of cases in which women were found free from disease; 21 is the number found diseased and admitted into hospital on certificates of visiting surgeons; and 22 is the total number of cases in which women were medically examined.

(Note 8.)—Admissions to Hospital, &c.—Column 23 contains the number of cases in which women returned to their former pursuits on being discharged from hospital cured; 24 those who returned to their friends, entered Homes, &c., on discharge from hospital. Column 25 shows the number of women discharged from hospital incurable within the period prescribed by the Acts. The figures in Column 26 are the number of women remaining in hospital at the end of each year, and may be arrived at as follows: add together the figures in Columns 23, 24, and 25 for the year 1864, and deduct the total from the 18 shown in Column 21 as admitted into hospital for that year, thus leaving 12; add the 12 which is in Column 26 to the 783 fresh admissions shown in Column 21 for 1865, which increases it to 795; then add together the figures in Columns 23, 24, and 25, which forms a total of 697 to be deducted from the 795; thus leaving 98 women as remaining in hospital at the end of the year 1865; but as 20 women are included in Column 23, and not in Column 21 (see notes (a) and (b)), this number must be added to the 98, thereby increasing it to 118.

(Note 9.)—Summonses.—Column 27 shows the number of cases in which common women persistently continued to practise prostitution, and would not sign the Submission Form; these women had the option of signing the Submission Form, or being proceeded against by information before the magistrates, or of ceasing prostitution, when they would no longer be amenable to the provisions of the Acts. Those which did not appear before the magistrates, subsequently signed the Submission Form, or returned to their friends, or entered Homes, &c.; the latter were consequently removed from the register. For the number in which magistrates' orders were made, see Column 19. Column 28 shows the number of cases in which women were proceeded against by summons before the magistrates for not attending medical examination.

(Note 10.)—Average Number of Women on the Register.—Column 30 is the weekly average number of women on the register during the time the Acts have been in operation, and forms the basis upon which the calculation is made to find the amount of venereal disease existing amongst every 100 of women who were continuously on the register during the year; the necessary correction being made in calculating the rates for broken periods to reduce it to an annual average.

(Note 11.)—Per-centages of Disease.—Column 31 is the amount of disease existing amongst every 100 of women who were continuously on the register throughout the year, and is calculated upon the annual average of women upon the register; 32 gives the amount of disease existing amongst every 100 of registrations made in the course of the year, and is calculated upon the total number of registrations made throughout the year (vide figures in Column 9); 33 gives the amount of disease existing amongst every 100 cases in which women were medically examined during the year, and is calculated upon the total number of examinations made by the visiting surgeons throughout the year (see figures in Column 22).

* For the number of common women known to have been in the several districts on the 31st December of each year (see Form No. 1, Column 16).

Note. (1.)—The entire number of known common women was not apparently obtained for the Chatham, Aldershot, and Windsor Districts until th Acts were fully developed, and the whole of the common women in these districts had been registered and brought under the operation of the Acts; th registration of the women only taking place as hospital accommodation was provided.

(2.) The first total in Column 13 signifies the number of known common women in the Portsmouth, Devonport, Sheerness, and Chatham Districts a the time when the Contagious Diseases Acts were first put in operation; this information was obtained by inquiry and observation of the police. I Portsmouth the number was obtained from the borough police, but as no "Register of Ages" was kept at that time, the ages of the 1,355 women fo this district cannot be given. The succeeding totals show the number of known common women on the 31st of December of each year in the old district adding the ages of those common women known to have been in each new district at the time the Acts were extended thereto.

(3.) In the year 1865 the Acts were but partially in operation in the Portsmouth, Devonport, Sheerness, and Chatham Districts, and the operatio of the Acts was, to a certain extent, hindered by the great want of hospital accommodation; no perceptible reduction being observed, at these place during the year in the total number of known common women, which still remained at 3,418.

To arrive at a correct conclusion as to the reduction which has taken place from year to year in the number of known common women, the number i each new district at the time the Acts were extended thereto must be added to those known to have been in the older districts on the 31st of Decembe of the previous year.

In 1866 the Woolwich District was included; by taking the number of known common women in the Portsmouth, Devonport, Sheerness, and Chatha Districts, viz., 3,418, and adding thereto the 240 women belonging to Woolwich, the number would be increased to 3,658 common women known to hav been in these districts during the year 1866: such, however, was the immediate effects of the more complete development of the Acts, that the numbe of known common women in these districts was found, on the 31st December of that year, i. e. 1866, to have been reduced to 2,613.

Aldershot, with 266 women, was included during the year 1867; this increased the number (2,613) to 2,879, as against the reduced number of 2,57 on the 31st December 1867.

The districts of Windsor with 54 women, and Shorncliffe with 70, were included during the year 1868; these numbers added to the 2,579 commo women known to have been in the older districts on the 31st December 1867, increases the number to 2,703, but the number was reduced to 2,523 o the 31st December of that year, and this, too, notwithstanding an increase in the numbers in some of the districts (vide Note 1).

The Colchester District, with 158 known common women, was included during the year 1869, and by adding this number to the 2,523 common wome known to have been in the older districts on the 31st December 1868, the number is increased to 2,681, as against the reduced number of 2,489 on th 31st December 1869.

During the year 1870 the following districts were included: Greenwich with 151 known common women, Winchester 76, Dover 92, Canterbury 4 Deal 26, Maidstone 58, Gravesend 47, and Southampton 154; the totals of these numbers (646) added to the 2,489 common women known to have be in the older districts on the 31st December 1869, increases that number to 3,135, as against the reduced number of 2,650 known common women in th various districts on the 31st December 1870.

The Acts have not been extended since 1870, but a steady diminution in the numbers has nevertheless taken place; the numbers of known comm women at the end of the year 1871 being 2,411, as against 2,650 on the 31st December 1870; 2,290 on the 31st December 1872; 2,121 on the 31 December 1873; 2,072 on the 31st December 1874; 1,907 on the 31st December 1875; and on the 31st December 1876, the total number of all t known common women in the several districts had decreased to 1,782.

(4.) The reduction in the number of known common women in the various districts at the present time (as compared with the number of know common women practising prostitution in each respective district at the time the Acts were first put in operation) is from 4,852 to 1,782, thus showi a decrease of 3,070 to have been effected (in the places named) since the Acts have been in operation. The reduction which has taken place each ye is as follows:—

This forms a total decrease of 3,070.

† In many instances the solicitors agreed upon the costs, and settled the cases out of Court; consequently, they are not included in this Return.

An allowance for clerk hire is only made where the number of plaints entered in the Court in a year exceed 6,000, and then only for the duties ed to be performed prior to 1857, and for which the salary is alone payable under the statutes quoted. For the additional duties imposed by Acts quent to that year fees are given, out of which the Registrars pay clerk hire in respect of such duties. In Courts in which the plaints do NOT number in a year, the Registrars pay out of the salary allowed by the above quoted statutes for clerk hire.

MESSRS. COWING AND DEADMAN.

RETURN to an Order of the Honourable The House of Commons, dated 6 July 1877;—for,

COPY "of REPORT addressed by the Solicitor to the Treasury to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, as to the PROCEEDINGS in the Case of Messrs. Cowing and Deadman."

Treasury Chambers, Whitehall, 6 July 1877.

W. H. SMITH.

The Solicitor to the Treasury to the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Sir Treasury, 4 July 1877.

IN obedience to your directions that I should state, for your information, the circumstances under which the persons named in the question of Mr. Boord have been arrested and released,—

"Mr. Boord—To ask the Secretary of State for the War Department, "whether the recent arrest of two persons named Cowing and Deadman, "at the suit of the War Department (or the Crown), decided by the judg- "ment of the Court of Exchequer to have been effected on illegal process, "was sanctioned by Her Majesty's Government; and, if so, whether he is "prepared to make adequate compensation to the persons arrested in "respect of their illegal imprisonment,"

I have the honour to report that the two persons, Cowing and Deadman, together with a third, named Wilkie, were the plaintiffs in an Action brought against the Secretary of State for War, and the suppliants in a Petition of Right to Her Majesty, which Action and Petition came on for hearing before the Master of the Rolls in January last, with the result below stated.

The proceedings were instituted by "The Commons Protection League," in the names of the three persons above-named as plaintiffs and suppliants, "on behalf of themselves and all others the Commoners of the Manor of Plumstead."

In the Action the Secretary of State was made defendant, and an injunction was asked for to restrain Her Majesty's Artillery from exercising on Plumstead Common. The Secretary of State demurred to the statement of claim, and also opposed the motion for this injunction.

In the Petition of Right the Attorney General demurred on behalf of Her Majesty.

The motion for the injunction and the argument on the demurrers came on together before the Master of the Rolls on the 22nd January 1877.

A transcript of the shorthand writer's notes of the Argument and Judgment is annexed to this Report. (a)

His Lordship refused the injunction with costs against the plaintiffs, and allowed the demurrers with costs against the suppliants, thus deciding on all points against them.

After going fully into the facts and law, in his Judgment, in the Action, he says:—

"The thing is so preposterous that really it does not require further discussion."

* * * *

"I am

(a) This will be issued as a further Paper.

"I am asked to entertain an injunction which, even if they had the real "defendant here, would prevent the Queen's officers from obeying Her Majesty's "lawful commands. I am at a loss to know how far this extravagance is to "go, if such an injunction can be fairly discussed and supported by argument.

* * * *

"On the whole, I am of opinion that the application is a useless and vain "experiment, and, except that it looks like an elaborate joke, rather disrespectful "to the Court (I am by no means imputing that intention to the learned Counsel "who argued it), I do not think it worthy of further serious discussion, and "therefore I allow the demurrer."

On the Demurrer to the Petition of Right, his Lordship says:—

"If any of the Queen's subjects by Her command or authority have com- "mitted a wrongful act, the remedy must be sought elsewhere in the ordinary "courts of justice upon the general ground." * * * "It "does not prevent some proper application being made if there is anybody "whose rights are interfered with. I do not think your clients have any right "whatever; if I thought they had, I should take care that they should have a "mode of trying them."

The Defendants' costs in the Action were taxed at - - -	93	18	2
The Respondents' costs in the Petition were taxed at - -	118	9	2
TOTAL - - -	£.212	7	4

An ordinary writ of Fi. Fa. out of the Court of Chancery was obtained in ordinary course, to levy on the goods of the plaintiffs and suppliants, when it was found that Wilkie and Deadman had executed bills of sale of their goods.

Wilkie's bill of sale was in favour of one G. D. Laycock, to secure 30 l. alleged to have been advanced. Deadman's was in favour of Mr. Kimber, his solicitor, to secure Mr. Kimber's costs, Mr. Kimber being the solicitor acting for the League. Cowing had secured his premises against entry by the Sheriff.

The Sheriff interpleaded as regards Wilkie, with the intention that Deadman's case should follow the result of the interpleader; but as the assignment to Laycock could not be successfully contested, the Sheriff withdrew, and the same course was taken with respect to Deadman.

Thereupon the course which is always taken when practicable with respect to Crown debtors was taken. An application was made to a Judge at Chambers for an immediate "Writ of Extent," which was granted. The writ was executed, and the debtors, Cowing and Deadman, were arrested by the Sheriff, one on the 12th, and the other on the 14th June.

Cowing is a carpenter, of Bleak House, Plumstead.

Wilkie is a smith, of Palmerston-road, Plumstead.

Deadman is a traveller, of Inverary Cottages, Plumstead.

Deadman, when arrested, assaulted the officer, who thereupon handcuffed him.

The officer was asked for an explanation of this proceeding.

The following is a copy of his letter, explaining the circumstances:—

REGINA v. COWING AND OTHERS.

Jessamine Villa, Devonshire-road, Greenwich,
19 June 1877.

Gentlemen,

IN reply to your letter of the 16th instant, I beg to inform you that on the 12th instant, on my arresting or attempting to arrest the defendant, Deadman, he resisted and escaped, and in so doing struck me in the stomach; my assistants and a police officer immediately pursued, and called out to two persons to stop Deadman; but he held up his stick in a threatening way, and they allowed him to pass, and it was not until the 14th instant that I secured him. He is a tall powerful man, and, as I had reason to expect violent resistance from him and others, to prevent his being taken to gaol, I deemed it absolutely necessary to adopt the precaution of handcuffing him.

Yours, &c.

Messrs. Hare & Fell. (signed) Richd. M. Smith.

On

On the 25th June a letter was received from Mr. Kimber, which appeared in the Times newspaper of the following day, as follows:—

PLUMSTEAD COMMON.—With reference to the arrest of two men for non-payment of costs in the action of the "Plumstead Commoners v. the War Secretary," Mr. Kimber, solicitor to the Plumstead Common Protection League, has sent the following letter to Messrs. Hare & Fell, Crown Agents:—"Dear Sirs,—Having been advised by several counsel that the arrest of the two defendants, Cowing and Deadman, is utterly illegal, I beg to give you notice that on Tuesday next, at 7 o'clock in the evening, in Beresford-square, Woolwich, the other defendant, Robert Wilkie, will surrender himself for arrest, when and where such arrest will be resisted by force. And as the Commons Protection League look upon the whole proceedings of the Government relating to Plumstead Common as nothing but an opposition of lawless, oligarchical, and bureaucratical tyranny and oppression, they will, with all the aid they can command, resist such arrest, so that if you wish to effect it Her Majesty's Government may find it more than necessary to call in the aid of all the available police of the metropolis, backed by all the artillery in Woolwich. In the meantime application will be made to the Court for the immediate release of the other defendants, who will hold you and the Sheriff personally responsible in damages for their illegal arrest and imprisonment.—Yours truly, E. KIMBER."

To which the following reply, which did not appear in the newspapers, was sent:—

REG. v. COWING AND OTHERS.

19, Surrey-street, Victoria Embankment,
London, W.C., 25 June 1877.

Dear Sir,

IN reply to your letter of the 23rd instant, you must be aware that the time within which the Sheriff was to execute the Writ of Extent and make his return has expired, and that the writ cannot now be acted upon.

As two of the defendants have been arrested, it is not at present intended to incur the expense of issuing a second writ for the arrest of the third defendant.

Yours, &c.

22, Queen-street, City, E.C.

On the 23rd of June an application was made to the Queen's Bench Division, which appears to have been renewed on the 25th, to the Exchequer Division of the High Court of Justice, for a rule calling upon the Secretary of State and the Attorney General to show cause why the Writ of Extent should not be set aside.

A rule nisi was granted, and the law officers were instructed to appear on the argument, the rule being made returnable on the 28th June.

In the meantime, however, representations appear to have been made by several Members of Parliament to Her Majesty's Government for the release of Cowing and Deadman.

These representations were acceded to, and Cowing and Deadman were released, by warrant from the Home Secretary, on the evening of the 27th June.

On the following day (June 28th) the Attorney General appeared in court, stated the fact of the release of the men, and declined to argue the rule.

A transcript of the shorthand writer's notes of the proceedings in court is sent herewith.

The Attorney General said: "Under the Petition of Right Act, the Crown is "entitled to costs; judgment was entered up for the costs. It has become a "debt of record to the Crown, and I maintain that the Crown has a right to "issue the Writ of Extent to recover costs. That is a question of some nicety. "But I do not feel that I should be justified in troubling your lordships with "any argument on the matter. As the Government thought right to listen to "the application made to them, and has released these men, I shall not argue "the matter, but I shall consent to the writ being set aside."

Mr. Baron Cleasby said: "I think that seems to be a very proper "course, because, as they are discharged, this ought not to be left hanging over "them."

The rule was thereupon made absolute to set aside the Writ of Extent.

Mr. Kimber has since written threatening an action for illegal imprisonment, and stating that his clients claim 1,000 l. (one thousand pounds) damages.

It may reasonably be presumed that before these three persons consented to the use of their names as nominal plaintiffs and suppliants in these proceedings by

by the Commons Protection League, they would have received some assurance that they would not be liable for any legal expenses, or that the League would hold them harmless should they be condemned in costs.

However that may be, the costs awarded by the Master of the Rolls have not been paid, either by these persons, or by the League, or by anybody on their behalf.

These taxed costs, together with all the expenses incurred in these proceedings, fall upon the public, and have to be paid out of the Parliamentary Vote for Law Charges for the Treasury Solicitor's Department.

It will be perceived that these persons have been dealt with as ordinary Crown debtors.

The proceedings against them have been taken in due course of law, in the ordinary way.

No special directions have been given by Her Majesty's Government with respect to the proceedings in these cases, or with respect to these persons.

It is under the circumstances above set out that, in the words of the question, "the arrest has been decided by the judgment of the Exchequer to have been "effected upon illegal process," and "that the arrest was not sanctioned by Her "Majesty's Government."

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.—CHANCERY DIVISION.

ROLLS COURT.

BEFORE THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS, 22nd JANUARY 1877.

Cowing and Others v. Her Majesty's Secretary of State for War.

(Transcript from the Shorthand Notes of Messrs. Hurst & Hurst.)

The Solicitor General.] THERE are two of these cases, my Lord. I observe the order has been inverted for some reason or other. The second is the earlier in point of date.

The Master of the Rolls.] Are the same counsel engaged in both?

Mr. Marten.] Yes, my Lord.

The Master of the Rolls.] You can open which you like.

The Solicitor General.] If your Lordship pleases.

The Master of the Rolls.] Do they relate to the same matter?

The Solicitor General.] Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Marten.] The petition of right was instituted in consequence of your Lordship's decision, that an action against the Secretary of State would not do without a petition of right.

The Master of the Rolls.] I never decided that.

The Solicitor General.] That is not quite the way in which I should state the effect of your Lordship's decision.

The Master of the Rolls.] I simply decided that the suit could not in my opinion be maintained.

Mr. Marten.] However, your Lordship refused the motion.

The Master of the Rolls.] Yes, on that ground. It is something about Plumstead Common.

The Solicitor General.] Yes, my Lord.

The Master of the Rolls.] I remember it; you want to take Cowing v. the Secretary of State for War first.

The Solicitor General.] If your Lordship pleases.

Now, my Lord, this is "between Robert Thomas Cowing, Robert Walkie, and Joseph Alexander Deadman, on behalf of themselves and all other the commoners of the manor of Plumstead, in the county of Kent, plaintiffs, and Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department, defendant."

The first paragraph of the statement of claim alleges that, "the plaintiffs are commoners entitled to use and exercise common rights over the common land of the manor of Plumstead, in the county of Kent."

In the second paragraph it states some proceedings which were taken by Warwick and others in the Court of Chancery against the Provost and Scholars of Queen's College, Oxford.

Then it sets out in the third paragraph that after the order recited in the second paragraph in the month of August 1873, the lords of the manor granted to Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department a lease of the greater portion of the common lands of the manor upon certain terms.

Then the 4th allegation is this: "Under and by virtue of the said lease, Her Majesty's said Principal Secretary of State has caused Her Majesty's Artillery to parade, drill, and trample heavy guns, horses, and carriages upon the said common lands, whereby the pasturage thereon has been utterly destroyed, and the plaintiffs and the commoners of the said manor have been thereby deprived of the use and enjoyment of their common rights over and upon the said common lands.

I will call your Lordship's particular attention to the statement in the 5th paragraph, because I cannot help thinking it has been so framed as to avoid stating that the plaintiff, Robert Wilkie, is a freehold tenant of the manor, although, no doubt, if one did know a little more about these matters than appears from the face of the record, one from ordinary intendment would suppose that that was what he meant to convey, but the language is really specially selected to be applicable to this condition of things, that he is a freehold tenant of somebody, and that he is locally surrounded by that which is the manor.

The 6th paragraph alleges that the Plaintiffs presented their Petition of Right to the Queen, and so on.

Then the 7th paragraph is this: "Woolwich Common, which is nearer the barracks of the said Artillery, a much more commodious and convenient place for their exercises, and the cutting up of the said Common at Plumstead is a great grievance, and a source of great irritation and disturbance to the Plaintiffs and the other commoners of the said manor."

Then the Plaintiffs' claim is, "For an injunction to restrain Her Majesty's Artillery from drilling or exercising upon the said Common, and to restrain the Defendant and all officers and servants under him, or any officer accepting orders from Her Majesty under or upon his advice, from drilling or exercising the said Artillery or other troops upon the said Common." And secondly, "That damages may be awarded to the commoners of the said manor for the destruction of the herbage and pasturage thereon by the said Artillery or other troops as aforesaid.

The Master of the Rolls.] You do not demur upon the ground that it is an attempt to prevent the Queen or her Artillery from going there?

Mr. Marten.] No, my Lord.

The Solicitor General.] I suppose that is open upon the demurrer. Every ground which appears upon the record will be open to us.

The Master of the Rolls.] I suppose it is, but it is very odd that you should not demur upon that ground.

The Solicitor General.] It is a very obvious one, I must say.

The Master of the Rolls.] Yes.

The Solicitor General.] The first objection that arises to this claim is upon the surface.

The Master of the Rolls.] It is all a question of surface, is it not?

The Solicitor General.] Yes, my Lord; Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department is, for certain purposes, by Act of Parliament, a corporation sole.

Mr. Marten.] In Warrick's case they went a great deal below the surface.

The Solicitor General.] For the purpose of the present litigants it is idle to bring an action against Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for War.

The Master of the Rolls.] It is said that the Secretary of State for War did it under and by virtue of a lease which you took. You took the lease from the corporation sole.

The Solicitor General.] I should have thought that would hardly have made any difference, because whatever the question is which may arise as to the rights of the lessor and the lessee, none of Her Majesty's subjects can sue Her Secretary of State for War by reason of acts done by command of Her Majesty, and make the Secretary of State for War a defendant to an action.

The Master of the Rolls.] I should have thought so.

The Solicitor General.] It certainly does not require an elaborate argument to show that.

The Master of the Rolls.] I should think not. I think, Mr. Marten, I must call upon you. It is a suit against the Executive Government of the country.

Mr. Marten.] I submit not, my Lord.

The Master of the Rolls.] It is Her Majesty's Artillery.

Mr. Marten.] The Attorney General has admitted the statement in paragraph 4, that the Principal Secretary of State has caused this to be done.

The Master of the Rolls.] You cannot sue him. You do not say he has caused this to be done as an individual, but as one of the Principal Secretaries of State.

The Solicitor General.] Of course.

Mr. Marten.] It is merely a question of——.

The Master of the Rolls.] The Secretary of State for War is only a servant of the Queen.

Mr. Marten.] No doubt, but being a servant of the Queen does not entitle him to do a wrongful act. Of course he takes this lease as a corporation sole.

The Master of the Rolls.] I have no allegation of its being a wrongful act at all. It is alleged that Her Majesty's Artillery have damaged the Common; there is no allegation that the Principal Secretary of State for War was not acting in the performance of his duty. Your statement is perfectly consistent with the fact of a foreign enemy having landed immediately opposite the Common, and the salvation of the country requiring that Her Majesty's Artillery should go upon the Common.

Mr. Marten.] I am not prepared to say that the Court could take judicial notice that that fact has not happened.

The Master of the Rolls.] I do not know what judicial notice I should take.

Mr. Marten.] That would be a matter of plea.

The Master of the Rolls.] Not at all.

Mr. Marten.] Take the case of an action by a man in the case of troops occupying his own garden.

The Master of the Rolls.] You have not alleged that he is doing anything wrong. You have said that the effect of what he has done has been very unpleasant to you.

Mr. Marten.] If your Lordship will look at the last three lines of paragraph 4, you will see that it alleges that the plaintiffs and the commoners of the manor have been deprived the use and enjoyment of their common rights.

The Master of the Rolls.] It might be very unpleasant to you if Her Majesty's Artillery fired their cannon in the immediate vicinity of your dwelling for the purpose of repulsing a foreign enemy.

Mr. Marten.] But unless there is an allegation that it is for the purpose of repulsing a foreign enemy they must not do it. It is like the case of the volunteers, in which an injunction was granted to restrain the volunteers from firing their guns guns in such a way as to injure a man in the occupation of.

The Master of the Rolls.] The real thing is that you are suing the Executive Government of the country.

Mr. Marten.] I am suing the person who took the lease as a corporation sole.

The Master of the Rolls.] The demurrer says that he took the lease for a limited purpose.

Mr. Marten.] No doubt he takes the lease as the agent of the Crown, but then I suppose what sufficiently appears upon this statement of claim must be taken to be true for the present purpose, is that he succeeds to the rights conferred upon his predecessors under the lease.

The Master of the Rolls.] Have you an Act of Parliament which authorises you to sue him on behalf of the Crown?

Mr. Marten.] This is the way in which I shall put it. He is clearly, under the Act of Parliament, a corporation sole; your Lordship argued some of those cases as a law officer of the Crown, and therefore you are perfectly familiar with them independently of your general knowledge of the law.

The Master of the Rolls.] The subject was very much considered in the case which was called the Chancery Ditch case.

Mr. Marten.] That was Filkin v. Lord Herbert.

The Master of the Rolls.] Yes, he consented to what was being done there.

Mr. Marten.] There was no objection. In the Chancery Ditch case there were successive officers of the Crown.

The Master of the Rolls.] Yes, I have had occasion to look into it.

Mr. Marten.] One was Sir George Cornewall Lewis.

The Master of the Rolls.] I had occasion to look into, in another case.

Mr. Marten.] Yes; your Lordship had occasion to look into it in the case of Kirk v. The Queen, which is in the 14th Equity Cases. That was a contest between a contractor and the Secretary of State for War. There the objection was taken that the Secretary of State for War should have been a party to the information. Then there was what I suppose may be called the cross-suit of Kirk v. The Queen, by petition of right. The nature of the petition of right was that, although under the terms of the contract (as I understand the petition of right) of officers of Her Majesty might forfeit the contract, and do what they have done; yet that was acting oppressively, and in a way that should not have been suffered, and accordingly he might be entitled to some relief upon that footing; I do not know whether that case came to a hearing.

The Master of the Rolls.] No, I should think not; it was a most hopeless case.

Mr. Marten.] Your Lordship at that time was counsel for the Crown.

The Master of the Rolls.] I do not think anything more came of it.

Mr. Marten.] But your Lordship was not successful in your motion.

The Master of the Rolls.] The fact was that Kirk would not pay any costs, and that fact was communicated to the law officers of the Crown, and they said, we will try to get rid of him by a short-cut, but we did not succeed; it was a hopeless case, and therefore it will be useless our going on, because nothing would come of it and we should only lose our costs.

Mr. Marten.] I take it that the meaning of the case was that the Crown was at liberty to resume possession.

The Master of the Rolls.] We did resume possession. I did not like to advise the Crown to send a couple of soldiers down to take possession of the barracks without the judge's sanction.

Mr. Marten.] That is what your Lordship says in argument.

The Master of the Rolls.] I thought it was not respectful to the Court to do so, but then I asked the judge whether we might, and he said "Yes," whereupon we did.

Mr. Marten.] Your Lordship says, in argument, in reply: "In this case it is impossible to ascertain the injury to the Government, but it would be a source of great regret if this Court should come to the conclusion that it has only one way of recovering possession, viz., by force, by the aid of a body of Sappers and Miners."

The Master of the Rolls.] That was the result.

Mr. Marten.] There was a preliminary objection taken to this, that the Secretary of State for War ought to have been a party. Then your Lordship said, "If the object that the Secretary of State for War should have been a party to our information is pressed, we will make him a party, as the trustee in whom the land vested for the Crown."

The Solicitor General.] That is the party who claims it.

Mr. Marten.] Yes. The Vice Chancellor thereupon said, "As a general rule, a Secretary of State is an agent for the Crown, but that does not apply to the Secretary of State for War, who is a corporation."

The Master of the Rolls.] Quâ corporation. He is something more than a corporation, he is also an officer of the Crown. He is not a corporation for all purposes.

The Solicitor General.] Only for certain purposes defined by the Ordnance Acts.

Mr. Marten.] A corporation sole does not cease to be an individual person.

The Master of the Rolls.] I should think a corporation sole would object if he was an individual person. Quâ corporation he is not.

Mr. Marten.] It is sufficient, under the Judicature Act, to call the person by name of his firm, or by any name, so long as he is identified.

The Master of the Rolls.] Yes.

Mr. Marten.] Thereupon the real name would not be of importance.

The Master of the Rolls.] But you see, Mr. Marten, you do pretend by your Bill that the Secretary of State for War is in command of Her Majesty's Artillery. The ordinary functions of a Minister of State are within a judicial knowledge; there is no allegation that the Secretary of War orders the Artillery to drill, and if there were, I should not give any credit to it, because there are things within judicial knowledge. That the Secretary of State is a Minister of the Crown is within judicial knowledge.

Mr. Marten.] Your Lordship will give a construction to this statement of claim consistent with your Lordship's judicial knowledge. The result, then, would be, that the Secretary of State, as an individual, is availing himself of his power as lessee to do acts which are in derogation of the rights of the commoners.

The Master of the Rolls.] But the Crown is committing the act.

Mr. Marten.] No, my Lord.

The Master of the Rolls.] Her Majesty's Artillery are exercising. If they choose to come, and he does not choose to prevent them, that is another matter. He says this covers him.

Mr. Marten.] He has caused it.

The Master of the Rolls.] I do not know how.

Mr. Marten.] It must be assumed that he has done so in some way or other, because your Lordship takes judicial knowledge of the way in which the troops are commanded.

The Master of the Rolls.] But my judicial knowledge tells me that this is nonsense: "Under and by virtue of the said lease, Her Majesty's said Principal Secretary of State has caused Her Majesty's Artillery to parade, drill, and trample heavy guns, horses, and carriages upon the said common lands." He cannot under a lease have caused the Artillery to drill.

Mr. Marten.] Under and by virtue of the lease the Secretary of State has done so; that is to say, as I understand, the Secretary of State avails himself of his position as lessee.

The Master of the Rolls.] He can only allow them to drill. He has not the command of the Artillery. He cannot have caused them to drill.

Mr. Marten.] He may have gone there.

The Master of the Rolls.] He has permitted the drilling.

Mr. Marten.] He is a servant of the Crown, and has caused it to be done.

The Master of the Rolls.] How can the Secretary of State cause them to drill? They will not drill without the command of their commanding officer.

Mr. Marten.] He can do all lawful acts to cause them to drill.

The Master of the Rolls.] Can he order the Artillery to drill?

Mr. Marten.] As the responsible Minister of the Crown, if he gave a wrongful order, the Artillery would obey it.

The Master of the Rolls.] Then you think he commands the Artillery in person?

Mr. Marten.] No, my Lord; he does not command the Artillery in person, but he directs the commanding officer to do it.

The Master of the Rolls.] That is the same thing. He has for this purpose, you say, received the sanction of the Commander in Chief. If he did, it would be for Her Majesty to complain, and not you.

Mr. Marten.] Suppose the Secretary of State directed the Commander in Chief to send a file of soldiers into a person's house, contrary to the Billeting Act?

The Master of the Rolls.] I suppose the Commander in Chief would not obey the order, seeing that he would be personally responsible.

Mr. Marten.] I do not say that the Commander in Chief would not be responsible here. There is a sufficient allegation that the Secretary of State has done a wrongful act. It is a tort. The Crown is not responsible for a mere tort; therefore the act is an entirely wrongful act. The lease was granted to the Secretary of State as a coporation sole, but he is acting now wrongfully in an individual capacity. I say the Secretary of State is just as much responsible as if he gave a personal order to send these troops on to the Common, and in pursuance of that order the troops had gone on. The Commander in Chief supposed that the Secretary of State had a right to send them; at all events, the Secretary of State in some way individually acting wrongfully as a servant of the Crown, has sent these troops on to the Common. If they have gone there in obedience to that order, surely, if it is to be assumed that his sending of the troops on to the Common was a wrongful act, then everybody who took part in that wrongful act was responsible. The Secretary of State was the person who originally caused the wrong to be done. The statement of claim alleges the wrong to have been done; the statement of claim alleges the rights, and states the decree which established the right, and then it alleges that what has been done by the Secretary of State's order has deprived them of the use and enjoyment of their rights. We are on demurrer here; surely there is sufficient disclosed in the Case to show that at the hearing some relief may be obtained against the Secretary of State individually, or in his capacity as corporation sole. It is not necessary for me to say that he should be merely sued in his capacity as corporation sole, because that would merely relate to private proprietary rights, as to which we must not go against the Queen. But a corporation sole has a double character. If you sue a corporation sole, take the case of a rector, you can sue him in his individual name, or if you sue him by his title of rector, that sufficiently identifies him. If you show the injury done by his own personal misconduct, you might at the hearing obtain your relief. You would not at the hearing have your action dismissed upon the ground that he was simply called rector, instead of being sued as the Reverend A.B. I say at the hearing; the statement of claim when it is looked at merely discloses this kind of case. A person who is a corporation sole holds a lease and certain rights, and he wrongfully, in his individual capacity, has availed himself of that position as a corporation sole to commit acts of trespass affecting proprietary rights. That being so, those proprietary rights which are interfered with are sufficiently shown on the statement of claim to be commonable rights. The nature of the injury committed is by causing bodies of persons, without authority, to go upon the ground and trample it up and down. It is the collecting of large crowds of persons. Large crowds of persons under his direction trample upon the ground. A military force is only an authorised crowd. He collects large bodies of persons, and does the injury by means of these calculations, as we say, wrongfully.

The Master of the Rolls.] I had occasion to look into the law upon this subject. There was a Case that I argued as Her Majesty's Solicitor General in the Queen's Bench, which must be reported somewhere; I do not remember the Case at this moment.

Mr. Marten.] It was, no doubt, the Case with regard to the business of the Treasury.

The Solicitor General.] It was an application to the Queen's Bench for a Rule, calling upon the Commissioners of the Treasury to show cause why a mandamus should not issue, commanding them to issue a Treasury Minute to pay certain sums which had been disallowed.

Mr. Rigby.] It is reported in the 7th Law Reports, Queen's Bench, page 387.

Mr. Marten.] In that Case there is no doubt that there are prerogative acts which are done under the responsibility of the Lords of the Treasury, and in their discretion. That is an entirely different Case from the Case of Kirk v.

The

The Queen, where something was alleged to have been done which was beyond the scope of their office.

Take the case of sheriffs who exceed their rights; they are officers of the Crown, and actions are brought against them for whatever they do wrongfully; so that with regard to the Lords of the Treasury, if they had been doing something which was not within the scope of their authority, as I understand, they would have been held responsible. As I understand, the distinction is this: an officer of the Crown making a wrongful use of the discretion vested in him for the purpose of the Crown is only answerable to Parliament; I think that was the argument which your Lordship put in your argument of the case, that he is not subject to a mandamus for doing his duty. That was a case of a non-fulfilment of a duty; if the Lords of the Treasury are acting in the wrongful exercise of their discretion, then they are only answerable to Parliament, where the matter must be discussed. But that was not the case of a petition of right; it was the case of a mandamus. A mandamus is a prerogative right of a very different description from a petition of right. I do not know that that case decides that a petition of right there might not have been jurisdiction to grant relief. The cases with regard to petitions of right have been a great deal discussed lately. Your Lordship is aware that in the case of Thomas v. The Queen, which is in the 10th Law Report, Queen's Bench, page 31, it was held that "a petition of right will lie for a breach of contract resulting in unliquidated damages."

The Master of the Rolls.] That is not the case of a tort. No case has been produced where there was a petition of right for a tort.

The Solicitor General.] No, it was the other way.

The Master of the Rolls.] In all the old cases of amoveas manus no case of tort could be found.

Mr. Marten.] This is a question as to the individual against whom we have our remedy. Your Lordship, in that case of Kirk v. The Queen, in reply, said, with regard to tort: "But one word as to the petition of right; this case is either fraud, or it is nothing; it is a tort. As I understand the decisions, they come to this: you cannot sue the Crown in respect of tort; you can sue a servant or agent of the Crown; the Crown can commit no wrong; if anybody commits a wrong, it is not by command of the Queen; consequently, if you sue the agent who has done the wrong, he cannot set up his agency as a justification for committing the wrong. If the Secretary of State has committed a wrong, you cannot sue him as a servant of the Queen; but you can sue him as a man who calls himself the servant of the Queen, though he is acting in another capacity. It is not that the subject is without remedy, but that he cannot sue the Queen; she has not authorised the wrong, she cannot do the wrong; and if any person alleging himself to be her servant or agent does a wrong, he is personally and individually liable. Cases for 'tort' and 'damages for breach of contract' have been often confused. The Crown may perhaps be sued for breach of contract in not accepting goods, but that is not strictly a 'tort.'"

The Master of the Rolls.] That was afterwards decided to be so.

Mr. Marten.] That was afterwards decided to be so, my Lord; your Lordship put it as uncertain at that time.

The Master of the Rolls.] No, I did not; I said it may be.

Mr. Marten.] Your Lordship was then speaking as a law officer of the Crown.

The Master of the Rolls.] It may be.

Mr. Marten.] It was subsequently decided in the case of Thomas v. The Queen, in 1874 (your Lordship was speaking in 1872), that a petition of right would lie for a breach of contract.

The Master of the Rolls.] I must tell you that is not only my opinion. The practice of the law officers has always been to advise the Crown in proper cases to pay damages for breaches of contract before that decision in Thomas v. The Queen.

Mr. Marten.] The case which my learned friend the Solicitor General has just referred to is Tobin v. The Queen, the report of which I have not got with me.

Then the case against the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury was a case of mandamus. What occurred there was this: "By the Annual Appropriation Acts, out of the sums granted to Her Majesty for the service of each year, a certain sum is applied to defray the charges for prosecutions at assizes and quarter-sessions in England, formerly paid out of county rates. In the half-year ending the 31st of December 1870, certain prosecutions took place at the assizes and quarter sessions of the county of L., and the costs were taxed by the proper officers, under the orders of the respective courts, and the treasurers of the county paid the bills, and returned the bills with the usual vouchers to the Treasury. The Lords of the Treasury had appointed certain officers called 'the Examiners of Criminal Law Accounts,' and these officers disallowed or reduced in amount 51 of the items in the bills returned; and a rule nisi was then obtained for a mandamus to the Lords of the Treasury, commanding them to issue a Treasury Minute authorising the Paymaster of Civil Contingencies to pay to the treasurer of the county of L. the sums disallowed: Held, that a mandamus would not lie, inasmuch as the Lords of the Treasury received the money which was granted to Her Majesty as servants of the Crown, and no duty was imposed upon them, as between them and the persons to whom the money was payable: Held, also, that the course which the Lords of the Treasury had pursued was erroneous, as they had no authority whatever to have the bills re-taxed, and ought to have paid over to the treasurer of the county the full sum which he had expended as costs of prosecutions." I do not understand in that case there would have been any question if it had been the case of a petition of right. Your Lordship, in the Argument, says this: "Mandamus will not lie in this case. Where the Legislature has constituted the Lords of the Treasury agents to do a particular act, in that case a mandamus might lie against them as mere individuals designated to do that act; but in the present case the money is in the hands of the Crown, or of the Lords of the Treasury, as Minister of the Crown. In no case can the Crown be sued, even by writ of right. If the Court granted a mandamus, they would be interfering with the distribution of public money, for the applicants do not show that the money is in the hands of the Lords of the Treasury to be dealt with in a particular manner. The money is first voted by resolution of the House of Commons. Under the Appropriation Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 89, s. 3), all sums granted by that Act are appropriated for the purposes and services expressed in Schedule B. The effect of the Annual Appropriation Act is not to give any third person a right to the money, but it is to prevent the Crown from appropriating money given for one purpose to another. The money is not a charge on the Consolidated Fund, although it comes out of that fund; it is voted annually. The effect of the Schedule to the Act is not that the sums named shall be appropriated to the purposes mentioned, but that the Treasury shall not apply a sum beyond that which is mentioned to those purposes. It is not an enabling but a restrictive Act, and the meaning of the word 'appropriated' is appropriated as between the Crown and the House of Commons. There is no objection on the Treasury to pay any sums, but they may pay them. Then your Lordship goes on upon that footing. Then your Lordship argues: "Further, it is discretionary with the Treasury what amount shall be expended. This shows that the duty imposed by the Act is a constitutional duty, and not a mere ministerial duty. The cases in which a mandamus has been granted against the Lords of the Treasury are distinguishable." Then your Lordship mentions the cases in which it was not granted; I think that case is distinguishable from the present.

The Master of the Rolls.] Why?

Mr. Marten.] Upon this ground, my Lord.

The Master of the Rolls.] You need not distinguish it.

Mr. Marten.] No, my Lord. My argument lies in a very short compass. I do not know that I can do any good by going over the ground again. I have said what seems to me to be the fair view of what the statement of claim is; namely, that the person who has a legal right as lessee, in his capacity as Secretary of State, that is to say, as a corporation sole, individually is doing acts which are not justifiable, and which are in derogation of the rights of the plaintiffs in respect of the property. I submit, upon a fair construction of the statement of claim, it shows such a case as, if we can make it out, will entitle us to some relief or other at the hearing. It is not necessary that the particular relief we pray for should be grounded, because it is quite sufficient that some relief or other should be granted.

I think I ought to call your Lordship's attention to the Acts of Parliament which relate to the Secretary of State. It is sufficient just to mention them shortly. There is the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 67, which is "An Act to facilitate the Purchase of Commonable and other Rights by the Principal Officers of Her Majesty's Ordnance." That gives power to the officers of Her Majesty's Ordnance to purchase common rights. Then there is the Act of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 117, which was passed in the year 1855, which was "An Act for transferring to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State the Powers and Estates vested in the Principal Officers of the Ordnance." It vests them in the Secretary of State. By Section 2, it says that all property which has heretofore been vested in the principal officers of the Ordnance shall be vested in the last-mentioned Principal Secretary of State, "and when and so often as the said last-mentioned Principal Secretary of State, and any Principal Secretary of State to whom Her Majesty shall have entrusted the seals of the War Department, shall cease to hold such office, the said several lands, hereditaments, estates, and property, and all lands, hereditaments, estates, and property which hereafter shall be, or purchased or otherwise, acquired by any such last-mentioned Principal Secretary of State for the time being, on behalf of Her said Majesty, shall, by virtue of this Act, be absolutely divested out of such Secretary of State so ceasing to hold such office as aforesaid, and shall, by virtue of this Act, be transferred to and vested in his successor in the said office immediately upon his receiving the seals of the said department, absolutely, and the said lands, hereditaments, estates, and property hereby vested, and hereafter to be vested, in the said last-mentioned Principal Secretary of State and his successors, shall, as to such of them as were or shall have been purchased, or are or shall be held for an estate of inheritance in fee-simple, be so vested in such last-mentioned Principal Secretary of State and his successors, in the same manner as if the fee-simple thereof had been originally conveyed to such Principal Secretary of State as a corporation sole and his successors." Then there are subsidiary clauses with reference to proprietary rights of that description.

The Master of the Rolls.] Have you any case of a common suing a stranger in trespass?

Mr. Marten.] Under the Judicature Act a special relief may be granted in that respect.

The Master of the Rolls.] Have you any case in which a common has been allowed in law to sue a stranger for trespass?

The Solicitor General.] I think not.

The Master of the Rolls.] I wanted to know, for my information, whether Mr. Marten could find any such case; I do not know of any such case. I suppose you must sue in the name of the lord?

Mr. Marten.] I suppose he must, to establish his right. This is against the lord, because he is the lessee of the lord. This is a suit, really, between a commoner, on the one side, and a lord on the other.

The Master of the Rolls.] You could not sue a stranger in trespass?

Mr. Marten.] No.

The Master of the Rolls.] The person you are suing, I suppose, must be the lessee?

Mr. Marten.] He is the lessee. My theory upon the statement of claim is this. The commoners are operating their rights against the lessee of the lord of the manor. I say it has been established by The Queen v. Kirk, and by the subsequent decree, which was made in 1871. There was a lease taken by the defendant, and then the defendant, in his individual capacity, is committing these trespasses.

The other Act was an Act which made further provision with reference to commons taken by the Secretary of State, and the rights of commoners. That is the Act 22 Vict. c. 12.

So that the Secretary of State has various powers with regard to commons, and as to the power of purchasing commons; so that the case is not that of a person entirely outside, but who is claiming proprietary rights; it is the case of a person acting in excess of those proprietary rights. It is true he gets proprietary rights as a corporation sole. Of course as a corporation sole he could do no wrong, in one sense because he cannot have more than his individual rights. But when he acts he is stating individually.

His

His wrongful individual act is in respect of a claim made by him as regards rights which are not vested in him as a corporation sole. It resembles the case, as I say, of a rector who has got a lease. Suppose the rector of a parish has a lease vested in him and his assigns, as annexed to the living, then the rector for the time being can be sued.

The Master of the Rolls.] Mr. Marten, without prejudice to your argument, he is not sued as in that capacity; he is only sued as "Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for War."

Mr. Marten.] I agree, my Lord.

The Master of the Rolls.] In fact, I suppose I must know that the Secretary of State for War of August 1873 is not the present Secretary of State for War.

Mr. Marten.] I think I can get out of that difficulty, my Lord.

The Master of the Rolls.] It is quite plain, therefore, that you do not say that the person who did it was the man who took the lease.

Mr. Marten.] I do not say that; I say the person who did it was the person who held the lease.

The Master of the Rolls.] Unless you are suing the abstract corporation, you have not got the same man.

Mr. Marten.] I put it in this way, my Lord, I go by steps.

The Master of the Rolls.] Your agreement about an individual will not do, because you have not got the same man.

Mr. Marten.] I think I have in this way, my Lord; the late Secretary of State took the lease in 1873, and upon the appointment of the present Secretary of State that lease vested in him.

The Master of the Rolls.] Yes.

Mr. Marten.] Then the present Secretary of State is making use of his official position.

The Master of the Rolls.] No, he is not. If you will take the trouble to read it with the same attention as I have, you will find it is stated that the person who did the mischief is the person who took the lease; in fact, that is quite plain.

Mr. Marten.] That is the corporation sole.

The Master of the Rolls.] Therefore it is not the man. If it is the man, it is the former man, not the present man.

Mr. Marten.] The corporation sole for the time being is doing something which is wrong, and being wrong it must be done by him in his individual capacity.

The Master of the Rolls.] Then it must have been the former Secretary of State.

Mr. Marten.] No, my Lord.

The Master of the Rolls.] "The said Principal Secretary of State caused the damage."

Mr. Marten.] I think that the word "said" is really introduced in a spirit of anxiety for brevity under the new system of pleading. In paragraph 3 he is called "Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department." The word "said" is only introduced into the 4th paragraph so as to avoid giving the full title of "Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department."

The Master of the Rolls.] I do not see that at all.

Mr. Marten.] Of course I put it to your Lordship as a matter of construction.

The Master of the Rolls.] "The said" is a well-known term.

Mr. Marten.] If we were at the hearing we should not be deprived of our relief upon such a technical ground as that.

The Master of the Rolls.] I am now hearing the demurrer.

Mr. Marten.] If I show that at the hearing I can get relief, your Lordship will overrule the demurrer; I am not bound to show that I can get the relief which is alleged. The pleadings must be read in the ordinary benignant manner.

The Master of the Rolls.] What is "the ordinary benignant manner?"

Mr. Marten.] I apprehend that it means that we are not confined to the statement of facts, and therefore looking at the mere narrative of facts, surely it will be sufficient to show that the act complained of is some wrongful act done by an individual. It must be some wrongful act done by the present Secretary of State under colour of right, and therefore it would be proper to sue him in his official capacity; of course, as to damages, that is another point. I do not know why you should not sue a corporation sole for a declaration of right which would bind him and his successors, and to pay damages for a wrongful act done by him in his individual capacity; if a corporation sole commits trespass, he could be answerable in damages which would bind him and his successors. As to the present action, I submit to your Lordship that it is one in which we may obtain relief at the hearing.

As to suing the Secretary of State, I will refer your Lordship to what was said by the Vice Chancellor Wickens in the case of Kirk v. The Queen. He discussed what is a petition of right, and said, "The original theory of a petition of right was this: the subject applied to Her Majesty for leave to sue Her Majesty as he might have sued a subject, and the decision on the petition of right only went to say 'Let right be done.' Then it might be done in any way, as for instance, in Clayton v. Attorney General, by filing a Bill against the Sovereign, and a number of subjects." Then he says that the Secretary of State might be sued. Then he says, in Felkin v. Lord Herbert, "The Secretary for War did die, and a new one was substituted; so here I presume Mr. Cardwell might sue as a corporation on this contract; if suing as a corporation, he ceased to be Secretary of State for War, or if he died, the new Secretary of State for War could take up the proceedings without any formal revivor."

My Lord, under these circumstances I submit that the demurrer ought to be allowed to stand till the hearing, because upon the present statement of fact, enough is clearly shown to entitle us to some relief at the hearing, although it may not be the precise relief which we ask.

Mr. Woodroffe.] My Lord, I am with Mr. Marten, but I have nothing to add to what has fallen from him.

The Master of the Rolls.] That is a very good speech in such a case.

JUDGMENT.

The Master of the Rolls.] The demurrer in this case is put in by the Attorney General on behalf of the Principal Secretary of State for War to as singular a statement of claim as I should think was ever admitted into a court of justice; it is very long, and I will proceed to read it, because I cannot do justice to it without stating shortly what it is; it is a writ issued by three gentlemen named Cowing, Wilkie, and Deadman, "on behalf of themselves, and all other commoners of the Manor of Plumstead, in the County of Kent." They are the plaintiffs. Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department is the defendant. It states in the first paragraph: "The plaintiffs are commoners entitled to use and exercise common rights over the common lands of the manor of Plumstead, in the County of Kent." It is not alleged that there is any, but that I will assume in favour of the plaintiffs. Then it alleges their title to exercise common rights over the common lands. It does not say over the lands of the manor, but over the common lands. Then it states that, "In 1866 John Warrick, and others, filed a Bill in the High Court of Chancery against the provost and scholars of Queen's College, Oxford, who are the lords of the said manor, praying for a declaration of their common rights, and on the 25th day of April 1870 the Right Honourable the Master of the Rolls made a decree confirming them and all other the freehold tenants of the said manor, in the use and enjoyment of their said rights, and on the second day of August 1870, on the appeal of the Lords from the said decree, the Lord High Chancellor pronounced an order confirming the said decree, and the Lords were restrained from continuing any inclosures made by them in or since 1866, and from inclosing any more of the said common lands;" so that all we have there is that the freehold tenants of the manor had common rights over such common lands. We have not got any allegation either preceding, or as I shall show subsequently, that the plaintiffs are freehold tenants of the manor; therefore that decree does not appear to me to help them.

The next allegation is this: "Two years after the said Order of August 1871, namely, in the month of August 1873, the said Lords granted to Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department, and he took a lease of the greater portion of the common lands of the said manor for the term of 99 years, at a rent of 315 l. a year, subject to the rights of common possessed by the commoners." Now what "the commoners" are I do not know. It is not "the said commoners," and if it were, I could not tell to which antecedent it referred, whether it referred to "the commoners," the plaintiffs who are entitled to some common rights, or to the "freehold tenants of the manor," which is, properly speaking, the last antecedent to the commoners. However, it is subject to the rights of somebody.

Then it goes on, "Under and by virtue of the said lease, Her Majesty's said Principal Secretary of State has caused," in the past tense, "Her Majesty's Artillery to parade drill, and trample heavy guns, horses and carriages upon the said common lands, whereby the pasturage thereon has been utterly destroyed, and the plaintiffs and the commoners of the said manor have been thereby deprived of the use and enjoyment of their common rights over and upon the said common lands." That, I suppose, assumes that there are some, because it says they have been deprived of their rights over them. Therefore I will assume that, in the plaintiffs' favour, although it does not distinctly say that there are any lands over which they have common rights. The form of expression is odd; it says that "the artillery trample heavy guns, horses and carriages." I suppose he means that they cause to trample, only he has got "trample" in the wrong place. Whatever the allegation is, it is simply "Under and by virtue of the said lease, Her Majesty's said Principal Secretary of State;" that is the Secretary of State to whom the lease was granted in the month of August 1873. Now I am pressed to say that that is not intended to mean the corporation, but the individual Secretary of State. If so, as I have said during the argument, and as was admitted at the Bar, and, I suppose, it is part of my judicial knowledge that that is not the same man, it could not be the present Secretary of State for War. The defendant is not the man to be sued for that, because it is the man to whom the lease was granted who has caused this.

Then it is said that he is a corporation; of course, if it is the corporation who cause the injury, and therefore he might be sued as a corporation if the injury were continuous, I suppose that that is what was meant.

Then it is said that "the plaintiff, Robert Wilkie, is a freehold tenant within the said manor. It has been observed by the learned Solicitor General that very great care is taken to say that he is not a freehold tenant of the manor.

Then it says, "The plaintiffs on behalf of themselves and all other the commoners of the said manor did, on the 28th day of July last, present their petition of right to the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, and thereby prayed that Her Majesty's Artillery might be restrained from drilling or exercising upon the said common," and so forth.

Then in the 7th paragraph, there is this allegation: "Woolwich Common, which is nearer the barracks of the said artillery, is a much more commodious and convenient place for their exercise, and the cutting up of the said common of Plumstead is a grievance and a source of great irritation and disturbance to the plaintiffs and the other commoners of the said manor."

I have now read the whole of the statement of claim. It is to be observed that there is no allegation that anybody ever caused it to be cut up except "the said Principal Secretary of State." There is no date to it, therefore it must have been after 1873. There is no allegation that anybody threatens to cause it to be cut up. The allegation is that the pasturage has been utterly destroyed by the first cutting up. Therefore it is quite plain that there is no case for a future injunction as regards any special damage to it, because it has all gone. Nor do they say that anybody threatens to continue the exercise of the artillery, or that the Secretary of State intends that the artillery shall be exercised there in future. There is not a word of that to be found in

in the statement. The only thing that is said upon that point is, that for some time past, which may be taken to be three months, and therefore immediately after August 1873, the Artillery did exercise there and utterly destroyed the pasturage. However, there is no case for an injunction against anybody. There is no threat to continue the act, and there is no future damage to be apprehended. As regards damages, of course, they treat the Secretary of State not as a stranger, but as a Corporation. If he had been the same man even, I suppose they could not have sued him for damages through a mere stranger. They are suing the lessee under the lord, that is to say, they are suing a person who takes a lease from the lord for destroying the pasturage, and for that they claim damages against him. Whether such a suit could be entertained or not might be a subject worthy of consideration upon general principles; but how they can get damages against a Corporation for an act done, it is rather difficult to see. They say the acts were done sometime, I suppose, in 1873. I suppose it was done immediately afterwards, or very soon afterwards, and they ask that damages may be awarded to the commoners of the manor.

Whether such a suit as this can be maintained of this novel character, I do not think is the subject of doubt at all, because it is quite plain that you cannot sue for damages in a representative character of this kind. No such suit has ever been heard of so far as I am aware; whether or not in suits for injunctions the Court might add damages to the injunction is quite another question, but where an injunction cannot be maintained, I apprehend a suit for damages cannot be maintained; of course the question as to whether the injunction is quite different. It appears to me, therefore, that if the suit could not be supported with respect to an injunction it could not possibly be supported for damages. As I said before, there is no allegation of damage at all. All they say is, that by the destruction of the herbage in times past the plaintiffs and the other commoners have been deprived of the use and enjoyment of their common rights over and upon the said common lands. There is no allegation that the plaintiffs were entitled to common rights at the date of destruction, which is of course essential.

Now let me see whether the suit can be supported upon other grounds. There are so many grounds of demurrer that I may supply some which have not been mentioned in the argument of the Attorney General. It is quite plain and quite consistent with the allegation that they are not commoners and are not entitled to common rights. The destruction of the herbage would certainly interfere with the use and enjoyment of their common rights, but that cannot be said to be the cause, because it is no longer there. They cannot sue for damages; there is no allegation that they were commoners at all, therefore the right to damage cannot be maintained on this claim.

That is not all. There is no allegation of damage; they say they have been "deprived of the use and enjoyment of their common rights over the said common lands;" but they do not say there were not other common lands. It is not enough for a commoner to say he has lost the use of a right over common lands when the rest may be sufficient for the enjoyment of those rights. A small portion of the common lands might be quite ample for these people, and they might not have incurred any damage at all; in fact, there is no allegation of damage whatever. All they say is that "the cutting up of the said common at Plumstead is a great grievance, and a source of great irritation and disturbance to the plaintiffs and the other commoners of the manor." That is recited, but there is no allegation of material damages. Therefore on this ground also it appears to me that the claim fails.

Now I am coming to the objections which were really taken and which are very substantial indeed. Some of those which I have mentioned might be remedied by an amendment, but these cannot be. The injunction asked for is this, for an injunction to restrain Her Majesty's Artillery from drilling or exercising upon the said common, and to restrain the defendant and all officers and servants under him, or any officers accepting orders from Her Majesty under or upon his advice from drilling or exercising the said Artillery or other troops upon the said common. The first ground against granting such an injunction, which I should think was obvious enough, was that you cannot possibly sue the defendant, the Minister of War, to restrain the Artillery from drilling without at least an allegation that he has the power to do so, and there is no allegation in this statement of claim, that he is the Commander of the Artillery. We know he is not, and I suppose we may take that judicially. He is not even the Commander in Chief of the Army in general nor the Commander of the Artillery in particular, under the Commander in Chief; there is no allegation here that he is, or that he has any authority whatever over Her Majesty's Artillery.

It has been said that the Secretary of State caused the drilling but whether he caused it as Commander in Chief or not is not alleged. It is plain that if I have judicial knowledge, which I have in such cases, I know he is not the Commander in Chief, but he holds a different office. If I am not at liberty to avail myself of that judicial knowledge, then there is a deficiency of allegation that he has power or control over the Artillery, or permits the Artillery to exercise. Therefore it is quite plain that I cannot grant an injunction against him, either by reason of my judicial knowledge or by reason of the deficiency in the allegation.

Then, besides that the injunction is not asked against the Secretary of State, but the injunction which is asked for is "to restrain Her Majesty's Artillery from drilling, or exercising upon the said common." It is not to restrain the Secretary of State even from allowing them, or permitting them, to interfere with the common; but it is an injunction to restrain Her Majesty's Artillery, whether strangers or not; not only the Secretary of State, but "all officers and servants under him, or any officer accepting orders from Her Majesty under or upon his advice from drilling or exercising the said Artillery or other troops upon the said common." Those gentlemen are not defendants. The actual defendant is not such a wrongful doer. The thing is so preposterous that really it does not require any further discussion.

Then it was said, besides that, that it is an injunction, in fact, against the Queen; and so it is when you come to look at it, because it is an injunction to prevent Her Majesty's officers commanding the troops from obeying Her Majesty's orders, and it is literally so; it is not merely substantially so, "and all officers and servants under him, or any officer accepting orders from Her Majesty under or upon his advice." That is literally so, so that I am asked to entertain an injunction which, even if they had the real defendant here, would prevent the Queen's officers from obeying Her Majesty's lawful commands. I am at a loss to know how far this extravagance is to go if such an injunction can be fairly discussed and supported by argument.

Then there was a further argument, that not only you cannot see the Queen at all, but you cannot see the Secretary of State for War at all for this purpose; and that although he is a corporation, he is a corporation for a limited purpose, and that the right to sue him is only the statutory right given by a special Act of Parliament, and that he cannot be sued for this.

On the whole, I am of opinion that the application is a useless and vain experiment, and, except that it looks like an elaborate joke, rather disrespectful to the Court, I am by no means imputing that intention to the learned Counsel who argued it. I do not think it worthy of further serious discussion, and therefore I allow the demurrer.

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.—CHANCERY DIVISION.

ROLLS COURT.

Before the Master of the Rolls.—22nd January 1877.

In Re Petition of Right of Robert Thomas Cowing and Others.

Demurrer of Her Majesty's Attorney General.

(Transcript from the Shorthand Notes of Messrs. Hurst & Hurst.)

The Solicitor General.] Then, my Lord, there is the Petition of Right, which certainly is a still more curious performance than the last. It is a Petition of Right in which the suppliants are alleged to be "Robert Thomas Cowing, Robert Wilkie, and Joseph Alexander Deadman, on behalf of themselves and all other the commoners of the Manor of Plumstead, in the county of Kent, plaintiffs, and Her Majesty's principal Secretary of State for the War Department, defendant." This is a Petition of Right.

The Master of the Rolls.] What does that mean?

The Solicitor General.] I fancy it means this.

The Master of the Rolls.] I thought the Queen was always a party to a Petition of Right.

The Solicitor General.] I will ask your Lordship to look at the end of the prayer. The suppliants pray "that this petition, and the proceedings therein, may be deemed and taken to be supplemental to the said action."

The Master of the Rolls.] I see there is something like a libel upon me in the 6th paragraph.

The Solicitor General.] Yes, my Lord.

The Master of the Rolls.] In 1876 I was the Master of the Rolls. Just see what the Master of the Rolls is alleged to have decided.

Mr. Marten.] Your Lordship will take it that what they mean is that the ultimate statement is accurate, that your Lordship dismissed the said motion, and ordered the costs thereof to be costs in the cause.

The Master of the Rolls.] That is right.

The Solicitor General.] I have no doubt of the accuracy of that statement.

Mr. Marten.] I do not know on what grounds it proceeded.

The Solicitor General.] It merely puts the allegation in a different form, although addressed to Her Majesty.

The Master of the Rolls.] I suppose the Queen is to be left out.

The Solicitor General.] Yes, my Lord; Her Majesty is rather an important personage to be left out. This is a Petition of Right, and the Queen is the only person who is not named. Your Lordship will see what is the meaning of that when you come to the end of the prayer, that it may be taken as supplemental to the action.

The Master of the Rolls.] What have I to do with a Petition of Right without the Queen?

Mr. Marten.] The Queen has given her sanction; "Victoria Regina, let right be done."

The Master of the Rolls.] I do not know why they did that; I do not know what they were about in the office.

The Solicitor General.] Then I call your Lordship's attention to the prayer, "That Her Majesty's Artillery may be restrained." Is the injunction to be addressed to Her Majesty?

The Master of the Rolls.] I suppose Her Majesty would have power to restrain her own Artillery.

The Solicitor General.] That is not the form on which it arises.

Mr. Marten.] It seems to me to be in accordance with the forms.

The Solicitor General.] It goes on, "and that damages may be awarded to the commoners of the said manor," and so on.

The Master of the Rolls.] Did anybody ever see such a Petition of Right?

Mr. Marten.] The thing seems to be right enough if you knock out the first part of the title.

The Master of the Rolls.] If you put in the Queen

Queen and leave out the Secretary of State it may be right.

Mr. Marten.] It seems to be in accordance with the forms. The title part is wrong. You never mention the Queen in the Petition of Right as the defendant. You address the Queen "To the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty." Then she has given her fiat. Then it concludes, "Your suppliants therefore humbly pray," and so on. Then the issue taken is in the matter of the Petition of Right. That is the way it is done here.

The Master of the Rolls.] No, it is not; Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department is defendant. There are plaintiffs and defendants; it ought to be suppliants and the Queen.

Mr. Marten.] Your Lordship has decided now that the other action cannot be maintained; of course, therefore, that part of the prayer is superfluous which asks that it may be taken as supplemental to that action, that is quite clear.

The Master of the Rolls.] Yes.

Mr. Marten.] But in other respects it is simply a Petition of Right.

The Solicitor General.] It is a Petition of Right for damages for a wrong to have been done.

The Master of the Rolls.] That is your real ground.

The Solicitor General.] After what your Lordship has said it seems to me to be necessary to trouble your Lordship further.

Mr. Marten.] Looking at the demurrer and statement of defence leaving out a title, or an alleged title, in an action is nothing. There was some idea that it could be made supplemental, but your Lordship has decided that it cannot be.

The Master of the Rolls.] I do not think I should not turn you on that.

Mr. Marten.] Otherwise it is good enough, because it is addressed "To the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty."

The Solicitor General.] Yes.

Mr. Marten.] The prayer is good enough.

The Solicitor General.] No, I do not think so.

Mr. Marten.] We will discuss the substance of it. I was talking about the form. Your Lordship says that you will not trouble me about the form.

The Master of the Rolls.] It is a great pity, Mr. Marten, that the time of the Court should be wasted in this way; joking is all very well when the time of the Court is not valuable.

Mr. Marten.] Independently of the question of form, I have already urged all that I can say upon the matter of substance, with the exception of this observation. Of course there may be a case in which, as I understand it, in respect of property, the Crown is infringing upon property rights; that will be a case in which a Petition of Right as supplemental to the action would be properly maintainable against the Crown.

The Master of the Rolls.] That is where the Crown has taken possession of property.

Mr. Marten.] I suppose that would be the subject of a Petition of Right at the present day.

The Master of the Rolls.] Yes.

Mr. Marten.] It does not matter about the form if I have got it right in substance. The substance of it is this, namely, that the Crown is acting in derogation of the common rights. I should say that would be a proper subject for a Petition of Right. Of course the Crown are acting as the lessees of the lord of the manor. If I could maintain a bill against the lord of the manor, and he was acting in his own person, I apprehend it could maintain a Petition of Right against the Crown in respect of the manor. That is the way I put it to your Lordship. The Crown is therefore acting evidently on the lessee.

Mr. Woodroffe.] I am with Mr. Marten, but I have nothing to add.

JUDGMENT.

The Master of the Rolls.] WELL, really, this is, if possible, more absurd than the other; I do not know which is the most absurd. The petitioners do not show any case at all; they are simply three people. I have called them gentlemen, but I see I should not so have described them, for I did not know what they were, but here I have got what they are. Their employment did not appear in the statement of claim, but it does appear in the Petition of Right. The first is a carpenter, the second is a smith, and the third is a traveller. These three people state that they are "commoners," whatever that may mean, "entitled to use and exercise common rights over the common lands of the manor of Plumstead, in the county of Kent." I have not the slightest notion what that means, and I do not suppose anybody else has. I know that parties have rights of common, and they have rights of common, but they are rights of common which generally are not worth mentioning, and which old lawyers used to call common in gross.

Then there is the same statement about them that I read before. Then there is the same statement about the lease that I read before.

Then there is some statement of what the Secretary of State did under the lease, but it is varied in a very particular manner. Instead of saying that the plaintiffs were "deprived of the use and enjoyment of their common rights over upon the said common lands," there is no allegation that they are deprived of anything at all. It only says that the commoners of the manor were thereby deprived. It does not appear from that that they have lost anything.

Then there is the same observation that Wilkie is only a freehold tenant of the manor.

Then there is a statement that they commenced an action; and then there is a statement about the Master of the Rolls which is not correct; there is a statement that I decided that the suppliants must present to Her Majesty a Petition of Right, which I did not decide.

Then there is a statement with reference to Woolwich Common, and there it ends, with this prayer: "Your suppliants hereby humbly pray that Your Majesty's Artillery may be restrained from drilling or exercising upon the said common, and that damages may be awarded to the commoners of the said manor for the destruction of the herbage herbage and pasturage thereon, and that this petition, and the proceedings thereon, may be deemed and taken to be supplemental to the said action."

Now it does not allege anywhere that I can see that the Act was wrongful, because it only says that, with respect to the common lands, the Artillery did something "whereby the pasturage thereon has been utterly destroyed." It is perfectly consistent that anybody who had any interest in the matter confessed that it was a rightful act. It says that the commoners of the manor were aggrieved, but it does not say that the persons have been aggrieved, or that they have lost anything, or that they have incurred any damage. However, that is a mere technicality, and I daresay it can be amended if that allegation were wanting.

Sic. Qu. sought.

In substance, it is an attempt to sue the Crown for a trespass; that cannot be done. The substance of the case is, that the Queen, as Queen, in the exercise of the rights of the Crown, has ordered Her Artillery to exercise over the manor land, and thereby committed a trespass, and it seeks for an injunction to restrain in future the Artillery from continuing that trespass, although there is no allegation that they intended so to continue, and also for damages. I understand the law on the subject is, that you cannot sue the Crown for damages. It is a mere simple tort. If any of the Queen's subjects, by Her command or authority, have committed a wrongful act, the remedy must be sent* elsewhere in the ordinary Courts of Justice upon the general ground.

Mr. Marten.] Will your Lordship give me leave to amend?

The Master of the Rolls.] No, I will not give you leave to amend. It is absurd.

Mr. Marten.] Your Lordship sees the defence which is set up in page 2.

The Master of the Rolls.] It does not prevent some proper application being made if there is anybody whose rights are interfered with. I do not think your clients have any right whatever. If I thought they had I should take care that they should have a mode of trying them.

COPY "of further REPORT from the SOLICITOR to the TREASURY as to the PROCEEDINGS in the Case of COWING and DEADMAN v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR WAR (in continuation of Parliamentary Paper, No. 313, of the present Session)."

Treasury Chambers, Whitehall, 18 July 1877. W. H. SMITH.

Mr. A. K. Stephenson to the Secretary to the Treasury.

Sir, 18 July 1877.

WITH reference to Mr. Boord's question in the Notices of Motion of 17th July:

> To call attention to the action of the Solicitor to the Treasury, in causing the arrest of two persons under a process which has been set aside by the Court of Exchequer as "contrary to law."

I beg to refer to my Report to the Chancellor of Exchequer, printed by Order of the House of Commons, hereto annexed.

With that Report I forwarded a transcript of the shorthand-writer's notes of the proceedings in Court, when the Attorney General appeared on the return of the rule obtained (ex parte) to set aside the writ of extent.

That transcript was not printed with my Report.

I forward another copy of it.

The rule nisi was obtained on the ground, inter alia, that "the said writ of extent is contrary to law;" that rule was made absolute under the circumstances stated in the transcript of the proceedings in Court; but under these circumstances it is respectfully submitted that it cannot be assumed or admitted that "the Court of Exchequer has decided the process to be illegal," or "the arrest under it contrary to law."

I am, &c.

W. H. Smith, Esq., M.P. (signed) A. K. Stephenson,
Solicitor to the Treasury.

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.—EXCHEQUER DIVISION.

WESTMINSTER HALL, Thursday, 28th June 1877.

Cowing and Deadman v. The Secretary of State for War.

BEFORE Mr. BARON CLEASBY and Mr. BARON POLLOCK.

(Transcript from the Shorthand Notes of Messrs. Hurst and Hurst.)

The Attorney General.] WILL you allow me to mention the case of the Queen against Thomas Cowing, Robert Wilkie, and Alexander Deadman. My friend, Mr. Atherley-Jones obtained a rule calling on the Crown to show cause why a writ of extent obtained by the Crown against the persons mentioned should not be set aside, and why two of those persons, namely, Cowing and Deadman, should not be released from custody. They were taken under a writ of extent, and lodged in Maidstone Gaol. Since that happened, application has been made in their favour, or on their behalf, by some Members of Parliament to the Government; the Government has acceded to that application, and has released Cowing and Deadman from custody. Under those circumstances, I should presume that it is not necessary to trouble your Lordships with any argument about the matter.

Mr. Baron Cleasby.] They are released, you say.

The Attorney General.] Yes, my Lord. Application was made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and he thought it was a case in which, without reference to any questions of law that might arise, he ought to release them.

Mr. Baron Cleasby.] I suppose we must set aside the writ as well. That ought not to be left hanging over them.

The Attorney General.] I do not know, my Lord. I have some objection to the writ being set aside, for some proceedings might be taken against somebody or other. Of course no proceedings could be taken against the Crown, but some proceedings might be taken against the sheriff or somebody or other.

Mr. Baron Cleasby.] No, but they might be taken again.

The Attorney General.] These persons, Cowing and Deadman, certainly cannot be taken again. In fact, I will undertake on behalf of the Crown that they shall not.

Mr. Baron Cleasby.] Is there anything more wanted than that?

Mr. Atherley-Jones.] Yes, my Lord. It appears, as your Lordship has suggested, that Cowing and Deadman might be liable to be taken on a fresh capias. It is put merely as a matter of grace on the part of the Government to discharge these men; but what we desire most of all is, that it should be laid down by your Lordship that the writ of extent is in itself illegal.

Mr. Baron Cleasby.] We shall not entertain abstract questions.

Mr. Atherley-Jones.] I do not mean as an abstract question, my Lord, but that as far as it has relation to the arrest of those two men that your Lordships should decide that this arrest on the writ of extent was illegal. It would seriously hamper us in any further proceedings we might take if we were only able to look upon it as a matter of favour that these men were released, and not as a matter of right. Therefore, I cannot accede to the proposition that these men should be discharged as a matter of favour on the part of the Crown.

The Attorney General.] They have been discharged as a matter of grace and favour.

Mr. Baron Cleasby.] I cannot see any objection to setting it aside. It cannot be acted upon again.

The Attorney General.] I am perfectly willing to undertake that the writ shall not be acted upon. It would appear, from what has dropped from my friend at this moment, that the object is to take some proceedings against somebody or other.

Mr. Baron Cleasby.] I am afraid that as he has got a rule to set aside the writ, unless the rule is made absolute, or unless he consents to withdraw it, that we must enter upon it.

The Attorney General.] There is only this to be said: if, after argument, your Lordships should discharge this rule, I will not be bound by any undertaking I may have given, or expressed my willingness to give, that the extent shall not be enforced.

Mr. Baron Pollock.] What is it that the defendants really want?

The Attorney General.] I do not know; I cannot tell your Lordship what he wants; I presume he wants to take some proceedings against the sheriff. The question that arises in the case is of some nicety, I will admit. The question is, whether the Crown can issue a writ of extent to recover the costs on a petition of right. There was a petition of right decided against these applicants, and the costs were awarded by the Master of the Rolls. Under the Petitions of Right Act the Crown is entitled to costs. Judgment was entered up for the costs. It has become a debt of record to the Crown, and I maintain that the Crown has a right to issue the writ of extent to recover costs. That is a question of some nicety; but I do not feel that I should be justified in troubling your Lordships with any argument on the matter. As the Government has thought right to listen to the application made to them, and has released these men, I shall not argue the matter, but I shall consent to the writ being set aside.

Mr. Baron Cleasby.] I think that seems to be very proper, because as they are discharged, this ought not to be left hanging over them.

The Attorney General.] It would not be enforced; it was never the intention that it should be brought forward again, or enforced in any way.

Mr. Baron Cleasby.] Very well. Then your rule, Mr. Atherley-Jones, is made absolute.

MESSRS. COWING AND DEADMAN.

Note.—The above Return, so far as relates to Dublin and Kingstown, has been furnished by the Chief Commissioner of Dublin Metropolitan Police; the rest of the Return has been furnished by the Inspector General of the Royal Irish Constabulary. The numbers given in the present Return, as regards the year 1851, differ considerably from those for that year given in the Parliamentary Paper of which this is a continuation. This difference is due to the fact, that in the former Return cases of simple drunkenness were included, and some cases of disorderly conduct unaccompanied with drunkenness, whilst the present Return includes only cases of drunkenness which was combined with disorderly conduct.

Note.—The numbers of persons entered above as having been arrested in 1851 for Drunkenness and Disorderly Conduct were given in the former Return (Parliamentary Paper, No. 531, of Session 1853), and are taken therefrom.

The number of cases of Disorderly Conduct by drunken persons, for the other three years mentioned in the Order, cannot be separately stated, as Burgh Returns comprising a large majority of the total number of cases show that no distinction is made in the police records between drunken and other disorderly persons. As regards 1861, 1871, and 1876, therefore, this Return shows, opposite each of the Burghs, the number of persons arrested (1st) for Disorderly Conduct, and (2nd) for Drunkenness (Drunk and Incapable of taking care of themselves).

The offences, however, to which this Return applies are, as shown under "Remarks," variously designated in the police records of different burghs, and this is also the case with regard to the records of individual burghs for different years; and it seems evident, on a comparison of cases with populations, that the entries opposite different burghs, and opposite the same burghs for different years, do not, either in this Return or in the former one, represent exactly the same classes of offenders.

— XV. —

The number of Appeals pending therefrom (on 31st July 1877) - Two.

— XVI. —

The nature of those Appeals.

I.—Indemnity Claims against the European Assurance Society.

The following extracts from the Special Case on Appeal, certified by the Arbitrator, show the nature of this Appeal:—

1. This is an appeal by the Joint Official Liquidator of the British Nation Life Assurance Association (hereinafter called the British Nation) and of the Royal Naval, Military, and East India Company Life Assurance Society (hereinafter called the Royal Naval) respectively, from a decision of the present Arbitrator, relative to claims of the British Nation and of the Royal Naval to be indemnified against the costs of their respective liquidations out of the assets of the European.

* * * * * * * *

15. As regards the British Nation, Lord Westbury, when Arbitrator, decided that the liability of the European, under its covenant to indemnify the British Nation, is limited to the subscribed capital of the European, and (in the opinion of the present Arbitrator) Lord Westbury further decided at the same time in principle that the indemnity under the covenant extended to the costs of the British Nation liquidation.

16. As regards the Royal Naval, Lord Romilly, when Arbitrator, decided in conformity with Lord Westbury's decision respecting the British Nation on both points.

17. As regards both the British Nation and the Royal Naval, the present Arbitrator has decided that, although in pursuance of the decisions of the former Arbitrators' proofs against the European by the British Nation and the Royal Naval, in respect of the costs of their respective liquidations, must stand, yet by reason of his own opinion on points which had not been brought to the attention of the former Arbitrators, no payment should be made on those proofs.

18. The Joint Official Liquidator of the British Nation and of the Royal Naval, besides appealing from the decision of the present Arbitrator, contend that the said decisions of Lord Westbury and Lord Romilly, as far as they related to limitation of liability, are erroneous, and ought to be reversed; and further, that under the amalgamations between the British Nation and the Royal Naval respectively, and the European, apart from the covenants of indemnity aforesaid, the costs of the liquidations of the British Nation and Royal Naval ought to be regarded and dealt with, as in fact, part of the costs of the liquidation of the European.

19. The Joint Official Liquidator of the European contend that the said decisions of Lord Westbury and Lord Romilly respecting the costs of the liquidations of the British Nation and Royal Naval are erroneous and ought to be reversed, and for the purposes of that contention those liquidators are to be treated as appellants on this appeal, if, and as far as the Court of Appeal thinks fit.

* * * * * * * *

The Question submitted to the Court of Appeal is—

> What decision should be given in the premises, as regards both or either of the British Nation and Royal Naval, as well on the questions of limitation of liability, and of allowance of the proofs, or either of them, as on the question of payment on the proofs, or either of them?

II.—British Commercial Insurance Company.

The following extracts from the Special Case on Appeal certified by the Arbitrator, show the nature of this Appeal:—

1. This is an appeal by the Liquidators of the British Nation Life Assurance Association (hereinafter called the British Nation) against the decision of Mr. F. S. Reilly, the Arbitrator appointed under the above-mentioned Acts, on a case lodged by the Liquidators of the British Commercial Insurance Company (hereinafter called the British Commercial). That decision was to the effect, that—

(1.) The British Nation should be put on the list of contributories of the British Commercial, and should be ordered to pay such call as might be necessary to discharge the British Commercial liabilities and the costs of the British Commercial liquidation; and

(2.) The liability of the British Nation in respect of such a call is unlimited, except as far as it is limited by the terms of the British Commercial policies and other contracts.

* * * * * * * *

The Questions submitted by this Appeal Case to the Court of Appeal are—

(1.) Whether the decision of the Arbitrator is right;

(2.) If not, what other decision should be given in the premises, either as between the Appellants and the Respondents, or any of them, or as among the several Respondents, or any of them.

The Respondents to this Appeal Case are—

The British Commercial Insurance Company.
Archibald Scott Lawson.
Henry Chatteris.
Lewis Frederick Edwards.
The European Assurance Society.

—XVII.—

The amount involved in those (pending) Appeals.

I. In the first-mentioned pending Appeal the aggregate amount of the costs of the two Appellant Companies in respect of which the indemnity is claimed is (partly ascertained and partly estimated) 18,402 l. 8 s. 3 d. The principle of the decision will affect large but unascertained amounts in other Companies.

II. In the secondly-mentioned pending Appeal the amount involved may be considered to be the aggregate amount of the valuation of the Assurance liabilities of the British Commercial Insurance Company, subject to proper deductions, and of the costs of the winding-up of that Company, that is to say, a sum of 157,000 l. or thereabouts.

Hugh A. Mardon,

* The commitments under which seamen are detained in this prison do not distinguish apprentices to masters of fishing boats from apprentices to other vessels, therefore the Visiting Justices have no means of making this Return.

† The Governor remarks that these were the only cases of sea apprentices absconding from their ships, but he is unable to state whether they were fishing or other merchant ships.

Conversions and sales.

III. It will be observed, upon comparing these figures with those set against the corresponding Heads in my Report of last year, that there is a very great difference in the amounts set against Nos. 3 and 4 relatively to each other, the amount received by Conversions in the previous year being 1,693,701 l. 10 s. 11 d., and the amount received by Sales being 1,641,806 l. 7 s. 5 d. This is caused by the passing of the Act 38 & 39 Vict. c. 77, which, by its 30th Section, repeals Sect. 16 of the Act of 1872, which provided for the conversion of Government Securities. So far as I am aware, the new Rules contemplated by the Act of 1875 under Sect. 30 have not yet been made.

Amount of Cash paid out of Court.

IV. The amount of Cash paid out of Court during the year was 12,341,129 l. 10 s. 9 d., consisting of,—

1. Cash paid for Securities purchased	5,743,545	13	–

3. Other Cash paid out of Court	6,570,487	9	9
TOTAL £.	12,341,129	10	9

As stated in my former Reports, it appears to me that these particulars, both of Receipts and Payments, should be given in the Paymaster General's Account.

VI. With regard to the latter, it should be observed that the amount given in sterling does not represent the actual cash value of the Securities in Court on 31st August last, but the amount of Stock, or Bonds, or Shares, as the case may be, standing in the Books of the Bank of England, or of the several Governments or Companies, at the credit of the Paymaster General.

GENERAL STATEMENT OF SECURITIES.

IX. This Statement was forwarded to the Bank of England for verification, and the certificates of the Bank Officers are appended to it. Verification of Securities.

As regards the "corrections," I have to observe as follows:—

"Canadian Consolidated 5 per Cent. Stock all reclaimed. Banker's receipts returned "to Mr. Parkinson, 24th June 1876."

This observation having been communicated to the Chancery Paymaster, he has stated that the "transfer voucher" for this Stock having been sent by him to the Bank of England, was returned "of their own accord," and not upon his "reclamation," with a statement that the document did not appear to be of any value, that it would not be required on the occasion of any future transfer, and that the Bank do not take charge of vouchers of that description. The Stock remains on the Account, and dividends are received upon it periodically. This is also the case with the stocks and shares referred to by the Chief Cashier, the Certificates in support of which are not deposited with the Bank of England.

"Commercial Gas Company New Stock 62 l. 10 s., the Certificate of which was not "deposited until the 17th January 1877."

This Stock was nevertheless transferred into Court on 20th May 1876, and a dividend received upon it on the 9th October following.

As regards the other differences, I have to state that they are caused by transfers out of Court, which, although effected, so far as the Bank was concerned, before the 31st of August, were not completed or entered in the Paymaster's Books until after that date.

STATEMENT OF BOXES, &c.

X. The Certificate of the Bank of England is appended to this Statement, showing that the Boxes and Miscellaneous Effects mentioned were in the custody of the Bank on 31st August last. Verification of Miscellaneous Effects.

General Observations.

Amounts Overdrawn.

XVIII. There have been during the year, 22 cases in which Accounts have been overdrawn, for the most part to a very trifling extent, and in all these cases the overdrawing has been adjusted upon being pointed out by this Department.

Double Payment.

XIX. On the 7th July 1876, a payment of 15 l. 1 s. 8 d. was made by the Chancery Paymaster to Louis J. England, pursuant to an Order of 26th February 1875; but it was discovered by this Department that an Order of the 2nd March 1876 had directed this payment to be made to Margaret E. England instead of to her husband. Upon this being pointed out to the Paymaster, he admitted that the Draft should not have been delivered to the latter, and stated that, upon the circumstances being brought by him under the notice of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, their Lordships had directed payment of the amount to be made to the proper person. This has accordingly been done, and the sum paid in error has been recouped to this Account from the Vote for the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, &c.

Observations.

Parliamentary Paper, No. 390, of 1876.

XX. In my Report of last year I submitted some observations upon the delays in carrying out the directions contained in Orders of the Court; the frequent instances in which action had been taken upon Orders which had been superseded by others of a later date not brought to the notice of the Paymaster; and on an apparent infraction of the provision of Rule 25 of 1874, that no money shall be paid into Court under that Rule in respect of which there have been any directions contained in Orders, or Acts of Parliament requiring some particular authority.

Paymaster's Accountability.

XXI. During the past year, a correspondence has taken place between this Department, the Chancery Paymaster, and the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, upon irregularities which have arisen from such causes, and it has been ruled by the Treasury and the Lord Chancellor that the Chancery Paymaster is not to be held accountable for any improper application of Funds in Court which may arise in consequence of the neglect of Solicitors to bring Orders containing later directions of the Court under his notice.

Observations thereon.

XXII. In this ruling I would express my entire acquiescence, so long as the system continues under which the Chancery Paymaster is not advised of the Orders issued by the Court. It appears to me, however, to be not unreasonable to expect that, when an Order is brought to the notice of the Paymaster, he should take such note of it as would preclude his acting (under some previous direction), in a manner opposed to it's provisions; and I am also of opinion that whenever the Paymaster's attention is called by this Department to any action on his part, in ignorance of the more recent directions of the Court, some steps should be taken by him for the correction, if possible, of the error into which he has been led by those who have the carriage of the Orders. It will be seen from the succeeding remarks that although, in many cases, such steps have been taken, there is apparently no obligation on the Paymaster to take any such action, and therefore no security that the later directions of the Court will be carried into effect.

Illustrations of Defects in System.

XXIII. The following cases, which have been brought to my notice during the past year, may serve as examples to show that there is something faulty in the present system.

XXIV. 1. Certain sums were found to have been transferred from one Account to another in a cause, and certain stock to have been sold, pursuant to the directions of an Order of 1873, whereas an Order of 20th March 1875, directed that the whole of the funds to the credit of the Accounts in question, after the payment of legacy duty, should be carried to different Accounts.

The Accountant's attention having been called to this, he replied that the solicitors in the case informed him that it was not intended to interfere with the operation of the old Order, and that an application had been made to the Registrar to modify the Order of 1875 accordingly, but that the Registrar had declined to make the alterations required.

This case was brought by this Department under the notice of the Lords of the Treasury, and their Lordships' conveyed to me, on the 6th July 1876, the opinion of the Lord Chancellor that a new Order should be obtained "to set right the inconsistency."

I was informed, however, in a subsequent letter, dated 19th August last, that, as the suit was very nearly closed, and a new Order would shortly be obtained, dealing with the the funds then in Court, it was considered unnecessary to obtain a special Order for the purpose above mentioned. Up to the present time, however, no copy of such an Order has been received by me.

XXV. 2. On the 9th August 1876, it was found that a certain dividend had been placed on deposit, although an Order of March 1875, which had been acted on by the Accountant on 21st July 1875, directed all dividends to be paid to a person therein named.

The Accountant's attention was accordingly drawn to this, with reference to Rule 69, which lays down that, "if a direction in an Order dealing with money in Court, otherwise than by directing it to be placed on deposit, is brought under the notice of the Chancery Paymaster, such money shall not be placed on deposit."

He stated in reply, that no direction in an Order dealing with the dividends in question had been brought under his notice. It thus appears that the Paymaster does not consider it his duty, when an Order is brought to him, to take note of any other portion of it than that which may affect the particular sum which he is called upon to deal with.

XXVI. 3. In another case, although an Order dated 15th January 1876, directed that the dividend on consols, which had just been credited to an Account, should be appropriated in part payment of costs, and that any further dividends to accrue on the same stock, or on the residue after a sale, likewise ordered, should be divided into 13 parts, and paid away or carried to other Accounts, it was found that the dividends which accrued in January and July 1876, and January 1877, had all been invested pursuant to an Order dated 9th August 1875. In reply to an observation calling attention to this oversight, the Paymaster stated that "no such direction as that referred to" had been brought under his notice.

XXVII. It has also been discovered that, in some cases, where Stop Orders have been issued, the Funds in Court have nevertheless been dealt with under previous directions, owing apparently to the failure of solicitors to bring such Stop Orders under the notice of the Paymaster. This appears to me to be an important illustration of the defective character of the present system. Stop Orders.

XXVIII. As regards the payments into Court under Rule 25, it is manifest that, so long as the Chancery Paymaster is not supplied with copies of Orders, it would be impossible for him to question the propriety of receiving the amounts tendered, when accompanied by a formal request on the part of the Solicitor, containing a statement that the money was not directed by an Order to be paid into Court. I have, however, considered it my duty to bring under the notice of the Lords of the Treasury some, among many, instances in which, as it appeared to me, the Paymaster had been misled, doubtless through inadvertence, by the representations made to him. My reasons for so doing are set forth in a letter to the Treasury, dated 25th August last, a copy of which will be found in the Appendix, together with their Lordships' views upon the subject contained in a letter from Mr. Lingen of the 13th September, in reply. It will be seen that, although this correspondence originated in cases affected by Rule 25, it takes up the general question of the limits of the Paymaster's responsibility, and I have ventured to express my opinions more fully upon this subject in a further letter to the Secretary to the Treasury of 1st March 1877, a copy of which is also appended to this Report. Payments into Court, Rule 25.

B. B. 1.

No. 379—77.

C.

XXIX. There is, however, a further consideration in connection with these questions to which I cannot but attach much importance.

It is provided in the Act of 1872 that "save as otherwise provided by any rule made under "this Act, all money in Court paid in . . . shall be placed on deposit," and that it shall "bear interest at the rate of 2*l.* per cent. per annum;" and the Rules of 1874 provide that the placing on deposit of money paid into Court shall not be deferred beyond the 15th or the last day of the month in which it shall be paid in, whichever day shall first happen after such payment; also that the National Debt Commissioners shall place the amount of interest, certified by the Chancery Paymaster to have accrued every half-year, "to the "credit of the Account kept by them of money placed in their hands by the Chancery "Paymaster on behalf of the Court of Chancery." Interest on Deposit Money. 35 & 36 Vict. c. 44, Sect. 14. Rule 70. Rule 83.

XXX. Under present circumstances, it frequently happens that money is placed on deposit, although an Order was in existence at the time, directing it to be invested or otherwise dealt with, and it often remains on deposit for a considerable period.

XXXI. This is occasioned, either by the improper use of Rule 25, which rule is only applicable (as stated above) to moneys in regard to which the Court has given no directions, or from the omission of persons having the carriage of Orders to bring the directions contained in them under the notice of the Chancery Paymaster.

XXXII. In all such cases interest accrues and is included in the amounts certified by the Paymaster to the National Debt Commissioners, although it would seem, with reference to the rules, that as the money should not have been placed on deposit, no interest is properly chargeable to the public.

XXXIII. Some of these cases have been brought by me under the notice of the Chancery Paymaster, but he has stated that he is not aware of any authority which enables him to withdraw money from deposit until requested to do so by the parties concerned. In one case, however, when a sum had been placed on deposit through inadvertence at the Pay Office, the solicitors were moved by the Paymaster to request the withdrawal of the money, which was accordingly withdrawn upon the authority of the Order to which attention had been called, and it appears to me that the same course might be followed whenever it were officially notified to the Paymaster that an Order dealing differently with the money was in existence at the time when, in ignorance of that Order, he had placed it on deposit.

XXXIV. In all such cases, moreover, I am of opinion that any interest which may have accrued on the deposit should be written off upon the authority of the Order directing the disposal of the money. It was stated recently by the Chancery Paymaster that, in his opinion, whether the money were deposited by inadvertence or not, interest accrued with respect to it until it was withdrawn, and that he knew of no authority by which he could write off such interest; but in another instance where money had been placed on deposit at a time when the Paymaster had received notice of its being otherwise dealt with, he withdrew the money, quoting the Order as his authority, and credited no interest.

Some such action would seem to be the more desirable as, notwithstanding the provision contained in Rule 37, that when an Order deals with money in Court, it shall be the duty of the Solicitor for the person having the carriage of such Order to leave it, and a request to act upon it, at the Chancery Pay Office without unnecessary delay, it is found practically that in many instances great delay occurs, leading to consequences which it may be very difficult to remedy.

XXXV. I have brought this question of Interest under the notice of the Lords of the Treasury, but have not yet been favoured with their Lordships' views on the matter.

Opinion of Lord Chancellor.

XXXVI. As bearing on the question of delay, it may not be out of place here to quote an opinion of the Lord Chancellor contained in a letter from his principal secretary, dated 9th March 1876, that "if serious difficulties are found to arise from the omission of Agents "to bring charging Orders to the notice of the Paymaster, it might be considered whether "rules should not be framed by which the performance of this duty might be enforced "upon them, and they might be visited with the responsibility for it's omission."

As to guardianship of securities in Court.

XXXVII. Another question arose during the period of this Account as to the guardianship of securities in Court. It was found that an Order of 16th July 1875 had directed certain persons to re-deposit a box in Court, containing railway securities, on or before the 10th of March 1876. The box having been delivered out on 30th September 1875, but not re-deposited up to 1st of June 1876, an inquiry was addressed to the Paymaster upon the subject, and he replied that he did not consider it to be "any part of his duty "to see to the payment or transfer of money or securities into Court, or to the deposit of "securities or other effects in Court."

Ruling.

XXXVIII. This matter was brought under the notice of the Lords of the Treasury, and was laid by their Lordships before the Lord Chancellor; and it has been ruled that it is no part of the Chancery Paymaster's duty to take any steps "to ensure compliance with "directions which are contained in Orders of the Court, but with the execution of which "he is not charged."

Liability of Consolidated Fund.

XXXIX. In calling attention to this circumstance, I had in view the liability of the Consolidated Fund as declared in Section 5 of the Act 35 & 36 Vict. c. 44, which specifies that "the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom shall be liable to make good to the Suitors of "the Court of Chancery," not only "all money in Court and all securities in Court, whether "the same have been paid, transferred, or deposited into or in Court before or after the "commencement of the Act," but also "all money and securities vested in the Paymaster "General for the time being by or in pursuance of this Act." It is a question, which is not settled by the above decision, whether this liability would apply to securities which, having been placed in the custody of the Court, are delivered out for a limited time and for a specific purpose, and whether it might not be desirable, in the interests of the Consolidated Fund, to make some provision for the return of such securities within the time appointed.

Dormant Accounts.

Para. 28. Parliamentary Paper, No. 390, of 1876.

XL. With reference to the last paragraph of my Report upon the previous year's Account, I have to state that no advice has as yet been received in this Department of the carrying over to a separate Account in the books of the Chancery Paymaster, the small balances of money and securities, for which provision is made in Rule 92, of 1874.

I have again called attention to this delay, and the reply of the Chancery Paymaster will be found in the Appendix. I may state, however, that the list required by the preceding Rule, No. 91, to be made public, was printed in the "London Gazette" of 1st March last.

D.

Staff. Parliamentary Paper, No. 248, of 1875.

XLI. In my Report, dated 18th May 1875, upon the Account of this Service for the year 1873–74, I stated that the Lords of the Treasury had "supplied me with a staff at "present adequate for the performance of this branch of my business." At that time the examination of this Account upon the extended principle of comparing the transactions with the authorities, had not been long in operation; but at the expiration of another year year, it was found, notwithstanding considerable efforts, that this duty could not be satisfactorily performed without more assistance, and on the 8th of June 1876 I caused a letter to be addressed to the Secretary to the Treasury representing the rapid growth of the business, and submitting, for the consideration of the Lords of the Treasury, that an increase of six clerks might be made to the existing staff. A correspondence has ensued, a summary of which will be found in the copy of a letter from this Department of the 12th of January last, in the Appendix. Up to the present time my Department has not been increased, and there is an arrear of about three months in the examination, so far as it is attempted to be performed.

E.

XLII. I have, however, to observe, that the present Audit is, for the reasons stated in the letter referred to, defective in two very important particulars, viz.: Defects in Audit.

1. The verification of the powers of attorney, under which a vast number of the payments are made.

2. The examination of the payments with reference to the various conditions laid down in the Orders of the Court.

This circumstance was also specially brought under the notice of the Lords of the Treasury in a letter from this Department of 14th August 1876.

XLIII. As bearing upon the general question of the increase of work, I may mention that, owing no doubt in a great measure to unavoidable circumstances, the number of errors which are found in the printed Orders is very considerable. It is of course necessary that when these errors are corrected in the original Orders, a corresponding correction should be made in the office copies furnished to this Department, and these copies are accordingly sent back to the Department of Records and Writs for that purpose. Upwards of 3,000 Orders were returned for correction during the past year; but this gives a very imperfect idea of the number of corrections made, as there are frequently several alterations in the same Order. Most of these are amendments of clerical mistakes, or of errors arising from some accidental slip or omission, as contemplated by the Rules; but, in some cases, alterations have been made, at the instance of Solicitors, in order to substantiate transactions of the Chancery Paymaster, to which attention has been called by this Department as not being in accordance with the directions contained in Orders; while in others the time for paying money into Court has been extended; and there have been further alterations which scarcely partake of a purely clerical character. Alterations in Orders. See Rule 16 of 1874.

CORRESPONDENCE referred to in the foregoing REPORT.

(No. 1060.)

Exchequer and Audit Department.
9 October 1876.

Sir,

I AM directed by the Comptroller and Auditor General to inform you that his attention has been called to a difference of 163*l.* 3*s.* 7*d.* between the balance of cash standing at the credit of the Account of the Paymaster General for the time being on behalf of the Court of Chancery on 31st August last, and the balance which appeared to be in the Bank at that date, according to the books of the Paymaster General, and of this department. The attention of the Chancery Paymaster was called to this difference by a letter from this office of 28th March 1876, and I am to enclose a copy of Mr. Parkinson's reply, dated the 31st of that month, from which it appears that the difference consists of some arrears of dividends on South Eastern Railway Stock recently transferred into Court, for which the usual cash direction had not been issued, and has apparently not been issued even up to the present time. It is observed that the Chancery Paymaster has requested the Bank authorities not to place any arrear of dividends to account in future, without first communicating with his office; but as it will be necessary for the Comptroller and Auditor General, in his next Report to Parliament upon this Account, to explain the cause of this discrepancy in the balance, I am to request that he may be informed whether there were any reasons in the present case against carrying the dividends in question to the credit of the Chancery Suspense Account provided by Rule 31 of the Chancery Funds Rules 1874, by which action this difference would have been avoided.

I have, &c.

Bank of England, E. C.,
10 October 1876.

Sir,

I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Treherne's letter, No. 1,060 of yesterday's date, enclosing copy of a letter of the Assistant Paymaster General on behalf of the Court of Chancery, addressed to you on the 31st March last, and calling attention to a difference of 163*l.* 3*s.* 7*d.*, between the balance of cash standing at the credit of the Account of the Paymaster General for the time being on behalf of the Court of Chancery, on the 31st August last, and the balance which appeared to be in the Bank at that date, according to the books of the Paymaster General and of your department.

In reply, I beg to state that the difference referred to, 163*l.* 3*s.* 7*d.*, consists of certain arrears of dividends received from the South Eastern Railway Company for credit of the Account of the Paymaster General on behalf of the Court of Chancery, and that, as there was no apparent reason why the amount should not be appropriated (the request of the Paymaster in Chancery not to receive any arrears of dividends without first communicating with his office, having only been received subsequent to this transaction), the sum in question was placed to credit of the Account accordingly, instead of to "Chancery Suspense Account provided by Rule 31 of the Chancery Funds, 1874."

I am, &c.

Exchequer and Audit Department,
20 October 1876.

Sir,

I AM directed by the Comptroller and Auditor General to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from Mr. May, dated the 10th instant, in reply to an inquiry from this department as to a difference in the balance of the Paymaster General for the time being on behalf of the Court of Chancery on the 31st of August last. It is stated by Mr. May that the sum of 163*l.* 3*s.* 7*d.* in question was placed to the credit of the Paymaster General's Account, "as there was no apparent reason why the amount should not be appropriated;" but I am to point out to you, for the information of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, that, as shown in Mr. Parkinson's letter of 31st March last, there was no authority of the Master in Lunacy for the payment into Court of this money. The Comptroller and Auditor General is aware that a special authority is given in the Court of Chancery (Funds) Act, 1872, for the receipt by the Bank of England of dividends accruing due on all securities standing to the account of the Paymaster General for the time being on behalf of the Court of Chancery, as well as of any principal money payable in respect of any such securities, and that the certificate of the Paymaster General is a sufficient authority for that purpose; but it is apprehended that the provision in question does not apply to a case like the present, in which the amount credited was not an accruing dividend, but an arrear of dividends upon certain stocks which had only recently been transferred into Court, which arrear the Chancery Paymaster felt himself unable to bring to account without a special authority. To such a case the provision made in Rule 31 of 1874 (alluded to in my letter and in Mr. May's reply) would seem to be applicable; and as differences of this nature occasion a good deal of inconvenience and correspondence, the Comptroller and Auditor General would be glad to be informed whether, upon reconsideration, the Governor and Company are still of opinion that they are at liberty, under the regulations which govern the account in question, to carry such arrears of dividends to the credit of that Account, without the privity of the Chancery Paymaster.

I am, &c.

Bank of England E.C., 21 October 1876.

I BEG to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Treherne's letter of the 20th instant, addressed to Mr. Chubb, wherein you request to be informed whether the Bank are of opinion that under the regulations which govern the Account of the Assistant Paymaster General for Chancery, they are at liberty to carry such arrears arrears of dividends as those in question to the credit of that Account without the privity of the Chancery Paymaster.

In reply, I beg to repeat the explanation given in my letter of the 10th instant, that the warrants in question were received before any request had been made by the Paymaster in Chancery that arrear warrants should be treated exceptionally, and that there was, therefore, at that time no reason why they should not be placed to account in ordinary course.

Since the subsequent receipt of the Paymaster in Chancery's instructions on the subject, arrear warrants are not placed to account without his Certificate.

(No. 1197.)

Sir,

Exchequer and Audit Department, 25 August 1876.

I AM directed by the Comptroller and Auditor General to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Stronge's letter of the 18th instant, in which, with reference to certain queries addressed to the Chancery Paymaster, the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury state that it is important that they should know whether the Comptroller and Auditor General considers that the Paymaster has in these cases incurred responsibility according to the limits laid down in previous correspondence, or whether the Comptroller and Auditor General is opening up the wider question that it is the duty of some public officer to watch every Solicitor in every case in Chancery, and ascertain that he obeys the Order of the Court.

In reply, I am to request that you will express to their Lordships the Comptroller and Auditor General's regret that he has been compelled by a sense of duty to trouble them with the various questions which have arisen in the course of the examination of the Chancery Funds Accounts to a greater extent than he usually finds necessary in the performance of his duties connected with other Public Accounts, from the fact that the Audit, although imposed upon this Department by Act, with a proviso that the result shall be reported to Parliament, is coupled with a condition that it shall be conducted in accordance with such regulations as the Treasury may lay down for the purpose.

The main object of the Comptroller and Auditor General has consequently been to bring all infractions of Rules and Orders under the cognizance of their Lordships, not as charges of neglect of duty on the part of the Chancery Paymaster, who, in many cases, had no alternative but to act as he did, and in almost all, only followed a system which had been in existence, without challenge, for many years past; but as instances of a defective system of administration, or of a repudiation of responsibility on the part of the Chancery Paymaster quite foreign to the ordinary sense of their obligations entertained by the other public Officers rendering Accounts to this Department.

The Comptroller and Auditor General is well aware of the substantial distinction which exists between the Accounts of the Court of Chancery and those of the Voted Services, but he conceives that he would have failed in his duty if he had not submitted to their Lordships, for their consideration, any defects in the system which the result of the examination given to the Accounts brought to light.

Whether he should go further, and bring some of the points which have arisen or may arise under the notice of Parliament, is a matter for careful consideration with a due sense of the responsibility attaching to any such action on his part.

In the case which has given rise to the present correspondence, the point which the Comptroller and Auditor General thought should be submitted to their Lordships' consideration, in case they might think it desirable to give any instructions with reference to it, was the repudiation of any responsibility or obligation on the part of the Chancery Paymaster for endeavouring to correct a deviation from a rule having the force of an Act of Parliament, and from the directions of an Order of the Court which he had inadvertently committed, in consequence of incorrect representations made to him.

The case appeared to be a typical one, not fully dealt with as to the foregoing considerations in any previous communications, and it was by submitting such cases for the consideration of their Lordships, and if necessary for that of the Lord Chancellor, that the Comptroller and Auditor General hoped he might arrive at some clear principles to govern the Audit, so far at least as their Lordships' views and regulations are concerned.

Sir,

Treasury Chambers, 13 September 1876.

I AM directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Soady's letter of 25th ultimo, on the subject of certain queries addressed to the Chancery Paymaster, which you brought to the notice of this Board on the 2nd ultimo.

I am to express to you their acknowledgment for calling their attention to any defects in the Chancery pay system which appear to you to be brought to light. They have given their most serious consideration to every case which you have submitted to them, and whenever they have been in doubt, they have consulted the Lord Chancellor, who can only have one interest, viz., to see that the funds committed to his charge are safely kept and properly distributed.

My Lords are convinced that your criticisms have been and will be productive of much good; on several occasions they have brought to light omissions and errors which otherwise might have escaped notice.

They are afraid, however, that there is not complete accord between your views and the views of this Board, and of the Lord Chancellor, as to the limits of the responsibility of the Chancery Paymaster.

The views of the Lord Chancellor, with which my Lords entirely agree, were so clearly set forth in his letter of 9th March last, communicated to you on the 24th March, and again in his letter of 4th April, communicated to you on the 20th June, that my Lords cannot think there can be any doubt upon the point. The parties charged with the carriage of an Order are responsible for its execution. The Chancery Paymaster is only responsible for executing the Order when formally brought to his notice, but, as a matter of common sense, if in the course of business he becomes aware of an Order, he ought not knowingly to act in opposition to it, even though it may not have been formally brought to his notice by those charged with the carriage of it.

Sir, Exchequer and Audit Department, 1 March 1877.

I am to express the regret of the Comptroller and Auditor General that he should feel compelled again to bring under the notice of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury the question which formed the subject of your letter to this Department, dated 20th June 1876, and the correspondence enclosed in it, with regard to the obligation of the Chancery Paymaster in following out the directions of Orders of the Court. Nothing could be more clear than the decision of their Lordships and of the Lord Chancellor, as communicated in that letter and other correspondence, that it is not the duty of the Chancery Paymaster to go out of his way to acquaint himself with the contents of Orders, or to inform himself of their issue, until the suitors or their agents call upon him to act upon them, but as it appears to the Comptroller and Auditor General, there is still some obscurity as to the question how far the Paymaster should look into an Order when it has been brought to his notice, or should take steps to correct any action which has arisen from the want of sufficient knowledge of the directions of the Court.

In your letter to this Department of 8th April 1876, No. 4505, it was stated that "my Lords think that "the Chancery Paymaster should consider himself as bound by the contents of all Orders of the Court "which are brought to his notice."

On the 19th June 1876, Mr. Law wrote as follows: "As my Lords read the Lord Chancellor's opinion "(on the case of Maynard v. Keartland), it is not the duty of the Chancery Paymaster to go out of his way "to obtain knowledge of an Order, but that when he has knowledge of an Order, he should decline to act in a manner inconsistent with such Order." The opinion referred to would appear to be that contained in a letter from Mr. Leach, dated 4th "April" (query June) 1876, a copy of which was forwarded to this Department in your letter of 20th June, No. 7670. This opinion is to the effect that whenever the Chancery Paymaster has sufficient notice of a direction in an Order for the investment or other disposal of a sum of money paid into Court, he should decline to deal with it in a manner inconsistent with such direction, and that, "as a general rule it is not the duty of the Chancery Paymaster to acquaint himself with the "contents of Orders until the parties call upon him to act upon them."

In the Treasury Letter communicating this decision to the Paymaster, their Lordships state that they understand the result to be that, although "he is bound by the contents of an Order when he knows what they are," he is "not called upon to take steps for acquainting himself with more of such contents "than the parties themselves choose to bring to his notice."

In a subsequent letter, however, to this Department, dated 13th September last (No. 14,159), their Lordships, while referring to the Lord Chancellor's opinion, and reasserting that the Chancery Paymaster is only responsible for executing the Order when formally brought to his notice, observe that "as a matter "of common sense, if, in the course of business, he becomes aware of an Order, he ought not knowingly to "act in opposition to it, even though it may not have been formally brought to his notice by those charged "with the carriage of it."

The question for consideration appears, therefore, to be what constitutes the knowledge of an Order on the part of the Chancery Paymaster. When an Order is brought to him to be acted on, is he to confine his inspection of it simply to the direction brought under his notice, and in the case of sums paid into Court, to the consequent directions regarding their disposal; or is it unreasonable to require of the Paymaster that he should take such a note of the Order, before he parts with it, as shall preclude his acting again upon previous Orders which it either supersedes or varies?

The Comptroller and Auditor General is anxious to obtain a definite decision upon this question, because it is apparent from answers recently received from the Chancery Paymaster to queries addressed to him on individual cases, that he interprets his instructions in the more limited sense, and repudiates any obligation to look into the Orders brought to him, for any other purpose than to see what are the directions in regard to the matter specially submitted to his notice.

There is one other question upon which the Comptroller and Auditor General would be glad to be favoured with their Lordships' opinion. In the event of its being considered that the view taken by Mr. Parkinson is the correct one, and that he is exonerated from any responsibility in regard to action on his part which may be contrary to directions contained in an Order which he has seen but has only noted for another purpose; is it the opinion of their Lordships that, when the attention of the Paymaster is called by this Office to the fact that he has been led by the parties concerned to act in opposition to the later directions of the Court, he is to take no steps, by way of informing the solicitors or otherwise, for the correction of the mistake?

To make the matter more clear, I am to submit the following example which has recently occurred.

Two Orders of February 1876, directed the investment of certain monies in consols, and the investment of the dividends thereon in the same securities. Upon these orders the Paymaster acted in February and November last, presumably upon the request of the solicitor, by investing, first, the principal money, and next, the July dividend. In the meantime, however, an Order had been issued in June 1876, directing that the dividends and cash should be used, so far as they would go, in the payment of duty and legacies, and that any further dividend to accrue before the transfer of the stocks should be paid away.

The Paymaster's attention having been called to the fact that he had acted upon this Order in August last, he replied as follows, viz.: "No direction in an Order superseding the authority for the investment "in question had been brought to the Chancery Paymaster's notice at the time that investment took "place. A direction to pay money into Court in an Order would certainly not, in itself, call attention "to directions dealing with dividends on funds already in Court."

Sir, Chancery Pay Office, Chancery Lane,
26 February 1877.

In answer to Mr. Treherne's letter of the 6th instant, No. 262, upon the subject of the carrying over of small balances to a separate Account as directed by Rule 92 of the Chancery Funds Consolidated Rules, 1874, I have to state that the investigations to which allusion is made for carrying out the directions of Rule 91 occupied much more time than was anticipated at the time of writing my letter of 28th December 1875; added to which has been the extra work occasioned by the alteration last year of the rate of the income tax. From these and other causes it became impracticable, with a due regard to public convenience, to carry into effect the provisions of the rule to which my attention is now again called. The subject, however, has been by no means lost sight of in this Department, and I hope that the clerks will be able, able, as soon as the placing on deposit and investment of the last January dividend, which are now in progress, have been completed, to commence the carrying over of the small balances in question.

(E.)

(No. 102.)

Sir, Exchequer and Audit Department, 12 January 1877.

I AM directed by the Comptroller and Auditor General to request that the attention of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury may be drawn to the correspondence which took place during the past year upon the subject of the additional requirements for the Chancery Branch of this Department.

In a letter, dated 8th June 1876, the Comptroller and Auditor General represented to their Lordships that the staff of this Branch Office was far from sufficient to keep pace with the work; that the Orders and Accounts were rapidly increasing; and that, in order to prevent the growth of an arrear which it might be very difficult afterwards to subdue, it was necessary that the staff should be increased, as speedily as possible, to the extent of at least six clerks.

To that representation no reply was received until the 22nd September 1876, when it appeared, by a letter from Mr. Law (No. 9622), that their Lordships entertained some doubt whether the audit applied by this Department to the Court of Chancery Funds Account was not of a more extended character than that which they considered to be necessary or desirable, and their Lordships accordingly suggested that some further inquiry into the subject should precede any sanction which they might give to an increase of the Establishment.

This letter gave rise to a further communication from the Comptroller and Auditor General, dated the 6th of October, in which, while inviting an inquiry into the system of the work, he gave a sketch of the mode of conducting it, with the view of showing that the several instances that had from time to time been brought under the notice of the Treasury of an apparent failure to carry out the intentions of the Court, had really no bearing upon the ordinary and ever-increasing work of the office, and that, if their Lordships' views were adopted, that work, as now performed, would still require the assistance asked for.

The Comptroller and Auditor General cannot but think that the delay which has taken place in arriving at a settlement on this question is detrimental to the working of the audit of the Chancery Funds Account; and that it is consequently most desirable that some early decision should be arrived at in regard to this branch of the business entrusted to him by Parliament.

If it be still the desire of the Lords of the Treasury that he should look to the "due and faithful execution "of the Orders of the Court, so far as they relate to the receipt, disposal, or expenditure of money," or stock, and that the Accounts should be subjected "to a thorough, efficient, and independent Audit," he is of opinion that these objects can only be satisfactorily attained by pursuing the present system, but, notwithstanding the efforts which have been made by his staff, the examination of the transactions is 2¾ months in arrear; and on the 1st of January last there were between 300 and 400 Orders not proceeded with. It should also be borne in mind that the examination now given is very imperfect, no check whatever being attempted either with reference to Powers of Attorney or Certificates of Life or other conditions of payment. It was ruled by the Lords of the Treasury in December 1875 (see Mr. Law's letter, 29th of that month, No. 17,766), that Powers of Attorney and Life Certificates should be furnished to this Department by the Chancery Paymaster, and it is manifest that any such rule applying to Life Certificates would apply equally to certificates or other evidence required by the Court of Chancery as conditions of payment. These conditions are very frequent and very various, but no evidence of their fulfilment accompanies the Paymaster's vouchers, and in the present examination no attention is paid to them or to Powers of Attorney, it being impossible, as represented to their Lordships in a letter from this Department of 14th August last, to attempt the extended examination, which would be thus involved, with the present staff.

In conclusion, I am to state that the number of Orders, copies of which were sent to this office during the calendar years 1875 and 1876, were as follows:—

In the year 1875		6,255
In the year 1876:—
Orders of 1875	744
Orders of 1876	6,864
		7,608
Increase of Orders of both years received during 1876		1,353

If the numbers be confined to those bearing dates in 1875 and 1876 respectively, they will stand as follows:—

Orders of 1875 received in 1875	6,255
Orders of 1876 received in 1876	6,864
Increase in 1876	609

This will afford some idea of the increase of the work, but it is to be remembered that in the above figures, Lunacy Orders, and Subsidiary authorities, which latter are exceedingly numerous, are not included.

Note.—It has not been possible to make out the Return for the year to 31st March 1877, in any form which will admit of comparison with the eturn of the preceding year, for the following reasons:—

1. The Return for the year to 31st March 1876 only included the amount received from Stamps prior to the issue of the Regulations of 28th October 1875, while for the year to 31st March 1877, the receipts from Stamps have been given for the entire year.

2. The effect of the Judicature Acts has been to increase by three the number of Judges of the Court of Appeal, and to enable that Court to hear appeals both from the Common Law and Chancery Divisions.

It has, therefore, not been found possible accurately to apportion the receipts from Stamps arising from the business of the several Divisions of the upreme Court.

MEMORANDUM.

The above Summary does not include any Sittings in Chambers.

The Master of the Rolls and Vice Chancellor Bacon sat in Chambers twice every week, and the Vice Chancellors Malins and Hall three times every week (except in vacation) at the rising of their courts.

No record is kept of the attendance in Chambers of Judges of the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer Divisions. These sittings commence at 11 o'clock, and usually last too long for the judge to sit in court on the same day. The presidents of these divisions very rarely sit in Chambers, although they do so during the Circuits if necessary. One of the remaining judges sits for all the divisions every day of the week except on Friday, when, as a rule, two judges sit. In the short vacations a day sometimes passes without any judge attending, and in the long vacation a judge sits only two or three days a week as required.

It would, therefore, appear that on about 270 days, judges of these divisions sat in Chambers, and that on about 40 of these days, two judges sat. This would represent about 310 sittings to be taken by the 12 puisne judges.

The judges of the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division sat in Chambers as required before the sitting of the court.

RETURN to an Address of the Honourable The House of Commons, dated 14 May 1877:—for,

"COPY of the JOINT MEMORIAL of the INCORPORATED CHAMBER of COMMERCE of LIVERPOOL and the LAW SOCIETY of LIVERPOOL to the LORD CHANCELLOR, bearing date the 19th day of February 1875, on the subject of the inadequacy of existing arrangements for the Despatch of CIVIL LITIGATED BUSINESS at LIVERPOOL."

TO THE LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR OF GREAT BRITAIN.

MEMORIAL adopted at a general meeting of the INCORPORATED CHAMBER of COMMERCE of LIVERPOOL and the INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY of LIVERPOOL.

YOUR memorialists beg to call your Lordship's attention to the necessity for very largely increased provision for the despatch of the civil business of the Liverpool assizes.

The arrangements for the transaction of assize business at Liverpool have long been a subject of dissatisfaction to the mercantile public in Liverpool. The pressure of business is such that the whole of the causes set down for trial cannot be satisfactorily disposed of; hurry and pressure in consequence result, and many causes are either tried in haste, or hastily arranged, or needlessly driven to arbitration.

As an illustration of this, your memorialists desire to call your Lordship's attention to the state of the business at the last Liverpool summer assizes, which was not an exceptional case, but presents a fair specimen of the state of business at the spring and summer assizes, and of the mode in which it is usually disposed of. In the winter assize the amount of business is not so great, owing to the shorter time which it has had to mature, but as the available time is shorter, there is often an equal amount of pressure.

At the last summer assizes there were 122 causes, of which 57 were entered for trial by special juries, and they were disposed of as follows:—

Struck out	5
Undefended	9
Verdict by consent	3
Juror withdrawn	1
Referred or special cases	13
Tried	49
Withdrawn	41
Remanet by consent	1
	122

The assizes lasted 14 working days. During seven of these days two courts were sitting for the trial of civil cases, and for two days three courts.

It will be obvious to your Lordship, that 23 days is a very insufficient time in which to try 122 cases, including 57 entered for special juries, in one court, and that the trial of 58 causes, of which 9 were undefended, is not a satisfactory mode of disposing of a cause list containing 122.

No doubt some cases are entered for trial, which are either not intended to be pushed to actual trial, or are unfit for trial by a jury, but the number of 41 withdrawn, beside 13 disposed of by reference or special case, must largely exceed any allowance that could fairly be made on this account, and it is well known that a large number of cases which are eminently suited for trial before a judge and jury, and which the parties wish to have so tried, are taken to the assizes, and that although all the expense attending a trial is incurred, they are afterwards compromised or referred by the parties from despair of being able to secure a deliberate and careful trial.

But the evil is in fact still more extensive than would appear from these facts, for it is certain that from the same causes a still greater number of cases than those which are referred or settled at the assizes are compromised on unsatisfactory terms, or privately referred without being set down for trial at all, or even without legal proceedings having been instituted.

It is submitted to your Lordship that the reference of any cause which is suited for trial by a judge and jury, and which the parties desire so to try, is a denial of justice. Arbitrations, particularly when the referee is a barrister, and when barristers attend on both sides, are much more expensive and more dilatory than lawsuits; and are sometimes, owing to the difficulty of getting all the counsel together at one time, prolonged to the duration even of several years, at a money cost many times exceeding that of trial at the assizes; and as the decision of an arbitrator cannot be reviewed or questioned, the result of an arbitration is more often unsatisfactory than that of a trial.

The trial of civil causes at one assize in more than one court at the same time, is also a serious evil. There being no division of the bar between the different courts, and it being often impossible to tell in which court a case will be brought on, the suitor is often deprived at a critical moment of the assistance of the counsel whom he has retained and paid, and whom he desires to entrust with the management of his case.

This evil is much increased when there are, as almost invariably happens at the Liverpool assizes, two courts sitting at the same time for the trial of special jury cases, as these are chiefly in the hands of the leading counsel on the circuit.

Another evil that is complained of by suitors is, the impossibility under the present system of fixing with any degree of certainty the day when a particular cause will come on for trial, and the consequent great loss of time to witnesses and suitors. The practice is to publish at the close of the business of each day a list of causes for the day following, but this list almost invariably includes a considerably greater number of cases than can really be tried in the day, and a case therefore often remains for several days in the list and the parties' attorneys and witnesses are kept in attendance; whilst, on the other hand, as a publication of the list at the close of the previous day's business does not afford sufficient time to bring down witnesses from a distance, very little if any saving of time to such witnesses results.

Your Lordship's attention is also drawn to the fact that whilst the Nisi Prius courts are thus overworked and unequal to the due discharge of the business coming before them, this business is about to be largely increased by the coming into operation of the Judicature Act.

Your memorialists consider, and respectfully press upon your Lordship, that these evils cannot be remedied by anything but an entire change of the assize system in Lancashire.

They submit to your Lordship that the county of Lancaster, or at all events, the divisions of West Derby and Salford, should be withdrawn from the present assize system, and have either continuous sittings with suitable vacations, or very frequent sittings without limit of time.

In this way the business would be deliberately done, and particular days might be fixed for taking important cases, so as both to secure the services of leading London counsel, when necessary, and to enable appointments to be made with witnesses from a distance. The practice of the Admiralty Court in this respect is found to work well, and to suit the convenience alike of counsel, witnesses, and suitors.

The Committee of the Incorporated Law Society of Liverpool have made a careful estimate of the probable time that would be required for the business now classed under the heads of Common Law, Criminal, Equity, Admiralty, Probate and Divorce business at Liverpool when the Judicature Act comes into into operation, and the following are the conclusions they have arrived at, namely:—

That the Common Law and Criminal business would take	112	days.
The Equity business, or business which now goes to Courts of Equity	50	„
Admiralty business	40	„
Probate and Divorce	15	„
Motions and Appeals	40	„
TOTAL	257	„

This number of days is more than the legal year would furnish, allowing for vacations, and therefore it appears that Liverpool civil business alone would probably be sufficient to take up the time of at least one judge constantly at work.

Your memorialists also beg to remind your Lordship, that the necessity for increased facilities for trial of causes at Liverpool and Manchester has already been acknowledged by the highest authority, namely, the Royal Judicature Commission, which recommended four sittings in the year at Liverpool and Manchester, and that the duration of these sittings should not be limited.

Your memorialists also refer your Lordship to a letter which appears in the Appendix to the Fifth Report of the Commission, addressed to the late Lord Chancellor by a committee appointed by the members of the northern circuit, in which, it is stated that "at Manchester and at Liverpool there are too many causes to be properly tried under the present arrangements," and also, "that causes cannot be tried within the time, and therefore cannot be tried at all."

The remedy suggested by the committee of the circuit is, that three judges should be sent down to Liverpool and Manchester, and that three courts should sit simultaneously.

This remedy would, for the reasons before pointed out to your Lordship, be, in one important respect, an increase of the evil, as one of the evils complained of is the sitting of more than one court for the disposal of the same cause list at the same time. And even if otherwise satisfactory, the foregoing estimate will prove to your Lordship that in mere time the increase would be altogether insufficient to meet the necessities of the case.

The remedy proposed by the Royal Commission, of four assizes or sittings not limited in duration, would also be unsatisfactory, because no gap in the legal year could be found in which another assize could be introduced without interfering with legal work in London, and so long as the assize business is exclusively conducted by a bench and a bar whose main duties lie in London, it is impossible to conceive that it would not be more or less hurried through, and therefore attended by the same evils as at present.

Your memorialists desire to remind your Lordship that under the Judicature Act much of the business heretofore conducted in the offices of the Courts in London will now be conducted in Liverpool and Manchester, by the district registrars of the Court, and there can be no doubt that the presence of a judge upon the spot to hear appeals from the registrars, promptly and inexpensively, would (more particularly when a new practice is about to be introduced) be of very great advantage to the administration of justice.

Your memorialists have fully considered the various objections that may be made to their proposals.

They feel strongly the objections to a resident judge, but they do not conceive that their proposals involve any necessity for a judge resident in Liverpool, as continuous or frequent sittings can be as well provided for by a succession of judges of the High Court as by a single resident judge.

The proposals of your memorialists might and probably would involve an increase in the number of judges, but they cannot believe that Parliament would hesitate to provide for any increase of judicial force that the business of the country may require.

Your memorialists are aware of the importance of the bar who conduct business at Nisi Prius being able to attend the appeals in the same cases before the High Court in London; but they consider that that end could be easily attained by arranging that Liverpool appeals should come on at fixed times during which the court at Liverpool should have a vacation, and such vacation would not need to be a long one, or as some classification of business will probably always exist, and a different set of counsel will be engaged in different classes, it would probably be practicable to arrange that one class of business should fill up the time occupied by the appeals in another class.

It is stated by the committee of the northern circuit, in the letter before referred to, that it is "the opinion of the circuit that by making Lancashire a circuit of itself, the local bars of Manchester and Liverpool would be deprived of the support and supervision of the general body of the profession, which would necessarily tend to lower their position."

Your memorialists submit that imaginary objections of this kind are not to be weighed in comparison with a clearly proved case of public necessity in a matter deeply affecting the interests of suitors, and they submit that no such lowering of the position of the bar would in fact take place, but, on the contrary, that the field afforded for the junior members of the bar in courts constantly in session in Liverpool and Manchester would afford an invaluable opening for the talents of many accomplished lawyers, whose abilities are now unknown, owing to their being lost in the crowd. Such men would, your memorialists believe, by beginning their career in Liverpool or Manchester, be brought forward and acquire the necessary practical experience of actually conducting business in court much earlier in life than at present, whilst the opportunity of arguing the appeals on their own cases in London, would both afford them the supervision of the general body of the profession, and secure them an opportunity of becoming known to the wider public of the metropolis; and the supervision during the sittings of the court in Liverpool of judges, who would be at other times in full contact with the rest of the Bench and the professional circles of the metropolis, would effectually prevent any narrow local spirit from arising. Nor would there be any probability that men of conspicuous abilities would find any obstacle in transferring themselves to London, and in aiming at and acquiring the highest honours of the profession.

The matter seems to stand at present in the following position. The Statute, Section 68, gives power to Her Majesty, with the advice of your Lordship, the Lord Chief Justice, and the other judges of the several courts intended to be united and consolidated by the Act, to cause to be prepared rules providing—

For the regulation of circuits, including the times and places at which they are to be holden, and the business to be transacted thereat. (Sub-sect. 2.)

And generally for the regulation of any matters relating to the practice and procedure of the said courts respectively, or to the duties of the officers thereof, or to the costs of proceedings therein, or to the conduct of civil or criminal business coming within the cognizance of the said courts respectively, for which provision is not expressly made by that Act, or by the rules contained in the schedule thereto. (Sub-sect. 4.)

With the exception of Rule LV. no rule appears to have been made under this section, and that rule does not deal with the circuits.

It appears by a paper laid before the House of Commons, that Her Majesty's judges have recommended the division of the northern circuit, and that the north western circuit should include the counties of Westmoreland, Cumberland, and Lancashire, but have made no fresh recommendation on the subject of more frequent assizes.

Your memorialists therefore pray your Lordship that rules may be made under the Judicature Act, for providing for continuous sittings of the High Court for disposing of civil business in Liverpool, or that, if it seems to your Lordship more expedient, a Bill may be brought in by Her Majesty's Government for carrying out the objects advocated by your memorialists.

STATUTE LAW COMMITTEE.

RETURN to an Order of the Honourable The House of Commons, dated 25 June 1877;—for,

COPY "of PAPERS relative to the PROCEEDINGS of the STATUTE LAW COMMITTEE respecting CONSOLIDATION and the CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE AND INDEX TO THE STATUTES."

MEMORANDUM FOR THE LORD CHANCELLOR.

1. The Statute Law Committee, since they attended the Lord Chancellor, have considered the subjects on which he desired to have a report from them. They are—

I.—Consolidation.
II.—Chronological Table and Index.
III.—Further Edition of the Statutes Revised.
IV.—Scotland and Ireland.

I.—CONSOLIDATION.

2. In the Memorandum submitted by the Committee to the Lord Chancellor on 7 July 1875, they said:

The Statute Law Committee, in accordance with the recommendations of their Memorandum of 1 March 1875, which received the approval of the Lord Chancellor, have caused several Consolidation Bills to be prepared on subjects therein specified.

Those subjects were selected by the Committee as suitable for a first experiment, and as admitting of a simple and easy process of consolidation.

But the Committee, on proceeding to deal with the Acts affected, making such improvements in arrangement and expression as appeared to them to be required, found the work to involve more extensive alterations than were anticipated, and to exceed the limits of simple Consolidation. In some cases difficulties have occurred in reconciling the several enactments in force. A longer time than was estimated has, consequently, been spent upon the work, and further consideration is required for new legislative provisions, so that the Bills can scarcely be passed into law before the end of the present Session.

Under these circumstances the Statute Law Committee conceive that the Lord Chancellor will probably deem it sufficient to lay these Bills, or some of them, on the table of the House of Lords before the prorogation, allowing full time to consider them during the recess.

In that interval the Government may also be disposed to consider more fully the general subject of Consolidation, particularly with reference to the Report just presented to the House of Commons by the Select Committee on Acts of Parliament. It is recommended by that Report that Consolidation should henceforth be proceeded with on a more extended scale, and under a supervision more assiduous and complete, than it is in the power of the Statute Law Committee, with a due regard to the occupations in which they are severally engaged, to undertake.

3. Subsequent consideration has confirmed the Committee in the view there suggested, that systematic Consolidation is impracticable under existing conditions.

4. There is, in the first place, a large number of enactments, either on the one hand of too little importance, or on the other of too grave a character, to come properly within the scope of any general scheme for effecting Consolidation, regarded as an object in itself. These must be left out of consideration. Of the residue, being fit subjects for Consolidation as such, many groups could not be dealt with except by the Government Departments charged with the administration of them (for instance, the Poor Law Acts). For dealing with the ultimate residue,—being fit subjects for

* Note.—The Committee, as at present constituted, consists of Sir J. G. Shaw Lefevre, K.C.B., Sir T. Erskine May, K.C.B., Sir H. Thring, K.C.B., Sir H. S. Maine, K.C.S.I., Mr. Lingen, C.B., Mr. Reilly, and Mr. O'Hara.

Consolidation and not necessarily departmental,—there is at present no competent machinery.

5. The Statute Law Committee could not think of attempting to superintend the preparation of a series of Consolidation Bills. There is no Minister in a position to take charge of and pass such Bills and be responsible for them, even if they had been prepared.

6. The Select Committee of the House of Commons of last Session on Acts of Parliament say in their Report:

> . . . . Your Committee recommend that the work of Consolidation should be carried on upon a regular system, and by skilled hands, acting under the authority of some permanent Government force, either a Minister, or separate department constituted for the purpose, in connexion with the office of the Parliamentary Counsel.

7. No such force has yet been called into operation by Her Majesty's Government. The Statute Law Committee can, therefore, at present do no more than suggest an indirect method by which systematic Consolidation might be promoted. The Lord Chancellor, in his capacity of head of the Law, might cause representations to be made to the several Government Departments of the expediency, with reference to the improvement of the Statute Law generally, of their effecting, as far as may be, a consolidation of the various groups of Statutes which they respectively have to administer. These representations should be not merely in general terms, but should be accompanied by some specification of the Statutes to be operated on, and of the nature of the work proposed.

8. For example, there are many Acts relating to Municipal Corporations which could, with great advantage, be put into one Act, under the authority and on the responsibility of the Secretary of State for the Home Department. It may be expected that a Consolidation Bill on this subject, not altering the existing Acts fundamentally, amending them only or mainly with a view to the exigencies of Consolidation, would not encounter much difficulty in Parliament.

9. Another illustration may be taken from the Mutiny Act and Marine Mutiny Act. These two Acts yearly burden the Statute Book to a grievous extent, to the extent in 1874 of nearly one-fifth of the whole volume. If the Secretary of State for War and the Admiralty were to determine that the provisions of these Acts, which are re-produced year by year, should be passed once for all, in an amended form, so that the annual Acts would merely have to incorporate or continue by reference a general Act, this would be a most valuable (though possibly difficult) piece of Statute Law reform.

Evidence before Select Committee on Acts of Parliament, 1875, Questions 541–4.

10. The Committee would endeavour to be of use, if the Lord Chancellor should desire their services, with reference to the classification of Acts for this purpose, and any communications which he might think fit to make thereon to the various Government Departments.

II.—Chronological Table and Index.

11. The Committee think the time has come for a thorough revision of this work. As was to be expected in a new work of this character, some improvements in plan suggest themselves, and there are imperfections in execution.

1. Index.

12. The Committee will first speak of the Index.

(i.) They think the plan of the Index should be improved by the more extensive adoption of a systematic classification of the Acts under the different heads. For example, under—

> Poor:
> (8.) Union.

there should be entries bringing out distinctly the effect of the enactments relating to Union Chargeability (that is, the charge of poor relief on the Common Fund of the Union), which modify extensively the Poor Law system.

So the entries under Divorce should be classified with reference to—

> Divorce.
> Judicial Separation.
> Restitution of Conjugal Rights.

and other distinct subjects.

(ii.) The Index should have, as far as reasonably may be, less of the character of a collection of references, and more of the character of a very brief digest of the substance of the enactments. With this view, the effect of a section or group of sections individually should be shortly indicated, wherever that is reasonably practicable, instead of there being merely a reference to the section or sections by number. For example, under the head MERCHANT SHIPPING there is the following entry:

(2.) Passengers.

Survey, and certificates of passenger steamers } 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104. ss. 301–321.
25 & 26 Vict. c. 63. s. 34.
35 & 36 Vict. c. 73. s. 8., &c.

The contents of the twenty sections of the Merchant Shipping Act referred to should be stated with greater particularity.

Care would be necessary, no doubt, to keep down the bulk of the work.

Oulton's Index to the Statutes affecting Ireland appears to the Committee to err on the side of fulness. Stamp's Index affords, they think, a better model.

(iii.) In cases where, from the nature of the subject, nothing more might be required than a general reference, the sections of the Acts, if the Acts relate to more subjects than one, should nevertheless be specified; thus the following entry would be much improved by the addition of the references to sections which are here inserted in brackets:

POOR.

(2.) Guardians and Managers.

. . . . . .

Superannuation allowance and compensation to officers of, and to trustees, &c. under local Act.
27 & 28 Vict. c. 42.
29 & 30 Vict. c. 113. [ss. 1–4.]
30 & 31 Vict. c. 106. [ss. 18–20.]
31 & 32 Vict. c. 122. [s. 25.]
33 & 34 Vict. c. 2. [ss. 9, 10.]
33 & 34 Vict. c. 94.

So, again, there is this entry:

PRISONER.

Calendar of Prisoners at Assize and Quarter Sessions . . . . . 3 Hen. 7. c. 3.
28 & 29 Vict. c. 126.

But the latter Act contains 82 sections, only one of which, s. 62., relates to the calendar.

13. Such a revision of the Index as the Committee think desirable will require a great amount of labour and skill, as well as an extensive knowledge of the Statute Law.

14. The Committee suggest that, as in the case of the Statute Law Revision Bills, the assistance of the various Government Departments might be enlisted in the revision of the Index, with reference to the heads with which they are respectively concerned.

15. It has been suggested that there is a disadvantage in the division of the Index, there being separate parts for Scotland, Ireland, and the Colonies. The Committee are on the whole favourable to the combination of the several parts into one.

2. Chronological Table.

16. The Committee think that the value of the Table would be much increased if there were entered in the third column not only repeals total and partial, but also amendments of, and other operations on, Acts in force. It would also be useful in some cases if the entry of a partial repeal specified the part, where the part is unmistakeably identified by number of section, or otherwise. But, as these changes would add much to the bulk and expense of the work, the Committee would wish to consider further the question of their adoption.

III.—FURTHER EDITION OF THE STATUTES REVISED.

17. The Committee after they had, at the end of last year, learned, through one of the members of the Committee, the Lord Chancellor's wishes on the subject of a further edition of the Statutes Revised, gave their consideration to it.

18. They are of opinion that the publication, as soon as practicable, of a further edition is eminently desirable.

19. It has been stated, as an objection to a further edition, that it would interfere with the sale of the present one. But it has never been contemplated that the further edition should be brought out or even be publicly announced at such a time as to injure the sale of the first. All that is requisite now is that arrangements for the production, in due time, of a further edition should be begun.

20. The further edition should be in a less expensive form than the present one, so as to be accessible to all classes of purchasers.

21. Its bulk would be reduced by the application of subsequent repeals, by the omission of the French and Latin originals, and in other ways.

22. The Committee recommend that the opportunity of the preparation of the further edition be taken to carry on the work of Statute Law Revision in a somewhat new form. In the present edition there is a large number of enactments that might be got rid of by a few new Acts combining expurgation with consolidation. For instance, Act after Act contains a detailed procedure for the recovery of penalties under that particular Act. One general enactment could easily be framed to cover all these provisions, which could then be repealed and left out. A similar treatment could be applied to the great mass of legislation operated on, without being repealed, by the Supreme Court of Judicature Acts. All such provisions would come under review, and could be repealed, in the course of the preparation of the further edition, those that were still of any value being concentrated into a new Act.

23. It would be of great advantage if the further edition could be so printed that each Act might be purchaseable separately. There are, however, obvious counter-balancing disadvantages, and the Committee would desire to consider whether this arrangement can be effected.

IV.—Scotland and Ireland.

24. The Committee think attention should now be turned to the Statutes affecting Scotland alone or Ireland alone.

25. The Committee recommend—

(i.) That there be a revision by repealing Acts of the respective ante-Union Statutes of the Parliaments of Scotland and Ireland; this has been partially effected as regards Ireland.

(ii.) That a revised edition of those respective ante-Union Statutes remaining in force be published.

(iii.) That a Chronological Table and Index of those Statutes be published.

(iv.) That in the further edition proposed, the post-Union Statutes affecting Scotland only and Ireland only be put into two separate sets of volumes, so that the purchase of them may be optional.

26. The Committee would endeavour to co-operate on these matters with the Law Officers for Scotland and Ireland, if the Lord Chancellor so desired.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE LORD CHANCELLOR.

1. The Statute Law Committee, since they submitted to the Lord Chancellor their Memorandum of 24 May 1876, have continued to give from time to time their best consideration to the subject of systematic Consolidation, the difficulty of which is as great as its importance. The Committee have especially looked at it in connexion with the plan for the future publication of a further Edition.

2. The Committee are of opinion that the numerous schemes which have from time to time been put forward for Consolidation on a large scale (including those which have emanated from the Committee) have erred from being framed too much in a theoretical and, so to speak, abstract manner, without a sufficiently close and practical attention to the actual contents of the Statute Book itself.

3. The Committee think that the aims of Consolidation should be combined with the aims of Revision. The choice of subjects for Consolidation, and the contents of the Consolidating Bills, may best be determined by considering the extent to which the enactments on the several subjects encumber the Statute Book, and consequently the extent to which the Bills will promote Expurgation and assist towards the preparation of a further and more condensed Edition.

4. The advanced stage at which the Revised Edition, now in progress under the direction of the Committee, has arrived furnishes both the opportunity and the means for the adoption of such a plan.

5. The Committee will illustrate what they have said, in this way. An examination of the first volume of the Revised Edition shows that the early Statutes there printed, as still in force, relate in great part to the subject of Sheriffs, and in great part to the subject of Distress. The Committee would therefore recommend that these two subjects should be taken for Consolidation as soon as may be.

6. With a view to the execution of a scheme of this kind, the Committee would propose, as the first step, to have an examination of the Revised Statutes (with the subsequent Acts, as far as necessary) made, Act by Act, and to have the results recorded with reference to the possibilities of Consolidation and Expurgation.

7. On many Acts it would be necessary for the Committee to have reports from Mr. A. J. Wood and the other gentlemen who prepared the Statute Law Revision Bills, in order to ascertain the reasons for the non-repeal of those Acts.

8. In many cases the Committee would be able to indicate groups of Acts for Departmental treatment.

9. Other Acts appearing to be fit subjects for Consolidation would, as far as the Committee now see, have to be dealt with by Bills prepared in connexion with the Office of the Parliamentary Counsel, according to one of the suggestions of the Select Committee of the House of Commons of 1875 on Acts of Parliament; such arrangements being adopted as Her Majesty's Government might think fit for making the execution of this special work compatible with the discharge of the general duties devolving on that Office.

10. Consolidation Bills of this kind should be specially marked out,—by preliminary Reports or Papers laid before the Houses of Parliament, by a Memorandum accompanying each Bill when introduced, and in every other mode admissible by Parliamentary usage,—as Bills of which the object is to compress the bulk and improve the form of the Statute Law, altering the effect of it either not at all, or only on minor points and in a way not open to question.

11. The Committee also hope that it may be possible to obtain the appointment of a Select Committee in one or in both of the Houses of Parliament, to which Committee or Committees all Bills of this kind might be referred for examination as regards their coming within the category of simple Consolidation Bills.

12. The Committee do not despair of seeing Parliament accept, without discussion of the merits, Bills framed in good faith in the manner proposed, and thus introduced and dealt with.

13. But the Committee are of opinion that, in order that the Committee may be able to perform efficiently and with proper influence the work indicated in this Memorandum, it is desirable that the number of the members of the Committee be somewhat increased. They, therefore, without at present going further into particulars respecting that work, submit to the Lord Chancellor that it is expedient that some new members be added to the Committee.

6 December 1876.

The Principal Secretary to the Lord Chancellor to the Secretary to the Statute Law Committee.

House of Lords,
19th December 1876.

Sir,

I am directed by the Lord Chancellor to state to you, for the information of the Statute Law Committee, that he approves of the suggestion made to him in their Memorandum of the 6th instant, and he has accordingly appointed Sir Henry Maine,

K.C.S.I., Mr. R. R. W. Lingen, C.B., and Mr. O'Hara to be members of the Committee, with their respective assents.

I am to add that the Lord Chancellor will be glad to receive any observations that the Committee may from time to time think fit to make on any matter relating to the Statutes.

I am, &c.
(Signed) HENRY J. L. GRAHAM,
Principal Secretary.

H. C. Malkin, Esq.

4.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE LORD CHANCELLOR.

I.—CONSOLIDATION.

1. The Statute Law Committee, as enlarged, adhere to the views expressed in the Memorandum of the Committee of 6 December 1876, on the subject of Consolidation.

2. After a general preliminary examination of the contents of the eleven volumes of the Revised Edition by a member of the Committee (Mr. Reilly), the Committee determined to have a more detailed examination made of the whole Statutes with respect to the subjects of (1) Sheriff and Distress, (2) Civil Procedure and Courts, (3) Criminal Law and Procedure; and, for these subjects respectively, they have obtained the assistance of Mr. G. A. R. FitzGerald, Mr. Arthur Wilson, and Mr. R. S. Wright.

3. The Committee hope to be able to report soon on the result of this examination as regards the first subject. The work, as regards the two others, will necessarily occupy a considerable time.

4. At the same time, the Committee have not failed to give attention to the Consolidation of Departmental and other Statutes.

II.—CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE AND INDEX.

5. The Committee have determined to publish a new Edition of the Chronological Table and Index in February 1878.

6. This Edition will be to an important extent revised and improved.

7. Several portions of the Index will be re-drawn under a new arrangement from which the Committee expect valuable results, namely, the employment of several Draftsmen under the superintendence and control of the Editor.

8. The portions which the Committee have already selected for re-drawing, and the Draftsmen to be employed on them, are as follows:

Evidence - - - - - - - - - -	Mr. H. H. S. Cunynghame.
Public Health, Companies, Sheriffs, and Poor Law.	Mr. G. A. R. FitzGerald.
Municipal Boroughs, and Merchant Shipping -	Mr. C. P. Ilbert.
Coroners, Justices of the Peace, and Sessions -	Mr. C. S. Maine.
Ecclesiastical Commissioners (including Church Building), and Highways.	Mr. T. H. W. Pelham.
Lunacy - - - - - - - -	Mr. J. H. Stronge.
Post Office, and Railways - - - -	Mr. A. C. M. Thompson.

9. Subject to these arrangements, and to the approval from time to time of the Committee, the Editor will select other portions and Draftsmen.

10. The Parts of the Index for Scotland and Ireland and the Colonies, now separated, will be combined with the general Part.

11. The Committee have appointed Mr. W. L. Selfe to be the Editor of the Edition of 1878.

12. Instructions for the guidance of the Editor and of the Draftsmen of the revised portions have been prepared by a member of the Committee (Sir Henry Thring) and have been issued by the Committee, with two Specimens, drawn by Mr. G. A. R. Fitz-Gerald and Mr. C. S. Maine, respectively. A copy of the Instructions, with the Specimens, accompanies this Memorandum.

13. The Committee propose that another Edition of the Chronological Table and Index shall be ready by February 1879; and that during the year 1878 a more extended revision of the kind described shall be made. The Committee trust that subsequent Editions may be published annually.

14. In the Edition of 1879 the Committee hope to be able to introduce improvements in the Chronological Table.

15. The Incorporated Council of Law Reporting having entered into communication with the Committee with a view to an arrangement for the purchase, by the Council, of a large number of copies of the next Edition of the Chronological Table and Index, at a reduced price, an arrangement of this kind has been effected, through Her Majesty's Stationery Office, with the assent of the Lords of the Treasury.

16. In connexion with this arrangement, a suggestion was made respecting the indexing of the Local and Personal Acts. There is an Index to those Acts from 1801 to 1859. This Index was compiled by order of the Select Committee on the Library of the House of Lords. The Statute Law Committee have never dealt with any but the Public General Acts. They think, however, that the continuation of the House of Lords' Index to the Local and Personal Acts would be very useful.

General structure of an index.

THE basis of an index to a book of the ordinary kind is a series of titles or catchwords arranged in alphabetical order and indicative of the main topics treated of in the book.

Definition of parts of index.

Of these titles a certain number, which may be called effective titles, have underwritten a list of referential explanations of the subject-matter comprised under the description of the title, marking the subdivisions of that subject-matter and the pages of the book in which each subdivision is to be found. The subdivisions are, in important cases, grouped under separate headings and sub-headings adapted to classify the generality of the subject-matter described by the titles, and to facilitate the finding the separate references.

Titles which have underwritten references only to effective titles may be called cross titles. Their use is to lead the inquirer to the effective title under which the equired information is to be found, it being impossible to select the effective titles in such a manner as to suit the varying ideas of inquirers as to the catchword which most aptly includes a large group of references.

Taking the accompanying specimen Index, "Public Health," as an example; "Public Health," is the effective title; "Health, Public," "Local Board," "Local Government," and so forth, are the cross titles; "Sanitary Powers and Duties," and so forth, are headings; "sewage, &c." "water," and so forth, are sub-headings; while the explanations under the sub-headings are the references.

General objects of an index.

The object of an index is to indicate the place in a book or collection of books in which particular information is to be found. Such an index is perfect in proportion as it is concise in expression, whilst exhaustive in its indication of every important topic of the subject to which it is an index.

Special characteristics of an index to the Statute Law.

Applying the foregoing nomenclature and the foregoing principles to an index to the Statute Law, it will be obvious that such an index differs in some important particulars from an index to an ordinary book.

First, it is not an index to a book, but an index to a collection of books.

Secondly, the volumes of the Statute Law do not form separate books to be indexed, but contain, as it were, a number of books or statutes which require in a greater or less degree to be separately indexed. The effective titles then of an index to the Statute Law may be considered each as a separate index to a separate book, the subject-matter of the book being the statute or series of statutes containing the enactments relating to the subject-matter covered by the effective title.

Thirdly, the indexing under an effective title the subject matter of a variety of statutes involves two processes:—

(1.) The arrangement of the subject matter, and, consequently, the determination of the meaning of the statutes to be indexed; and

(2.) The finding appropriate referential expressions to the matter so arranged.

Of these processes, the first, the arrangement in effect of the book, is in the case of an ordinary book performed by the author, while in the case of the statute law it must be performed by the index-maker, wherever the subject is complicated. In short, where an effective title deals with law which has not been scientifically consolidated, the index-maker assumes in a great measure the character of a writer, and must investigate the subject with the same care, and distribute the matter under appropriate heads with the same attention, as would be required if he were composing a treatise on the law to which such title relates, or were the draftsman of a bill consolidating that law.

The general scheme of an index to the Statute Book is to group under comparatively few effective titles the whole of the Statute Law, and to refer by cross titles to the subdivisions of that Statute Law as found under the proper effective titles.

Selection of subject-matter to be indexed under separate titles.

The selection and limitation of the particular subject-matter to be indexed under a particular effective title is a matter requiring careful consideration. As a rule, subjects which have usually been grouped together in the same Act or series of Acts should be arranged under the same effective title. For example, the enactments found in the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, and its amending Acts, will be indexed under the head "Merchant Shipping," although those enactments contain provisions which logically would not find a place under that title. For the same cause, provisions falling properly under the heading "Local Government" have been directed to be indexed in the specimen index under "Public Health."

The reason for this arrangement is that practical convenience has been preferred to logical or scientific accuracy, and the fact that certain provisions have for a long time formed part of the same Acts or series of Acts is sufficient evidence, for the present purposes of an index, that such provisions have a practical although they may not have a logical relation to each other.*

On the other hand, the index-maker must not slavishly adhere to the arrangement of any particular Act or series of Acts, but must look on the whole group of enactments bearing on the same subject as constituting a statute, to be indexed under the same title, but not at all of necessity in the order in which the provisions may be found in the statute-book.

* To group the index under proper effective titles would in effect be to distribute the statute law into the complete form of a code. Such a form can only be reached by successive stages of improvement which it must take some years to complete.

The logical imperfections of any practical arrangement of a large subject-matter under an effective title will be remedied by a careful adaptation of cross-titles. For example, under the cross-heading "Local Government" may be found a reference to the provisions on that subject indexed under "Public Health."

Expression of titles.

When the subject-matter of an effective title is determined, the mode of expressing that title is to be considered. The object here is to use the most popular title which will designate the subject-matter referred to. Other things being equal, a title consisting of a noun or beginning with a noun substantive should be preferred.

The cross-titles will refer either to the whole of an effective title or to specified portions of the enactments found under that title. The function of these cross-titles is sometimes, as before observed, to indicate that a certain subject-matter, which would naturally be indexed under the cross-title itself, is indexed under some heading or sub-divisions of a particular effective title. At other times, cross-titles are merely synonyms for effective titles, e.g., "Health," for "Public Health," and so forth. The same subject-matter will sometimes form an effective title of itself, and also a heading or sub-heading under another effective title, e.g., "Highways" will be an effective title of itself, while it will also form a heading or sub-heading under "Public Health."

In such a case, two courses are open. The enactments of the Public Health Act relating to highways may be indexed under "Highways," with a cross-reference under the title "Public Health," or vice versâ. The more logical course certainly is to follow the law rather than the authority that administers the law; in other words, to put the above enactments under "Highways" rather than under "Public Health," and where the same index-maker has both titles under his superintendence he can use his discretion in the matter. It will be found, however, that in the specimen index these provisions, being included in the enactments relating to Local Government, are grouped under "Public Health," and it is intended that there should be a cross-reference to "Public Health" under "Highways." The reason for adopting this mode of grouping is, as has been stated above, first, the desirability of adhering to the practice of Parliament in grouping the subject together in the same Act, and, secondly, the practical difficulty of distributing amongst different index-makers legal subject-matters which the Legislature has placed in the same Act or series of Acts. Similar observations apply to "Lighting Streets," "Public Pleasure Grounds," "Markets," "Slaughter-houses," and other similar enactments of the Public Health Act.

The question arises here as to the repetition of matter under two or more titles, e.g., under "Public Health" there will be found a reference "Definition of nuisances, 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 91." Again, under the title of "Animals," there will be found a reference "Restrictions on keeping so as to be injurious to health, 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, ss. 44, 47, and 91." Now comparing these two references it will be found that the latter is partially included in the former. The repetition is made designedly, because if it were not made it would be necessary to set out a statement under the "Public Health" title, "Definition of Nuisance," that "Nuisance" includes animals improperly kept, and then to place under the title "Animals," a cross-reference to that statement. The reason for not introducing "Animals" under the reference to "Nuisances" is that animals improperly kept are only one of many specified nuisances, all of which it is unnecessary to particularise, and further that there are provisions relating to animals so kept in the Public Health Act which do not fall under the heading Nuisances.

Such cases as the above frequently occur, and must be left to the discretion of the index-maker. Where the law can be more concisely and clearly explained by being partially distributed under two or more titles, such distribution should take place, and vice versâ. The end to be borne in mind is what course will render most aid to an inquirer in search after a particular enactment.

Enumeration of statutes.

The effective title will be followed by a list of the statutes, the enactments of which are indexed under that title. The statutes, as shown in the specimen index, "Coroner," will be accompanied, wherever possible, by a slight indication of the distinctive characteristic of each statute.

The subject-matter of an effective title being thus settled, the next step is to arrange the contents of the several statutes constituting that subject-matter, and the consideration of the best mode of arrangement leads to an inquiry into the structure and component parts of Acts of Parliament.

Reduction of subject-matter into compass of an index.

In a complex subject such as that of Public Health, the enactments admit of successive siftings or classifications, which, if carried into effect with care and patience, reduce the matter to such a form as will greatly facilitate the selection of headings and sub-headings, and the distribution of the groups of references under their respective headings and sub-headings, a distribution on which the excellence of an index greatly depends.*

Elimination of extraneous matter.

The first operation is a very general one. It consists in setting aside by itself all matter extraneous to the main purport of the statute. This matter comprises, as a rule, temporary provisions, repeals, general savings, and particularly local or other exceptional provisions.

To take examples from the Public Health Act. The temporary provisions are in that Act rightly placed in Part X. by themselves. Frequently, however, they will be found unskilfully mixed up with the permanent provisions, and must then be picked out by the index-maker. As a general rule temporary provisions will not require to be indexed at all.

Similarly, repeals and savings appear in a separate part in the Public Health Act, but similar observations to those that have been made with respect to temporary provisions will apply to them also.

Treatment of exceptional provisions.

Local or exceptional provisions raise questions of greater difficulty, and must be left a good deal to the discretion of the index-maker.

In almost every legal subject-matter it will be found that certain provisions occur which do not readily arrange themselves under the general headings. Their exceptional character sometimes consists in their being local, e.g., in "CORONER," "Langbaurgh," is a local provision; in "PUBLIC HEALTH," "Oxford and Cambridge," form exceptional provisions. Sometimes it consists in their applying to special districts, e.g., "Port Sanitary Authority" under "PUBLIC HEALTH," or to a special class, as "Hop-pickers."

At other times, exceptional provisions refer to matters more remotely connected with the rest of the subject than the bulk of the provisions. A fit notice of such provisions is extremely important, inasmuch as from their very nature they form a class of enactments which it is very difficult for the inquirer to find out without a special reference, as he is at a loss where to look for them. If necessary, a general heading, such as "Miscellaneous," may be adopted.

The essential point is that the existence of every enactment which does not naturally group itself under a particular class of references should be specifically noticed.

Rule 1. Division into and arrangement of—(a) enactments declaring law; (b) administrative enactments.

The main body of the enactments will remain to be disposed of. Begin by dividing them into two general classes:—(1) Enactments declaring the law; (2) Enactments providing for the administration of the law. Parts III. and IV. of the Public Health Act are law enactments, while Parts II., V., VI., VII., VIII., IX. are administrative provisions, or enactments auxiliary to administration.

The arrangement of these provisions in the index should so far deviate from that adopted in the Public Health Act, as to provide that the enactments that have been pointed out as laying down the law should precede the whole of the enactments relating to administration.

Part II. relating to districts and authorities, would thus follow Parts III. and IV.†

Rule 2. Division into and arrangement of—(a) ordinary provisions; (b) supplemental provisions.

Two great groups, (1) the law, and (2) the administration of the law, will now have been arrived at. Let us take these groups, and see what further general rules can be applied.

---

* Frequently the subject-matter of a law is simple and not complex. For instance, "Coroner" is an example of a title relating solely to the functions of an administrative officer. The same observations would apply to "Sheriff" as a title. Illustrations of Acts declaring the law alone will at once be found in almost any criminal Act. "Municipal Boroughs" may be considered as falling under neither of the above categories, or may be classed as administrative bodies. In any of the above cases the rules will only be partially applicable, or not be applicable at all. Before, however, dispensing with the rules, the index-maker should be certain that he has under his view the whole subject-matter. Not seldom an Act which appears to be a distinct branch of law forms part only of a general head of law. For example, an Act defining the procedure for assessing or collecting rates is part only of the general law of rating, and should be so treated in the Index.

A little examination will show that the enactments divide themselves into ordinary and supplemental provisions. The ordinary provisions are such enactments as are in all cases required to carry into effect the material objects of the Act. Supplemental provisions are framed with a view to supply vacancies in offices, defects in procedure, or to declare in detail the mode of carrying into effect legislative Acts, the principles of which have been previously laid down.

Referring to the Public Health Act, in the law group the maintenance and making of sewers is an ordinary provision, the alteration and discontinuance of sewers is a supplemental provision. The best examples, however, of ordinary and supplemental provisions usually occur in the administrative group. Taking the Public Health Act, the sections in Part II. constituting districts and authorities are ordinary provisions, the sections in Part VIII. altering the areas of districts and referring to the formation of united districts are supplemental provisions.

A still better example is found in the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. The proceedings in bankruptcy detailed in the first three parts of the Act are ordinary provisions, as they are the enactments laying down the precise manner in which the proceedings in bankruptcy will be carried on if the creditors appoint a trustee and committee of inspection, and if no vacancy occurs either in the office of trustee or committeeman, and generally if every step be taken in due time and in a legal manner, while the provisions in the fourth part of the Act are supplemental provisions, inasmuch as they declare what is to be done in the event of the failure of any link in the regular chain of legal action, or else supply working details which by reason of their raising no question of principle were omitted in the former part of the Act.

The arrangement of the ordinary and supplemental provisions, where it is necessary to index them separately, should be as follows: The ordinary should precede the supplemental, but they should not be arranged in separate parts, as is usually done in Acts of Parliament, for it will be better in an index that the supplemental provisions applicable to a particular matter should immediately follow the ordinary provisions relating to the same matter.

A point has now been arrived at at which a pause may be made for the purpose of observing the effect of the preceding operations. The framework of the title has been settled to a considerable degree, the arrangement being as follows:—

(1.) Law:
(2.) Administration:
(3.) Exceptional provisions:
(4.) Temporary provisions, savings, and repeals.

The index-maker must now turn his attention to selecting the headings and sub-headings, and to grouping the references under those headings and sub-headings.

Looking, with a view to sub-division, at the large group of enactments that, in the Public Health Act, will range themselves under Law and Administration, it will be found that they are capable of division into simple enactments and complex enactments.

Rule 3. Division into and arrangement of (a) simple and (b) complex enactments.

A simple enactment is one in which the principle is contained in one section. A complex enactment consists of two classes of enactments, principal enactments, and subordinate enactments, of which the principal enactments are occupied in enunciating the law, the subordinate enactments in declaring the procedure by which the law is to be carried into effect. For example, in the Public Health Act, ss. 13–26 are simple enactments; ss. 27–34 constitute a complex enactment, of which the power to dispose of the sewage is the principal enactment, the subordinate enactments being those which declare the mode of disposing of the sewage, by distributing it over land, and so forth. In indexing, the subordinate enactments will not usually require to be noticed separately, but, of course, where they are so noticed they will follow the principal enactment.

Observations on headings and sub-headings.

On the question of headings and sub-headings a very wide discretion must be left to the index maker. As a general rule the headings should be but few, and should be very comprehensive, it being borne in mind that nothing is so likely to confuse an inquirer as to find a reference under a heading to which it does not belong, while even if the heading be too comprehensive the only result is that a little more trouble is given the inquirer in finding the reference which he seeks.

The same observations apply to the sub-headings, but with less force. The sub-headings, where used, should indicate the important divisions in the subject-matter of the heading under which they are found.

Observations on references.

The references will in general consist of short notices of the various principal enactments, they will be arranged in the natural order of sequence where such order is apparent, and in other cases according to the order of time or of importance, or in such other method as the index-maker may think most appropriate.

These references will, in a complex subject, be grouped under separate headings and sub-headings, while in a simple subject such a division will frequently be unnecessary.

With respect to the number and particularity of the references no general rule can be laid down. The difficulty in framing references consists in finding generic expressions capable of including a sufficient number of enactments without being too vague. The index-maker must judge for himself how far he must guide the inquirer to a particular enactment by a special reference, having regard to the necessity of keeping his title within moderate compass, and in some degree to the question whether the subject-matter with which he is dealing is or is not of such general interest as to require a greater or less degree of minuteness in indexing.

Summary of rules for construction of index.

A summary of the foregoing rules, with a few additional observations, may be given as follows:

1. Title.
   (a.) An effective title must generally (subject to the rule of preferring the popular title) begin with a noun substantive; cross titles will begin with a noun substantive or not, according to circumstances.
2. Enumeration of Statutes.
   (b.) If the Statutes are numerous they will be arranged in a double column, see "Coroner."
3. Enactments relating to Law.
   (c.) These enactments will be grouped, as a general rule, under headings and sub-headings. Principal enactments only, except in special cases, will be noticed separately, and several principal enactments, whenever the index-maker thinks it advisable, may be collected in one reference.
   Ordinary enactments will precede supplemental enactments.
   References will as between themselves be arranged in the natural order of sequence where such order is apparent, and in other cases according to the order of time or of importance, or in such other method as the index-maker may think most appropriate.
4. Enactments relating to administration of Law.
   (d.) The directions in (c.) apply here also.
   With respect to the interior arrangement, so to speak, of the group, the simpler or lower authority will precede the higher or more complex authority, e.g., in the Public Health Act "sanitary authority" will precede the Local Government Board; in legal proceedings the court of first instance comes before the court of appeal, and so forth.
5. Local, special, or exceptional provisions.
   (e.) The above expression, or some part of it, will usually form a heading in the index of a complex subject-matter. The references will be arranged according to (c.)
6. Temporary provisions; Repeals; Savings.
   (f.) Usually the above-mentioned provisions will not require to be indexed; when they do so require, one or more of the above expressions will form the heading.

With respect to the composition of the index, references should whenever practicable be expressed by substantives or participles used as substantives.

The above rules can only be considered as general instructions, admitting of many exceptions. It must, however, not be forgotten that uniformity in the framework of an index is of great importance, as it enables the inquirer to look at once for the proper heading under which he will probably find the information of which he is in search.

Explanation of "collective title."

There remains to be noticed an entirely distinct class of effective titles, which may be called collective titles. The object of such titles is to enable an inquirer to find under one title a number of independent facts collected from various statutes. For example, "districts" may possibly be selected as a collective title. Under such a title will be ranged "ecclesiastical districts," "highway districts," "sanitary districts," and so forth, with a reference to the Acts establishing such districts. The best arrangement here will be alphabetical, and the preceding rules as to the logical order of the enactments have no place. The object of such lists is to enable persons employed in Government offices, or in other official occupations, to perceive at a glance the statutes under which certain duties arise. The perfection of an index, so far as the collective titles are concerned, consists in the exhaustiveness of the enumeration of the particulars and the accuracy with which such particulars are associated with the enactments relating to them.

Collective titles will only be inserted in pursuance of special instructions.

Course to be pursued by index-maker in preparing index.

A few words as to the mode of proceeding of a draftsman who undertakes to make an index to any legal subject-matter. His first step should be to make a list of all the statutes bearing on the subject; his second to read the statutes through from beginning to end, (striking out the repealed provisions as he proceeds,) and by so doing, with the assistance, where required, of text-books, to acquaint himself thoroughly with the whole of the statute law relating to the title of law on which he is occupied. A complete knowledge of the whole law is required before he begins to make the index, for until he can look down on the entire field of law before him, he cannot possibly judge of the proper arrangement of the headings or of the relative importance of the various provisions.

When he has thus mastered the subject he will construct his framework by selecting a title, and grouping under it the various headings. He will then proceed to work on the detailed references.

Having thus completed the work on his own plan he will look through the general indices to the statutes to be found in the various editions and abridgements, and in the Index prepared under the direction of the House of Lords, with the view of ascertaining that he has omitted no particulars which ought to be introduced, but he will avoid consulting existing indices before beginning his work, except for the purpose of collecting his materials, as such indices are more likely to mislead than to assist in his arrangement of the subject-matter.

If he wish to look for precedents of arrangement, a good text book will generally supply the best material for reflection, but he must always bear in mind his obligation to conform to the rules above laid down for his guidance, so far as such rules are applicable, as the securing uniformity in the general arrangement of the headings by obedience to rules is of far more importance than the securing even a better arrangement of particular headings by disobedience to rules.

Difficulty and importance of an index to statute law.

In conclusion, let no man imagine that the construction of an index to the Statute Law is a mere piece of mechanical drudgery, unworthy of the energy and ability of an accomplished lawyer. Next to codification, the most difficult task that can be accomplished is to prepare a detailed plan for a code, as distinct from the easy task of devising a theoretical system of codification. Now the preparation of an index, such as has been suggested in the above instructions, is the preparation of a detailed plan for a code. Each effective title is, in effect, a plan for the codification of the legal subject-matter grouped under that title, and the whole index, if completed, would be a summary of a code arranged in alphabetical order.

An Appendix is subjoined of rules which it has been thought better to group together in an Appendix, instead of embodying them in the Instructions.

The Instructions are accompanied by two Specimen indices, prepared under the direction of the Statute Law Committee, the one "Public Health," by Mr. G. A. R. FitzGerald; the other "Coroner," by Mr. C. S. Maine. These Specimens are not to be followed servilely, but are merely sent as illustrations of the Instructions.

Appendix.

1. The present Parts for Scotland and Ireland and Colonies are to be combined with the general Part.

2. Where the subject comprises a separate series of enactments for S. or I. only, the entries are to be subjoined separately to the general entries or main part.

3. Entries, when extending to E. and S. and I., are not to be marked U. K. (as they are in the House of Lords Index), but to be left without any distinguishing mark.

4. Entries in the main part are to be marked according to the fact, thus—

E.
E. S.
E. I.

but E. is not to be put on Acts passed before the Union of E. and S.

5. Where a series of enactments (as those relating to Reformatory and Industrial Schools) extend some to E. only, some to S. or I. only, some to E. and S. or I., the index-maker is to determine, according to circumstances, whether the entries of those extending to S. or I. only are to be in the subjoined part for S. or I. only, or are to be in the main part.

6. The best way of dealing with such cases as Cinque Ports, Langbaurgh, and so forth, under CORONER, is to make a separate sub-head, LOCAL and SPECIAL (see CORONER), and group there all exceptional cases, with short explanatory entries.

7. What is wanted is not an index of words, but an index of things; and, therefore, there is no need to give a reference to every enactment in which a particular officer (Sheriff, for instance) may happen to be mentioned, unless some function requiring to be indexed is attached to him.

8. When the same enactment occurs in several statutes they should all be mentioned, and not only the most recent.

9. When the information is contained in the Schedule to an Act, the reference should be to the Schedule, and also to the section which gives effect to the Schedule.

10. A title must not, as a general rule, exceed three pages.

11. A cross-title, unless it refers to the whole of the effective title, must specify the heading or sub-heading of the effective title to which the reference is made.

12. As a general rule references to enactments should not be repeated in the Index, but cross-references to them should be inserted. An exception, however, must be made where an enactment has a double action, thus, a transfer of authority from one Government department to another will require to be noticed under a title relating to each of the Departments.

A more frequent cause of exception is where with a view to conciseness or otherwise in a particular effective title a heading of importance is not mentioned. See above (page 9), the example "Animals" cited in respect of the Public Health Act.

13. Care must be taken not to group under one title legislative operations which are in fact from their very nature distributable under several titles. For example, the Act abolishing the oaths of various functionaries is in some indices grouped under the title "Abolition of oaths," whereas its operation ought to have been specified under the titles relating to the various officers with respect to whom the oaths are abolished, and it ought not to have formed a separate heading at all.

14. Notice of partial repeals, where important, should be taken in the index by entering a reference to the repealing Act without further comment. This rule does not extend to entering repeals made by the Statute Law Revision Acts.

15. Wherever practicable, the operation of successive Acts in relation to the same subject-matter should be stated, for example, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 37. extends the Juvenile Offenders Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 82.) to offenders of 16 years of age; such an extension should be set out in the index.

16. Wherever practicable, the particular sections of an Act, the effect of which is stated in the reference, should be set out, instead of a reference being made to the whole Act.

17. A cross-reference should be intelligible by itself. For example, in "Coroner" the cross-reference "Burial" has "Coroner's order for" succeeding it; see also, "Durham, Coroners of." On the other hand, in a case like "Inquest," no explanation is necessary. An index-maker must carefully attend to this rule, taking care on the one hand to insert the additions where necessary, and not to insert them where unnecessary.

18. In printing the Index the Statute referred to will always be repeated. The Statutes must be printed one beneath the other, and must not be interfered with by having the explanatory matter interlined. When the explanatory matter would extend far enough to interfere with the column of Statutes it must be bracketed; for example, the form B. is to be adopted, not the form A.

COPIES "of a MINUTE by the Lord Chancellor of Ireland upon the Case of Mr. Anketell, J.P., D.L.:"

"And, of NOTES of an INQUIRY held upon the Subject at Emyvale, by Dr. Battersby, Q.C., on the 24th and 25th days of April 1877."

COPY of a MINUTE by the Lord Chancellor of Ireland upon the Case of Mr. Anketell, J.P., D.L.

THE complaint against Mr. Anketell is for the destruction of two dogs upon the night of the 31st of August last, in the village of Emyvale.

The transaction was the subject of a civil proceeding, finally heard and adjudicated upon before Mr. Justice Barry, at the last assizes for the county of Monaghan.

It is not the practice to take a note of the evidence on Civil Bill Appeals, nor (as the learned judge with whom I conferred respecting the case, informed me) was Mr. Anketell examined. An inquiry has therefore been held, where the evidence for and in answer to the complaint has been taken; and from the peculiar nature of the case, I think it advisable to state the conclusions at which I have arrived, after an examination of that evidence.

I. The act cannot be legally defended upon the ground that it was done for the protection of property—a defence in some instances extended to the owners of animals worried by dogs—for the destruction was effected, not at the time the horse was attacked, but subsequently, after the requisite delay in extricating it from the vehicle, and the return of Mr. Anketell to the place where the dogs had originally been.

Neither is any legal defence available, founded upon the dogs being improperly at large in the street, for the remedies, in respect of a matter of that kind, are by law given not to individuals, but to justices in petty sessions, who have conferred upon them by statute certain powers of ordering dogs to be kept under control or destroyed, and of also ordering their destruction, if without the prescribed muzzle or log of wood.

The destruction of the dogs must, therefore, be viewed as without any legal justification.

II. The character and quality of an illegal act of this kind is, however, affected to a considerable degree by the motives from which it arises, previous provocation, or other circumstances, tending to render it more or less blameable. I see no trace that the conduct of Mr. Anketell was prompted by malice or ill will, or in gratification of hostile or angry feelings towards the owners of the dogs. It had, so far as I can judge, its origin in resentment for annoyance and injury caused by the dogs themselves, arising immediately upon the annoyance and injury, and directed solely against the animals, which had caused the annoyance and injury. They had by their attack frightened the horse, which Mr. Anketell was driving, and caused it to entangle itself in the carriage. Mr. Anketell and his servant were thrown out. To release the horse the carriage had to be broken; the horse itself was injured. One of the dogs had on a previous occasion also alarmed the same horse, and the result had been the illness of Mrs. Anketell.

III. Whatever, however, may have been the provocation, Mr. Anketell's conduct must be condemned. Whether it be for the injury to his horses, or future protection against the recurrence of the mischief, the law gave him redress. Instead of availing himself of the remedies it afforded, he determined himself to destroy the dogs, and, in the mode he adopted, appears to have lost all self-control; for, unless angry feelings had wholly overmastered reflection, I cannot conceive that either he, or anyone else, would have adopted the means for their destruction which he did.

IV. In the views I have expressed, under the heads I., II., III., I feel the more confidence, because they are in concurrence with those formed by the learned judge who tried the civil action at the assizes, and were all—and not merely the value of the dog—taken into account by him when making his decree.

V. Censuring, therefore, severely Mr. Anketell's conduct, I yet refrain from dismissing him from the magistracy. Different considerations apply, when the question is withholding the appointment, and when it is depriving after it has been conferred. The illegal act arose from much provocation. It did not occur in the discharge of, or in connection with, his duties as a magistrate. Concerning the discharge of those duties, no complaint has ever reached me. He has, in a published letter, acknowledged the wrong and expressed his regret. I would hope he will use the opportunity afforded him to justify, by future prudence and caution, his continuance in office.

IN RE ANKETELL.

NOTES of Inquiry at Emyvale, 24 and 25 April 1877.

Armstrong, Rachel.—My house is the first in the village of Emyvale at the Aughnaclog end to the left hand as you enter. On the night of the 31st August 1876, I was awoke by the barking of dogs and people talking at the back of my house. My son John was in bed. I ordered him to rise. I did not see the people. I saw my dog dead a few days after. I had put the dog out of the house into the street before I went to bed. The dog had a log on when I turned him out. On the 21st September Mr. Johnson, the head constable, had a summons against Mr. Anketell for killing my dog; Mr. Scott, J.P., was there; Mr. Anketell was also there. I was not examined by Johnson. My son gave evidence. I was there again in October. The same justices were there, and also Mr. White, R M. Mr. Given, Mr. Anketell's attorney, asked for an adjournment. Mr. Moore, my attorney, would not allow it at first, he afterwards withdrew the cases until the civil actions should have been tried at Monaghan. Mr. Anketell sued for 40 l. damages for injuring his carriage and horse. I sued for 20 l. for killing my dog. The action was tried at Monaghan before Mr. Baron. Mr. Anketell was examined, but not Constable Johnson; I got a decree for 10 l. Mr. Anketell appealed to the Assizes; I and my son and Constable Johnson, but not Mr. Anketell, were examined there. Johnson was the only witness there for Mr. Anketell. The judge reduced the decree to 5 l., and this was paid. The dog was a sheep dog. I have no sheep nor any land except scarcely an acre. Mr. Anketell never complained to me of my dog. I instructed Cecil Moore, my attorney.

Cross-examined.] Mr. Wright offered me compensation after the dismissal of the first summons. I paid 2 l. for all the law, I can't tell to whom. I put out the dog into the street at night as usual. I heard evident barking; all the dogs bark. I know Mullen; he complained to my boy of my dog, but not of the same dog; that dog that was killed; he told him he must shoot the dog; the colour of the one killed was black with white on his breast; he was registered, and had a log on that day. I saw the log on the nail of the barn on the 1st September. It was on him when I turned him into the street the night before. Mr. Kelly got 1 l. compensation. C. Moore, my attorney, put the Humane Society in motion to prosecute Mr. Anketell; Mr. Wight sent Mr. Woods, Mr. Anketell's agent, to make me offers. When I told Mr. Moore he did not tell me to go on with the law. Mr. Irvine asks, why did you refuse the offers? No answer.

A letter from Mr. Cecil Moore, Mrs. Armstrong's attorney, to Captain Ellis, a friend of Mr. Anketell's, is here read by consent, viz.:—"Omagh, 10 September 1876.—My dear Ellis, you have taken such an interest in this horrible case of Anketell's, I do not hesitate to tell you all the facts, as on his father's account I don't want to bring unnecessary disgrace upon him, but he must pay handsomely for such an outrage. You say you wonder wonder who has put the Humane Society in motion. I reply, it is done under my advice, so that we may be fully prepared with the evidence on the trial of the record in Dublin in November. The summons and plaint are ordered in both cases by my son, and I fancy a Dublin jury will give sweeping damages in a case of the kind. You say you would wish the case hushed up; if so, let Mr. Anketell send you down 50 l., and on receipt of it I shall do all I can to withdraw all actions, and shall try and get the society to forego further proceedings, on the grounds of Mr. Anketell having compensated the parties fully; and if they do not withdraw, I will, or my son will, attend the Bench, and state Mr. A. has already fully compensated and made amends, and thus get a nominal fine. If Mr. Anketell does not at once adopt this course he need not expect any favour from the hands of, yours faithfully,—Cecil Moore. N.B. This letter is not to be made use of, if my proposal is not accepted. I consider each party would get 100 l. damages on a trial."

Armstrong, William John.—I am son of Rachel, and 20 years of age; I live with her. In the night of the 31st August I was in the house. I heard a noise, and went to the door; the dog was barking behind the house; there is an open from back to front of house. I saw Serjeant Johnson; some one said, "Sir, he's gone to the field to catch him for you." I was not dressed; I saw no one then; I dressed and came out again; between first and last, I said, "Sir, what are you doing here?" He said, "Mr. Anketell wants to see your dog." I went to the back of the house. I saw Mr. Anketell and his coachman, Mackett, at the rear, in front of the cowhouse door. Mr. Anketell asked, "Is this your dog?" He was outside the door. I said, "Yes, sir." He told me to catch him. Mackett prevented him from running out, and he ran in again. Mr. Anketell told me to catch him. I did catch him by the ear; he took the dog out of my hand by the back of the neck, and carried him to the front of the street, and said, "I'm damned if I let any dog in the county conquer me." I followed him; Johnson followed round, and also Mackett. Mr. Anketell went to the opposite side of the street, holding the dog in his left hand, and struck him with his right hand. I saw nothing in his hand. He threw the dog down, and it ran to the door with the blood running from his throat. He tried to get in, and stood at the door. I took him from the door; he fell, and died in about 20 minutes. Johnson and Mackett were present when he was stabbed. I turned down the street. McNally, the owner of the other dog, lived at McMahon's, the car-driver. I was at the petty sessions on 21st September and 19th October, and at the quarter sessions, and at the assizes. I never knew our dog do any harm to any one. He had a log on when stabbed, and after it he was in the cowhouse when I first saw him. It was a dark night.

Cross-examined.] I swore at quarter sessions that I could see across the street; it was about 2 o'clock in the morning, middling dark; the street is not broad; the men could see the dog running alongside the carriage; it was running along with it. I got a summons in my own name for the killing of McNally's dog. I did not ask it; a few days before the petty sessions I heard of it, the clerk gave it to me to be served; no one authorised me to get it.

Johnson, William, late Head Constable.—On the 31st August I was sick in bed at the barrack, and about to leave the force. About 1.30 o'clock I was awoke by a noise in the street. I heard the vehicle pass. I ordered the men to go out to assist, and I went myself; four men went. I saw Mr. Anketell break the carriage to extricate the horse. He struck it with a sledge-hammer. It was about a quarter of an hour from the time I first heard it until I went down. The carriage was lying on its left side, and the police and people under the horse, keeping it up to prevent its breaking its legs in the fore part of the carriage. The horse was "limping" when taken out of the carriage. I do not know what was done with him. I am aware he was injured. I went with Mr. Anketell and several of the police, Walker, Tobin, and Platt. I know McNally; I saw Mr. Anketell holding his dog below the barrack, he took it in his hand. I cannot say if Mackett was present when he took him up, but he was when he threw him down. He asked Mackett for a penknife. I did not see the knife in Mr. Anketell's hand. When the horse was extricated Mr. Anketell asked me to see for the owners of the dogs. I told him one was McNally's; he said he did not care. James Kane, Mr. Anketell, and Mackett walked with me towards Mrs. Armstrong's. There were other dogs barking in the street. I did not see young Armstrong then. I did not say, as young Armstrong said, "He is down in the field looking for him for you." I saw young Armstrong at the the door of the yard. I said to him, "They have traced the dog to your place." About half an hour elapsed from the time the carriage was broken until I arrived at Mrs. Armstrong's house. I saw the dog in Mackett's hand. Mr. Anketell went across the street with the dog in his hand. I went to get the owners of the dogs, not to kill the dogs. I spoke to McNally before and after the killing of his dog. I issued a summons against Mr. Anketell for killing the dogs; no one desired me to do so. I gave evidence against him. On the 11th December the Humane Society refused to assist in the prosecution.

Cross-examined.] On the 31st August I was about to leave the force from ill-health. I had no interest in this matter. I was summoned as a witness by both parties and paid by neither. When I went out the horse was lying on one side, over the men who were keeping him up, and Mr. Anketell working at the risk of his life. When the horse was extricated, Mr. Anketell said he was going to look after the dogs. Young Armstrong did not say to me, "He is going to look for him for you." He did not then deny that his mother's dog did the mischief. I had heard people complain of that dog before. Mr. Anketell told me that the dog had gone to Mrs. Armstrong's, and I went with him to find it. On the 21st September, at Petty Sessions, McNally, young Armstrong, Daly, Mackett, Pratt, Tobin, Peter McTregan, McMullen, and Moore were examined. I called every witness Moore suggested. Mr. Given, Mr. Anketell's attorney, also suggested witnesses, and I called them, and the cases were dismissed. The statement that I instituted the proceedings to protect Mr. Anketell is false; I did so only in discharge of my duty. The dogs were barking the barrack side of Mrs. Armstrong's when I went up, and her dog ran away. I heard that Mrs. Anketell's carriage had been attacked by the same dogs on a former occasion, and that she fainted. Mrs. Armstrong's dog was a mongrel, between a sheep-dog and a common cur. The people of the town complained of Mrs. Armstrong's dog going into their houses and snapping up whatever it could get.

Scott, Wm., Esq., J.P., M.D.—I am one of the bench of magistrates here. I signed the summonses in the two cases against Mr. Anketell on the 21st September. I was on the bench. There was a summons then by Constable Johnson for cruelty to animals, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 2. It was very fully gone into. There were eleven witnesses examined, and we heard every one most anxiously. Mr. Anketell left the bench, and never then, nor at any other time, took any part in the proceedings against him. The cases were dismissed. Constable Johnson conducted the prosecution wonderfully well, and showed no feeling. I thought him rather hostile to Mr. Anketell. Mr. Cecil Moore was examined, and invited to suggest other witnesses, and got every facility for doing so. He was attorney for Mrs. Armstrong, and his case was dismissed after having received our best attention. I thought the statute not borne out by the evidence. None of us were actuated by fear, favour, or affection. About seven weeks after there were three summonses for malicious injuries to property—one by Mrs. Armstrong (Charles Moore's son got it); another by young Armstrong, in the name of McNally (Moore brought it, not young Armstrong). I signed eight summonses. The hearing was adjourned, at the desire of Mr. Anketell's attorney, until the civil actions brought in Oyer and Terminer should be tried at Quarter Sessions. I opposed the adjournment at first; but it is the invariable course, where there is a criminal prosecution and also a civil action between the same parties, to postpone the former until the result of the latter is known. Mr. Moore thought it for his advantage, and acceded. Mr. White, R.M., Captain St. George, and myself (the presiding magistrates), had no feeling but a wish to do our duty. McNally's summons was withdrawn with consent of Moore. A stab in the jugular vein is the quickest and least painful mode of killing a small animal.

Anketell, William, Esq., J.P.—On the night of the 31st August last, about one o'clock, I was driving from Aughnaclog through Emyvale. I know Mrs. Armstrong's house perfectly well; it is the first house to the left as you enter the village. A dog perfectly well known to me rushed out of the entry of her back-yard. My groom was driving quietly. It ran at the forelegs of my horse, barking furiously. Several times within the last eight months it ran at me from the same premises, barking. It had neither log nor muzzle on it. The mare galloped on about 50 yards, and ran away. I was at the same time attacked by another dog when she ran away, supposed to be McNally's dog, one of those that were in the habit of barking at me. The mare kicked in her gallop, and her hind-legs got entangled when I was going down the slope of the hill, near the barracks, opposite this court-house. The first thing I knew was the groom said, "Her legs are in the irons." We were both thrown out. It was a small new pony-carriage. The hind legs were in the circular iron of the front carriage and the axle. She was leaning to the left side, on the shaft, supported by her forelegs. Five policemen and several strangers came to assist. The first thing to be done was to prop her up on the left side in order to prevent her falling. She could not turn on her hind-quarter without breaking her legs. I got a hatchet and cut away the wood, and bent the irons, and got the legs out. They were very much lacerated. All the woodwork of the front carriage was broken and the irons bent. The dogs were under the forelegs of the mare attempting to bite. They pursued in full cry, barking. The place of the breakdown was a couple of hundred yards from Mrs. Armstrong's. I had previously complained several times to Mrs. Armstrong of her dogs attacking me. We were nearly an hour trying to extricate the mare. All that time we were using our necessary endeavours to extricate her, and when she was extricated I went instantly in the direction of Mrs. Armstrong's to find the dogs. I told Constable Johnson two dogs had attacked me. I passed the barracks, and found McNally's dog, a sandy terrier, still barking in the street. I caught him, and I am sure he was the second dog that attacked me. I went at once, on raising the mare, in pursuit of the dogs. I killed McNally's dog by stabbing it in the throat. It is totally untrue that I cut it from ear to ear; it was but one stab, and there was no torture. I then went in pursuit of Mrs. Armstrong's dog in the direction of her house, and still heard him barking. I lost sight of him, but when I got to the house I saw him run into a field by the end of the house. I followed

I followed him. I had met the other dog in the street. I drove him back to Mrs. Armstrong's house. I went into her back yard to a cowhouse, and at the same time her son come round; the dog was still barking in the cowhouse. He brought the dog out of the cowhouse. I was then in the road in front of the house, and he left it down on the road. I lifted it up and killed it exactly as the other dog, instantly with one stab. I hired a car and drove home. The repairs of the carriage cost 3 l. 2 s. The mare was worth 35 l. She could not leave the stable for a fortnight after. She had been perfectly quiet in harness, but has not been so since. I sent my agents, Mr. Wood and Mr. Wright, to offer to compensate Mrs. Armstrong and McNally four or five days after the occurrence. McNally accepted it, Mrs. Armstrong refused, without first consulting Cecil Moore, her attorney.

I had previously received a letter from C. Moore through Captain Ellis, inviting me to settle, and demanding 50 l. if hushed up. A copy of it was read yesterday by consent. Captain Ellis did not mark the letter private; he gave me leave to make what use I pleased of it. I thought the demand unreasonable, and did not write to Moore.

On the 21st September Constable Johnson had a summons, dated 11th September, entered against me at petty sessions for cruelly killing two dogs. It was dismissed. There was a second summons at suit of the secretaries of the Humane Society for ill-treating, abusing, or torturing a dog of McNally's, and thereby causing death. Dismissed with 1 l. costs. A like summons for Mrs. Armstrong's dog; dismissed with 1 l. costs. On the 19th October there was another summons at suit of Mrs. Armstrong for unlawfully and maliciously killing her dog. This case was at first adjourned by the Court in order that cross civil actions between the parties for quarter sessions might be first tried. Mr. Moore subsequently withdrew the case. On same day a like summons, obtained by Mr. Moore in the name of W. J. Armstrong, for the killing of McNally's dog, was withdrawn by Mr. Moore. The civil process issued on the 11th October, Mrs. Armstrong claiming 20 l. for the loss of her dog, and I claiming 40 l. for injury to my carriage and horse, both to be heard on 23rd October. I appealed from the decree of quarter sessions. But I was foreman of the grand jury at the assizes and could not attend the hearing of the appeal. I was not on the bench at any time when my cases were before the petty sessions, nor did I in any way act as a magistrate about them. About a month before the attack on me Mrs. Armstrong's dog attacked my wife's carriage. She was near her confinement and fainted, and I had to send for the doctor next day.

Cross-examined.] I offered compensation because I thought I had done wrong. I attended the lecture at Aughnaclog at half-past ten. I left it after twelve o'clock. I drank two glasses of champagne only. I arrived here about one o'clock. Only two dogs attacked me. I was examined at Quarter Sessions at Monaghan. I saw other dogs—one yellow, one black, two brown. I saw them when going out of the town. The half-black dog attacked me, two others were further down the town. I did say a sandy dog of McAnerny's attacked me. Only two attacked me, the others I saw afterwards; one near McNally's and one near the bridge. I saw the white feet of the dog that attacked me, and a white spot on his breast. I said the first dog was black, with a white rim partly round his neck and a little white on his chest. I went into Mrs. Armstrong's house through the front door. I was twice in the yard. The dog ran across the field. The yard is not inclosed, but there is a small stone fence to it that I could put my leg over. Mackett saw the dog leave the yard. The same dog that attacked me barked in the cowhouse. The police were then coming up. He was in the yard when I first came up. I told young Armstrong his dog, or his mother's dog, attacked me. I had remonstrated with her before. I did not then know her name, but I now do. I was in a state of the greatest possible irritation. I did not kill the dogs for their previous misconduct. I had previously remonstrated with Mrs. Armstrong, and frequently with McNally also. I did not try to choke his dog. I asked Mackett for his penknife. The constable said the dog was McNally's. It ran from the back of McMahon's (the carman's) house, where he lived, to the street. There was another sandy dog, belonging to Woods (my agent). McNally's was bigger far than his. I only saw Mrs. Armstrong's dog in the cowhouse once, when her son brought it out. I remonstrated with Mrs. Armstrong to herself and others several times. I felt the greatest terror in passing her house. I did not know her before. Her dog had the fashion of lying before her door on his fore paws, and making a rush at passers-by. My civil bill process was dismissed, I did not appeal. The Humane Society paid the costs of their dismisses. I am four years in the commission of the peace, my age is twenty-six years. The circular for the meeting to express confidence in me was signed by Patterson (my land steward). There were several influential men at the meeting. When the horse was extricated I started immediately with the intention of killing the dogs. I knew the two dogs, and I intended to kill them, and I went with that purpose, but I did not tell the constables so. I did not tell the constable that I knew the names of the owners. The fence behind Mrs. Armstrong's house is composed of loose stones.

MATCHETT, RICHARD.—On the night of the 31st August I was driving my master's phæton; when passing Mrs. Armstrong's house a dog rushed out of the entry to the fore legs of the horse, barking and snapping at them; the pony started into a gallop; another dog ran out before we came to the barrack, I can't say from where; he barked with the other; the mare ran away, we were both thrown out. The horse's hind legs got into the irons round the circle of the lock; one right down between the irons of the lock, and the other right across the irons. We did our best to extricate them, but we could not. The horse was leaning against the left shaft. I loosed the buckle of the trace. Five or six policemen came at the right side and lifted the mare; her hocks were all cut, and are still blemished. It was difficult to take her in or out. I put her up, and then followed my master. I was with him at Mrs. Armstrong's; I went into her premises. The dog was barking as we went up in the yard nearest to the rear, and the dog ran away barking over a stone wall of loose stones, which you could step over. I did not see my master take up the dog. After the dog came back into the premises young Armstrong brought him out. I gave my master a penknife. He was at one side of the street, and I at the other. I did not see him kill the dog. I was standing at the entry when he came out, and I walked across the street. I led the pony home; she could hardly walk. I sat up all night steeping her with hot water. About a month before I was driving Mrs. Anketell the dog ran out barking at the pony, as on the 31st August. I jumped off and caught the pony by the head; she did not faint outright, but she became very weak, and I had to get her a glass of water. On several occasions previously the dog ran out barking; he used to make a dash quite sudden. I saw only two dogs on the night of the injury.

Cross-examined.] It is about three yards from Mrs. Armstrong's door to the road. I knew both the dogs that were killed as soon as they came out. I saw a white spot on Mrs. Armstrong's dog's foot. Mr. Anketell had the first dog in his hand, and asked if I had a knife. I gave him one. He threw the dog down, and we went in search of Armstrong's dog.

Mullen, Thomas.—I am a car owner, and I am in the habit of driving from Aughnaclog to Emly until August twelvemonths. Mrs. Armstrong's dog used to run out barking and frighten my horse. He did so several times. He squatted on his belly and spring at my horse's nose. One occasion he rushed at my horse, and the horse rushed into the ditch; and if it had been a perch or two further back on the road, the horse and car would have fallen into a precipice. The next night I told Mrs. Armstrong if she did not put away the dog I must shoot him.

Cross-examined.] It is a year and a half since I saw the dog. I do not know whether it is the same Mr. Anketell killed.

Stephens, Robert.—I knew Mrs. Armstrong's dog that Mr. Anketell killed; it frequently ran out barking at the passengers; then the others would join as they went on until they would be all like a pack of hounds hunting. They robbed the whole town. On the night of the 31st August, between nine and ten o'clock Mrs. Armstrong's dog was making towards my stirabout pot, but I put him out on the road; sometimes he had a log on him and sometimes not.

Givan, John.—I acted as attorney of Mr. Anketell all through these proceedings. At the first sessions on the 21st September Cecil Moore appeared for the Humane Society and Mrs. Armstrong, and he asked to have the case of the Humane Society taken first, though not first in the list. I asked to have the cases taken in their order. The justices took Constable Johnson's case first. I repeatedly stated that there should be no suppression of facts, and that every facility should be given Mr. Moore to investigate them, and I invited him to suggest all the witnesses he wished, and that I should procure them as far as I could; he did suggest several, and they were examined, including Mackett, and the Armstrongs, and Johnson. I argued that there was not any evidence of cruelty within the statute 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 2, and the case was dismissed, after an exhaustive hearing. Mr. Moore being about to leave I invited him to wait and hear the other cases; he left; I asked for costs, and got 1 l. in each case. I advised Mr. Anketell to bring civil actions in order that he might himself be examined, which he could not be in the criminal prosecutions, and cross actions were brought in the Civil Bill Court, and Mr. Moore withdrew the criminal cases. A jury was sworn in Anketell's case. Moore asked him if he killed the dogs. I prevented him answering, because it would criminate himself. The chairman then said if he did not answer he would disregard all the evidence offered by him. But he did not say, "I will tell the jury not to believe one word you have said," and the chairman afterwards disclaimed having used any such words. There was a verdict then for 10 l., which Judge Barry afterwards on appeal reduced to 5 l., in the absence of Mr. Anketell and his witnesses, he being acting as foreman of the grand jury, and unable to attend.

Mr. Hans McMordie, gentleman, attorney, conducted Mrs. Armstrong's case.

J. Irvine, Esq., barrister, instructed by Mr. W. Givan, conducted Mr. Anketell's case.

COPY of a MEMORIAL presented to His Grace the late Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, in the Year 1876, by or on behalf of the LANDS of Barnahown, in the County of Tipperary, praying to be relieved from the ASSESSMENT imposed upon them for the Cost of an extra POLICE FORCE, together with the Signatures to such Memorial.

To His Excellency the Duke of Abercorn, Lord Lieutenant General and General Governor of that Part of Great Britain and Ireland called Ireland.

Prevention of Crime and Outrage Act.

MEMORIAL on behalf of the Tenantry of Barnahown, near the Police Station of Araglin, on the Boundaries of the Counties of Cork and Waterford,

Humbly sheweth, as follows:

THAT we are tenants on the estate of Nathaniel Buckley, Esq., who became our landlord by purchase in 1873, and are now placed under a Government tax for expenses of constabulary, sent to protect Mr. Bridge, the agent of our said landlord.

That said Mr. Bridge is also agent of other lands.

That out of 19 tenantry in said district of Barnahown, all but nine are recipients of poor law relief in the union of Clogheen, in the county of Tipperary, and consequently unable to pay this police tax.

That a more distressed or poverty-stricken people do not exist amongst Her Majesty's subjects than we now are.

That our holdings are wretched boggy mountainous and waste lands in the wild glens of Araglin.

That up to the year 1874 we were happy and prosperous tenants, when our rents were greatly increased, and in some instances trebled.

That

That we quietly submitted to this, and accepted a lease for 31 years, in which every right, claim, privilege or demand for compensation are strictly reserved from us.

That we are still quiet, peaceable, loyal, and submissive to the laws of the land.

That we have never, nor has any of us practised or suffered any intimidation or threat, or otherwise acted disrespectfully towards our said landlord or his agent.

That, unfortunately, about the month of April last our said agent was shot at, near his residence in the county of Limerick, as our agent himself alleged and confirmed, not in our district, but over 15 miles away in another part of the country.

That Memorialists had no knowledge of, or connection or sympathy with, the criminal in any sense, nor was he harboured nor housed nor concealed by us in any way whatsoever.

That said outrage not having been committed in our poor district or county, and the perpetrator thereof not being of our locality or county, we humbly crave your Excellency's gracious remission of said pecuniary punishment, by relief from payments of said constabulary charges and taxation.

That otherwise 19 poor families, 10 of whom have already got tickets for poor law relief as aforesaid, will be wholly destitute and pauperised by a continuance of said taxation and charges.

Finally, we humbly crave your Excellency's consideration to the foregoing case, and our signatures and those of others attached, and beg immediate relief, and Memorialists will ever pray.

* Seven Judges of the Court of Session hold separate commissions as Lords Commissioners of Justiciary or Supreme Criminal Tribunal of Scotland. The jurisdiction of this Court, which extends over the whole of Scotland in criminal matters, including suspensions of judgments of inferior courts, extends also on circuit to appeals in civil cases involving small pecuniary amounts, but frequently having reference to important questions of right.

The Lord President of the Court of Session and the President of the Second Division, as Lord Justice General and Lord Justice Clerk respectively, are the two Chief Judges of the Court of Justiciary; and, of the other Judges, whose names are given above, Lords Deas and Mure in the Inner, and Lords Young, Craighill, and Adam in the Outer House, are Judges of the Court of Justiciary.

The Bill Chamber business of the Court of Session is, during vacation and recess, performed by those Judges who are not also Judges of Justiciary, each Judge being engaged for a fortnight on this duty in rotation during vacation.

Although a sum in lieu of expenses on circuit is allowed, no separate salary is attached to any judgeship of the Court of Justiciary. The amounts stated above, therefore, represent the judicial salaries of the Supreme Civil and Criminal Courts of Scotland.

LETTER from the Treasury to the Chief Secretary for Ireland.

Sir, Treasury Chambers, 7 May 1875.

I AM directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to request that you will draw the attention of his Grace the Lord Lieutenant to the vacancy in the office of Clerk of the Writs, caused by the death of Mr. McDougall.

Pending the inquiries which have been begun into the Administrative Departments of the courts of law and equity in the United Kingdom, but which have not yet been extended to Ireland, their Lordships desire to suggest that so far as is possible, it is very desirable not to fill up any situation which may fall vacant or to create new interests.

Their Lordships would be glad to hear what course his Grace proposes to pursue with regard to this vacancy, the appointment to which appears to be vested in the Lord Lieutenant.

Their Lordships feel assured that they may rely upon his Grace to protect the public interest by keeping open the means of reduction of superfluous offices in every way that the law and the state of public business permits. Should it be considered absolutely necessary to fill up the appointment, my Lords would refer to Sir T. Larcom's letter of 28th March 1854, which sets forth the terms on which the appointment of Mr. McDougall was then made, and they would suggest that a similar understanding might be required from any person now appointed successor to that gentleman, and that he should understand that he has no claim to compensation in the event of the abolition of the office. My Lords also question whether, on a fresh appointment, it is necessary to retain the salary at so high an amount as 800 l.

I am, &c.

The Chief Secretary for Ireland. (signed) W. Law.

LETTER from the Chief Secretary for Ireland to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Sir, Dublin Castle, 26 October 1875.

WITH reference to your letter of the 7th May last, I am directed by the Lord Lieutenant to acquaint you, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, that it is found necessary (in consequence of its being a statutable office), 13 Vict. c. 18, sect. 32, and 17 & 18 Vict. c. 94, to fill up temporarily the office of the Clerk of the Writs, Appearances, and Seal, vacant by the death of Mr. McDougall, by the appointment of Mr. Teeling, the present first assistant in the office.

Enclosed is a copy of Mr. Teeling's letter to the Lord Chancellor, and I am to state that his Grace does not recommend that the actual salary of 800 l. per annum should be allowed to Mr. Teeling, but that their Lordships should make him an allowance of 300 l. a year during his tenure of the office (which will be abolished by the proposed Judicature Act), on the conditions stated in his letter to the Lord Chancellor.

I am, &c.

The Secretary, Treasury, London. (signed) M. E. Hicks Beach.

Enclosure in No. 2.

My Lord,

I HAVE had an opportunity afforded to me of reading so much of the Report of Messrs. Murray and Armstrong to your Lordship, in relation to the Consolidated Writ and Seal Office as refers to my being temporarily appointed clerk to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. William McDougall, and in the absence from this country of the Lord Chief Justice, I have respectfully to ask your Lordship that I may be appointed to the vacancy on the terms, and subject to the conditions of Messrs. Murray and Armstrong's Report, viz.: That I shall undertake the duties in consideration of being allowed the salary attached to the office, from the time of Mr. McDougall's death, in substitution for the salary to which I am entitled as first assistant, with the condition that I shall be subject to whatever changes the proposed Judicature legislation may impose; and further that I shall not claim from the date of such change, either in respect of future employment, allowance, or superannuation, in respect of salary in excess of that to which I am now entitled as first assistant.

I have, &c.

To the Right Honourable, The Lord Chancellor of Ireland, &c. &c. &c. (signed) John Teeling.

COPY of WARRANT appointing Mr. Teeling, Clerk of Writs &c.

By the Lord Lieutenant General and General Governor of Ireland, Abercorn.

BY virtue of the authority given to us by an Act passed in the 13th year of the reign of Her present Majesty, c. 18, we do hereby nominate and appoint John Teeling, Esq., to be Clerk of the Writs, Appearances, and Seal of Her Majesty's Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer in Ireland, in the place and stead of W. McDougall, Esq., deceased.

John Teeling Esq., to the Clerk of the Writs, Appearances, and Seal, Court of Queen's Bench, &c.

Given at Her Majesty's Castle of Dublin, this 26th day of October 1875.

By his Grace's command.

LETTER from the Treasury to the Chief Secretary for Ireland.

Sir, Treasury Chambers, 3 November 1875.

IN reply to your letter of the 26th ultimo, I am directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to request that you will inform his Grace the Lord Lieutenant that they are pleased to approve of the payment of an allowance of 300 l. a year to Mr. Teeling in addition to his present salary of 500 l. a year, so long as he holds the office of Clerk of the Writs, Appearances, and Seal, vacant by the death of Mr. McDougall, and which it has been found necessary, in consequence of its being a statutable office, to fill up temporarily pending future legislation.

In signifying this approval, I am to state that it is made subject to the conditions specified in Mr. Teeling's letter to the Lord Chancellor for Ireland, an extract from which was enclosed in your letter now under reply.

I am, &c.

The Chief Secretary for Ireland. (signed) C. W. Stronge.

— No. 6. —

CIRCULAR LETTER from the Treasury, addressed respectively to the Lord Chief Justices of the Court of Queen's Bench and Court of Common Pleas, and the Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer, Ireland.

My Lord, Treasury Chambers, 19 November 1875.

I AM directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to state that the attention of this Board has been drawn to the vacancy alleged to exist in the Consolidated Writs Office by the temporary appointment of Mr. Teeling to perform the duties of the clerkship of the Consolidated Writ Office vacant by the death of Mr. McDougall.

My Lords understand that under the impression that a vacancy will arise in the office by the promotion of the two officers junior to Mr. Teeling, it is the intention of the Masters to appoint as junior clerk, a son of Master Pigot.

My Lords have to observe that it was in the power of the Irish Government to have so filled the vacant office that no promotion would have been open to the subordinates, and consequently that no vacancy would have been open at the bottom of the office.

Looking to the intention to abolish the office under the Judicature Act of next Session, the Irish Government has forborne from exercising its full statutable rights, and has endeavoured to provide for the temporary requirements of the law without adding to the public expenditure.

My Lords trust that the judges will be able to co-operate with the Executive Government in this reduction of expenditure, and that they will discountenance the plea that the arrangement made with Mr. Teeling vacates the latter's place. Mr. Teeling continues to discharge his own duties as assistant Clerk of Writs, and retains his own salary of 500 l. per annum, but at the same time he is appointed to act as Clerk of Writs, and is to receive an acting allowance of 300 l. per annum as long as he discharges that duty in addition to his own.

A copy of the Report recently made on this office to the Lord Chancellor by Mr. Murray and Mr. Armstrong, has been before this Board. My Lords have to observe that the amount of work in the office is so slight, that the appointment of a junior clerk cannot be defended as necessary, and that, if a new appointment is made, it will not only be open to this general objection, but also to the special objection that it has been made and accepted with full notice of coming changes. Under such circumstances, my Lords would not feel at liberty to agree to propose to Parliament that, on abolition of the office, the holder of it should be compensated for his loss.

I am, &c.

The Lord Chief Justice, Court of Queen's Bench. (signed) R. R. W. Lingen.

— No. 6. —

LETTER from Lord Chief Justice of Ireland to the Treasury.

25 November 1875.
Chamber, Queen's Bench, Dublin.

THE Chief Justice of Ireland has to acknowledge the communication from the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury touching the vacancy in the Writs Office consequent on the appointment of Mr. Teeling to the office of Clerk of Writs in Ireland.

The Chief Justice has to acquaint their Lordships, that formerly the office of Clerk of Writs to the three Law Courts was in the gift, and the office itself under the control, of the three Chief Justices; but by Section 33 of 13 Vict. c. 18, the Judges were stripped of all power to appoint the Clerk of Writs, and the same section is so adroitly framed as to exclude the Judges from exercising any control over the appointment of any of the subordinates in the office from the passing of the Statute, which was cleverly drawn in order to divide the patronage between the Castle and the Masters, and oust the Chief Justices and Chief Baron from the control they ever should possess over the officers of their Courts. The Chief Justices and Chief Baron knew nothing of the appointment of Mr. Teeling; of course they were not consulted as to the necessity or expediency of the appointment under existing circumstances. At the request of the authorities they summoned Mr. Teeling, his subordinates, and the three Masters, to meet in the Chamber of the Chief Justice. Mr. Teeling then produced his appointment, absolute in the face of it, and in exact accordance with the statute. No evidence was given of any arrangement to qualify (if it could) the absolute appointment. Upon inquiry by the Judges they were satisfied Messrs. Bushe and Burke were efficient and capable as clerks, and so they were entitled to their promotion under the statute. The Chief Justice then read the communication addressed to him from the Castle and Treasury, and expressed his decided opinion that the vacancy in the junior clerkship should not be filled; in this the Master of the Queen's Bench agreed, and so the matter ended.

— No. 7. —

LETTER from the Irish Office to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Sir, Dublin Castle, 3 December 1875.

REFERRING to former correspondence on the subject, I am directed by the Lord Lieutenant to transmit to you the accompanying copy of a communication which has been received from the Lord Chief Justice of Ireland and the Lord Chief Baron, relative to recent appointments in the Consolidated Writs Office, and to request that you will lay the same before the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

I am, &c.

W. H. Smith, Esq., M.P., Treasury. (signed) T. H. Burke.

Enclosure in No. 7.

Queen's Bench.

THE Chief Justice and the Chief Baron have the honour to acquaint Sir Michael Hicks Beach that, in consequence of the communications addressed to them relative to the appointment in the Consolidated Writs Office, under the 33rd section of 13 Vict. c. 18, they, after conference with the Lord Chancellor, summoned before them Mr. Teeling, the two clerks in the Writs Office, Mr. Bushe and Mr. Burke, and the three Masters of the three Courts of Common Law.

The Chief Justice and Chief Baron, with the statute 13 Vict. before them, required Mr. Teeling to produce his appointment, if any, to the office of Clerk of the Writs in Ireland. Mr. Teeling at once produced his appointment, which being examined and compared with the 33rd section of the 13th Victoria, appeared to the Chief Justice and Chief Baron to be perfectly formal and complete, and unaffected by any condition. No evidence was offered to impair or qualify this nomination, nor to show it was any other than the thing it appeared on the face of it to be. The Chief Justice and Chief Baron were therefore obliged to decide that Mr. Teeling was regularly appointed to fill the vacant office of Clerk of the Writs. Consequent on this promotion under the statute, the Masters handed in their appointment of Mr. Bushe and Mr. Burke to the vacancies caused by the removal and appointment of Mr. Teeling.

Inquiry was then made by the Chief Justice and Chief Baron of Mr. Teeling, as head of the office, as to the ability, fitness, and efficiency of Messrs. Burke and Bushe as clerks in the Writ Office.

The answers of Mr. Teeling were highly satisfactory on these points; whereupon the Chief Justice and Chief Baron considered they had no alternative but to sign and approve of the appointments so made under the statute by the Masters.

Touching the vacancy thus caused in the junior clerkship, the Masters are granted by the statute the exclusive right to fill the same; and in this matter the Chief Justice and Chief Baron are deprived of all power of interference or control. This has been deliberately done. However, the Chief Justice read out the communications addressed to him from the Castle and the Treasury, and declared it to be his opinion that, under the circumstances, the vacancy in the junior clerkship should not be filled.

The Master of the Court of Queen's Bench then stated that, having heard the expression of the Chief Justice's opinion, he would not agree to any appointment to fill the vacant clerkship, and so the meeting ended.

LETTER from the Irish Office to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Sir, Dublin Castle, 27 November 1875.

I AM directed by the Lord Lieutenant to transmit to you, to be laid before the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, the accompanying copy of a correspondence respecting changes in the Consolidated Writ and Seal Office, consequent on the promotion of John Teeling, now Clerk of the Writs, Appearances, and Seal.

Enclosure 1, in No. 8.

My Lord, Dublin Castle, 10 November 1875.

REFERRING to the vacancy created by the appointment of Mr. John Teeling to the Office of Clerk of the Writs, Appearances, and Seal, I am directed by the Lord Lieutenant to state that in consequence of changes in the Writ Office contemplated by the Judicature Bill, it is desirable that no new interests should be created. His Grace, therefore, relies upon the assistance of your Lordship, and of the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas and the Lord Chief Baron, so far as is consistent with the existing Act of Parliament in attaining this object, and his Grace would suggest that your Lordships would confer with the Lord Chancellor on the subject.

I am, &c.

The Right Hon. (signed) M. E. Hicks Beach.
the Lord Chief Justice of Ireland.

Sir, Dublin Castle, 19 November 1875.

I AM directed to inform you that, from the information which the Government have received, they have reason to believe that a fourth officer (in the position of a junior clerk) is not required in the Law Writ Office; and that as it is their intention to propose legislation for the purpose of amalgamating the Law Writ Office with the same Office in Chancery, it is probable that the appointment of a fourth officer will very shortly become still more unnecessary than at present.

I have, therefore, to request that such appointment shall not be made, and to inform you that if it be made, the Government cannot consent to view such appointment as giving any claim to compensation upon the abolishing of the office by future legislation.

Enclosure 7, in No. 8.

Sir, Exchequer Office, 20 November 1875.

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 19th inst., requesting that the appointment of a junior clerk in the Law Writ Office should not be made, and informing me that the Government cannot consent to view such appointment as giving any claim to compensation upon the abolition of the office by future legislation.

Your letter was obviously written under the impression that a discretion exists in the Masters of the Common Law Courts as to the appointment in question. If I were of that opinion I should without hesitation act in accordance with the suggestion of the Government; but neither the Master of the Common Pleas nor myself entertain any doubt that the provision of the Statute 13 Vict. c. 18, s. 33, is mandatory upon us, and that we had no discretion as to the filling up the vacancy. This we have accordingly done by the appointment of my son, David Richard Pigot, one of the salaried writing clerks in the Court of Exchequer.

With respect to the question of compensation in the event of the future abolition of the office, I do not think it is one upon which I am called upon to express an opinion. My power and duty have determined on making this appointment, and I presume that the status and the rights of the person so appointed must in this, as in all other cases, be governed by the construction of the Acts of Parliament under which he holds, and by it alone.

Sir,

I BEG to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 20th instant, containing a communication from the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, declining to make provision in the next Estimates for the payment of my salary, and objecting to any provision for compensation in case of the abolition of the office which I hold.

I am advised that the office of junior clerk being held during good behaviour entitles its holder to the salary settled in pursuance of the "Process and Practice Act of 1850, until that right be destroyed by future legislation; and I therefore beg respectfully to remonstrate against the omission in the Estimates of the necessary provision for its payment.

LETTER from the Treasury to the Under Secretary of State for Ireland.

Sir, Treasury Chambers, 12 January 1876.

I AM directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 4th instant (19,690), and its Enclosure, and to acquaint you, for the information of his Grace the Lord Lieutenant, that my Lords have nothing to add to the decision relative to the situation held by Mr. D. R. Pigot in the Consolidated Office of Writs which was communicated to the Irish Government on the 17th ultimo.

I am, &c.

The Under Secretary of State for Ireland. (signed) Wm. Law.

— No. 14. —

LETTER from the Chief Secretary for Ireland to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Irish Office, Great Queen-street, S.W.,
Sir, 23 February 1876.

I am directed by the Lord Lieutenant to transmit to you, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, with reference to previous correspondence, the accompanying copies of a statement* and Enclosures on behalf of Mr. D. R. Pigot, junr., respecting the abolition of his appointment in the Law Writ Office in Ireland.

The papers in question have been forwarded merely with the view that their Lordships should have Master Pigot's statement before them; and I may add that his Grace has reason to believe that the Lord Chief Baron did not, as stated on page 7 of the pamphlet, "decline to concur with the view expressed by the Lord Chief Justice" on the subject; but that, considering he had no jurisdiction in the matter, his Lordship stated that he should not be taken as expressing any official opinion in reference to it, and confined himself to exercising the sole jurisdiction conferred upon him, viz., of approval of the gentlemen (Messrs. Bushe and Burke) recommended for promotion.

I am, &c.
The Secretary, Treasury. (signed) M. E. Hicks Beach.

* This refers to a printed statement which it is believed has been generally circulated on behalf of Mr. Pigot, junior.

WRIT OFFICE (IRELAND).

CORRESPONDENCE with regard to the Appointment to VACANCIES in the CONSOLIDATED WRIT OFFICE in Ireland, since October 1875.

HYPOTHEC (SCOTLAND).

RETURN to an Address of the Honourable The House of Commons, dated 7 May 1877;—for,

"RETURN (in continuation of, and in the form of, Parliamentary Paper, No. 50, of Session 1874), showing, since the passing of Act 30 & 31 Vict. c. 42, Number of PETITIONS for SEQUESTRATIONS for RENT for AGRICULTURAL SUBJECTS; the Numbers on which Warrants for Sale had been granted; Numbers of Cases classified under Rates entered in Return, No. 152, of Session 1869, but distinguishing the Cases in which the Amount of Rent exceeded £. 100, so as to show the Cases for £. 200, £. 300, £. 400, and £. 500, and upwards; and also distinguishing the Sequestration Cases for Rent in Arrears from those for Security of Rent to become due in the several Counties, and in all Scotland:"

"And, similar RETURN of SEQUESTRATIONS for URBAN SUBJECTS, classified as above, for the Period extending from the passing of the Act 30 & 31 Vict. c. 42."

Note.—The particulars given in this Return apply to the period from 3rd July 1873 to 7th May 1877, the dates of the Orders for the former and present Returns respectively.

It will be observed that several of the headings are different from those in the previous Return.

The heading "Petitions for Sequestration, &c.," has been altered to "Cases of Sequestration, &c." Cases of Sequestration begin by Petition in the Sheriff Ordinary Court only, while in the Small Debt and Debts Recovery Courts they proceed on a Summons; and as it was ascertained that doubts existed among several of the returning officials as to whether the latter class of cases should be included in the Return, the alteration referred to was made in this heading.

In the heading of the second column of figures the phrase "Warrants for Sale were Granted," in the former Return, has been altered to "Warrants for Sale were Executed." Of the warrants for sale granted in the Small Debts Courts, many are never extracted, and of those extracted it is understood that only a small number are carried into execution; and as it is believed that the entries in the column in question were intended to represent cases in which the sequestrations were actually carried to extremities, the heading was altered to bring out this information.

Besides the two classes of sequestrations specified in the Order, there exists a third; viz., where the sequestration is both for rent past due and to become due. Information as to this class of cases, although not asked for, was given by many of the returning officials in the previous Return; but as it is now thought best to give the exact number of each of the three classes of cases, a column applicable to the third-mentioned class has, with that view, been added to the Return.

It may be further mentioned that the three classes of sequestrations referred to have, in the present Return, been included in the classification of values, as this is presumed to be in accordance with the meaning of the Order.

In consequence of the alterations in the headings, &c. referred to, which, in order to procure uniform and reliable information, it was considered expedient to make, the total amounts in the present Return cannot be added to those of the previous Return, and the latter are therefore stated separately.

Crown Office, Edinburgh, August 1877.

JAMES AULDJO JAMIESON, Crown Agent.

RETURN of the various DIETS, in Detail, which have been in use for CIVIL and for MILITARY PRISONERS at MILLBANK and at other CIVIL PRISONS in which Military are received, since 1870 inclusive.

ENGLAND AND WALES.

MILLBANK PRISON.

MEMORANDUM.

MILLBANK was made a place of reception for military prisoners in 1870, in fulfilment of a recommendation of the Royal Commission on "Courts Martial and Military Punishments," to the effect that a central prison for military offenders should be established to replace the military prisons; that it should be conducted on the system applicable to civil prisons under the Act of 1865, and placed under the superintendence of the Directors of Convict Prisons, of whom the Chairman is Inspector General of Military Prisons.

The rules for discipline, framed in accordance with this recommendation, and after considering and comparing those of several of the best county and borough prisons, were approved by the Secretary of State for War and the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

There are two scales of diet for prisoners which have been sanctioned by the Government, both drawn up by the same committee of medical men, and designed to be adapted to the length of sentences, and the employment of two distinct classes of prisoners (see Returns to House of Commons, dated 5th July and 20th May 1864), one for the use of prisoners under sentence of penal servitude (ranging from five years to life), the other for prisoners under sentences of imprisonment which do not exceed two years, and of which half are under three months, and the great majority are under six months.

The fuller diet of the two was the scale adopted for the soldiers sent under sentences of imprisonment to Millbank, viz., that which was framed by the above-mentioned committee for men under sentences of penal servitude in Millbank, viz.:—

Breakfast:—¾ pint cocoa, containing ½ oz. cocoa; 2 oz. milk; ½ oz. molasses; bread.

Dinner:—

Sunday:—4 oz. cheese; bread.

Monday:—4 oz. mutton, with its own liquor, flavoured with ½ oz. onions, and thickened with bread left on previous day; 1 lb. of potatoes;* bread.

Tuesday:—1 pint soup, containing 8 oz. shin of beef, 1 oz. pearl barley, 3 oz. fresh vegetables, including onions, 1 lb. potatoes;* bread.

Wednesday:—4 oz. mutton, with its own liquor, flavoured and thickened as above; 1 lb. potatoes;* bread.

Thursday:—1 lb. suet pudding, containing 1½ oz. suet, 8 oz. flour, 6½ oz. water, 1 lb. potatoes; bread.

Friday:—4 oz. beef, with its own liquor, flavoured and thickened as above; 1 lb. potatoes; bread.*

Saturday:—4 oz. beef, with its own liquor, flavoured and thickened as above; 1 lb. potatoes;* bread.

* 1 oz. of flour each and ¾ oz. of pepper per cent. to be added to Millbank and Pentonville diet.

Supper:—1 pint gruel, containing 2 oz. oatmeal, ½ oz. molasses, 2 oz. milk; bread.

Bread, per week - - - -	148 oz.
„ each week day - - -	20 „
„ each Sunday - - -	28 „

PENAL CLASS DIET—MALES.

Breakfast:—1 pint porridge, containing 4 oz. oatmeal, ½ pint milk; bread.

Dinner:—1 lb. potatoes; bread.

Supper:—1 lb. porridge, as at breakfast; bread.

Bread, per week - - - -	140 oz.
„ per day - - - -	20 „

PUNISHMENT DIET—MALES.

1 lb. bread per diem, with water.
Penal Class diet every fourth day, when the diet is continued beyond three days.

In 1871 reports were received from Aldershot to the effect that the punishment of soldiers at Millbank was not severe enough. In January 1872, a similar report was also received from one of the battalions of the Guards, and in May 1872 the complaints from Aldershot were renewed, 12 regiments or corps out of 17 assigning the superiority of the diet as one of the reasons for the imprisonment in Millbank failing as a deterrent.

Early in 1872, therefore, the medical officer of Millbank was requested to consider the subject, and suggest a scale of diet which should be free from the objection referred to. While anxious to suggest a diet which would attain the object in view, he was equally anxious that the amount of nutriment supplied to the soldiers at hard labour should not be, in any important degree, reduced, and he accordingly recommended for men at hard labour the adoption of the diet of Class 4 in the scale recommended by the Diet Committee of 1864, for prisoners in county and borough gaols, as being almost equally nutritious with that they were then receiving, and more monotonous. The diet of Class 3 was recommended for prisoners at light labour. Both of these diets were adopted in August 1872 (see page 6).

The diet above referred to as having been recommended by the committee on the diet in county and borough gaols is given on next page; and it will be observed that the portion of it adopted for soldiers in Millbank gives, on the whole, a considerably better diet than that laid down for civil prisoners under short sentences similar to those of military prisoners, for the low diets of the early parts of the sentence are entirely omitted, and the soldier commenced at once on the higher diets.

This scale of diet having been submitted to the War Department, and approved after consultation with the Army Medical Department, was sanctioned by the Secretary of State for the Home Department on the 8th of April 1872.

In connection with the change, special and careful attention was directed to the effect of the diet and discipline on the prisoners individually.

They were, therefore, continually inspected and weighed, and, in any case in which it was found desirable, the discipline was lightened and the diet increased.

The general result was that prisoners at hard labour received in the aggregate even more food than when on the same diet as the convicts.

The tendency to lose in weight, always very marked, and a notable deterioration in the physique of the military prisoners received, led in 1875 to a further consideration of the question as to the sufficiency or otherwise of the diet, and in October of that year a slight increase was made, experimentally, in the quantity of bread and potatoes, the diet of Class 5 of the county and borough gaols taking the place of the diet of Class 4 (see page 6). The practice of issuing bread freely in special cases was also continued.

In 1876 a committee was assembled by the War Department to consider the question of diets of military and provost prisons, and the opportunity was thought favourable for drawing up a scale which should also be applicable to military prisoners in Millbank.

The committee recommended that the following scale (see page 5) should be introduced and experimentally tried for six months before being finally adopted.

This diet has been approved for military and provost prisons pending further instructions, and it has also been adopted, both for civil and military prisoners at Millbank; those who are employed at crank and similar labour being placed on Class 4 diet, and those who are employed on work requiring less physical exertion being placed on Class 3.

The oatmeal gruel, when made in quantities exceeding 50 pints, to contain 1½ oz. of oatmeal per pint, and 2 oz. per pint when made in less quantities. The gruel on alternate days to be sweetened with ¾ oz. of molasses or sugar, and seasoned with salt.

(b.) Half-a-pint of tea must contain ⅛ oz. of tea, ½ oz. of sugar, and 1 oz. of milk.

(c.) An equal quantity of potato soup, or pease soup, or barley milk, may (with the limitations hereafter specified) be substituted for the barley broth. Two pints of potato potato soup must contain 1 lb. of potatoes (instead of 4 oz. of barley), with the same ingredients in other respects as two pints of barley broth. Two pints of peas soup must contain 4½ oz. of peas, the other ingredients being the same as in the barley broth and potato soup, except that the quantity of vegetables may be smaller by about one-half. Two pints of barley milk must contain 4 oz. of barley (boiled in water till it is soft, and the water partly boiled away), with half-a-pint of good skimmed sweet milk and a little salt, the rest of the quantity being made up with water.

(d.) Fish and barley broth may be substituted the one for the other, at the rate of 6 oz. of fish for one pint of broth.

(e.) Barley-bannocks, or bread made of wheat and oatmeal mixed, may be substituted for wheaten bread on one day of each week, and oat cake on another day; the oat cake to be of the same weight as the wheaten bread, but the barley bannock must contain a weight of meal equal to the weight of wheaten bread, making the bannock itself somewhat heavier. The wheaten bread may be made of second flour or over-heads.

(f.) Potatoes, whether in their ordinary form, or made into soup, must not be given for dinner more than twice each week; but they may be given for supper as often as may be convenient, provided that they be not so given on the days on which the prisoners have potatoes or potato soup for dinner.

(g.) Either fresh-skimmed milk, or butter milk, may be used.

(h.) Salt must be given with each meal.

(i.) Especial care must be taken to preserve the potatoes, so that they shall not vegetate or be injured in any way. No potatoes must be used unless they are quite sound, and it is recommended that, as a general rule, potatoes be not used from the end of April until the ensuing autumn.

(j.) If, from any unforeseen emergency, milk should not be obtainable, there may be substituted for it a like quantity of treacle water at the rate of 1½ oz. of treacle to a pint of water; but when this substitute is used there must be added to the dietary in the proper table 6 oz. of ox heads in the broth or soup, or 4 oz. of cheese.

(n.) The hours of meal throughout the year shall be as follows:—Breakfast at half-past seven in the morning, dinner at one in the afternoon, and supper at seven in the evening.

Buttermilk may be used instead of new milk once a day, either at breakfast or dinner, if the surgeon approve of the change; the equivalents to be for every half-pint of new milk one pint of butter milk.

With the sanction of the Lord Lieutenant, the Inspectors General, in the autumn of 1872, issued the following Circular, authorising an alternative diet in lieu of potatoes in districts where that esculent is scarce or of inferior quality:—

> "In consequence of numerous representations having been made to us respecting the difficulty of supplying a substitute for potatoes in the gaol dietary, owing to the failure of that esculent, we have obtained the opinion and advice of the two existing members of the medical committee appointed by the Lord Lieutenant in 1868 to inquire into the question of dietary in the county and borough gaols in Ireland, and they have recommended the use of good bread on three days in each week in lieu of potatoes, to be taken with vegetable soup made according to the form laid down in Circular No. 235, with the addition of pea meal or bruised peas; and His Excellency having approved of this alternative dietary for gaols in districts where potatoes are scarce or of inferior quality, we have to request that you will give directions for its use accordingly."

The foregoing is now the only scale of ordinary dietary which can be legally used in the county and borough gaols and bridewells of Ireland.

RETURN of the various DIETS which have b in use for CIVIL and for MILITARY PRISON at MILLBANK and at other CIVIL PRISONS which Military are received, since 1870 in RETURN of all Cases in each GAOL and HOUSE OF CORRECTION in Scotland in which CORPORAL PUNISHMENT has been inflicted, by Orders or Sentence of the Visiting Justices, or by Courts of Assize and Quarterly Sessions, since the 14th day of April 1871 to the present time: and of the Names of the Visiting Justices or Presiding Judge in each Case by whose Orders any Corporal Punishment has been inflicted in each Gaol and House of Correction; specifying the Offence for which such Punishment was given, and the Number of Lashes, and how and by what Instrument applied; the Age and Name of each Person punished; the Date of each Warrant or Order; and the Names of the Justices, Surgeons, and other Persons present when the Punishment was inflicted.

Note.—By the Act 25 Vict. c. 18, s. 2, corporal punishment cannot be inflicted in Scotland upon any offender above 16 years of age. No corporal punishment was inflicted by order of any authority or sentence of any Court corresponding to the Visiting Justice and Quarterly Sessions in England referred to in the Order of the House; and in only two instances, which occurred in Dundee, was corporal punishment inflicted by sentence of a Court of Assize (Sheriff's Jury Court). Although it is doubtful how far the Order was intended to apply to Scotland, a full return is given of all cases in which corporal punishment was inflicted during the period in question, and the sentences, other than the two referred to above, were pronounced by Sheriff (summary), Justice of Peace, Burgh, and Police Courts.
